

THE LUCUBRATIONS
OF

Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq;

Revised and Corrected by the Author.

VOL. III.

Οὐ χρή μαρτυρεῖν οὐδενός τινες.
Homer.

AT THE L O N D O N .

Printed for E. and R. NUTT, J. KNAFTON,
J. and B. SPRINT, D. MIDWINTON,
J. TONSON, R. GOSLING, W. and J.
INNYS, J. OSBORN and T. LONGMAN,
R. ROBINSON, and B. MOTTE.

M D C C X X V I I I .

THE LUCUBRATIONS
OF VAN BUREN & ELL

BY J. H. BROWN, BOSTON.

1830.

PRINTED FOR THE AUTHOR BY J. H. BROWN, BOSTON.

POEM

BY J. H. BROWN, BOSTON.
1830.
TO JOHN H. GOULD, W. M. H.
T. F. NICHOLS, & CO., BOSTON.
JOHN L. O. BROWN & CO., BOSTON.
J. H. BROWN, BOSTON.
PRINTED FOR THE AUTHOR BY J. H. BROWN, BOSTON.

vii

A T T R I B U T E S
TO THE APPROPRIATION RIGHT. HONOURABLE
WILLIAM,
Lord COWPER, BARON of WINGHAM.

My Lord,

AFTER having long celebrated the superior Graces and Excellencies, among Men, in an imaginary Character, I do my self the Honour to shew

A 2

my Veneration for transcendent Merit under my own Name, in this Address to your Lordship. The just Application of those high Accomplishments of which you are Master, has been an Advantage to all your Fellow-Subjects; and it is from the common Obligation you have laid upon all the World, that I, though a private Man, can pretend to be affected with, or take the Liberty to acknowledge, your great Talents and publick Virtues.

IT gives a pleasant Prospect to your Friends, that is to say, to the Friends of your Country, that you have passed through the Highest Offices, at an Age when others usually do but form to themselves the Hopes of them. They may expect to see you in the House of Lords as many Years as you were ascending to it. It is our common Good, that your your admirable Eloquence can now no longer be employed, but in the Expression of your own Sentiments and Judgment. The skilful Pleader is now for ever chang'd into the just Judge; which later Character your Lordship exerts with so prevailing an Impartiality, that you win the Approbation even of those who dissent from you, and you always obtain Favour, because you are never moved by it.

The Dedication.

7

THIS gives you a certain Dignity peculiar to your present Situation, and makes the Equity, even of a Lord High Chancellor, appear but a Degree towards the Magnanimity of a Peer of Great Britain.

FORGIVE me, My Lord, when I cannot conceal from you, that I shall never hereafter behold you, but I shall behold you, as lately, defending defending the Brave, and the Unfortunate.

WHEN we attend to your Lordship, ingaged in a Discourse, we cannot but reflect upon the many Requisites which the vain-glorious Speakers of Antiquity have demanded in a Man who is to excel in Oration; I say, My Lord, when we reflect upon the Precepts by viewing the Example, though there is no Excellence proposed by those Rhetoricians wanting, the whole Art seems to be resolved into that one Motive of Speaking, Sincerity in the Intention. The graceful Manner, the apt Gesture, and the assumed Concern, are impotent Helps to Persuasion, in Comparison of the honest Countenance of him who utters what he really means. From hence it is, that all the Beauties which others attain with Labour,

are

The Dedication.

vi

are in your Lordship but the natural Effects of the Heart, that distinguishes.

IT is this noble Simplicity which makes you surpass Mankind in the Faculties, wherein Mankind are distinguished from other Creatures, Reason and Speech.

IF these Gifts were communicated to all Men in Proportion to the Truth and Ardent of their Hearts, I should speak of you with the same Force as you express your self on any other Subject. But I resist my present Impulse, as agreeable as it is to me; though, indeed, had I any Pretensions to a Fame of this Kind, I should, above all other Themes, attempt a Panegyrick upon my Lord Cowper: For the only sure Way to a Reputation for Eloquence, in an Age where-

in

viii The Dedication.

in that perfect Orator lives, is to choose an Argument, upon which he himself must of Necessity be silent.
I am,

My LORD,

Your Lordship's

Most Devoted,

Most Obedient, and

Most Humble Servant,

Richard Steele.

THE TATLER.

THE LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM JOURNAL.

THE LONDON AND BIRMINGHAM JOURNAL.

THE TATLER.

BY Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq;

VOL. III.

— Nosum interrognit Vitium & Calamitas,
Ut neque spectari, neque cognoscere posseris!
Ita Populus Studio stupidus in Funambulo Animam occupat. — Ter. de Heeyra.

No. 113, Tuesday, Jan. 3. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, January 2.

WENT on Friday last to the Opera, and was surprized to find a thin House at so noble an Entertainment, till I heard that the Tumbler was not to make his Appearance that Night. For my own Part, I was fully satisfied with the sight of an Actor, who, by size

VOL. III.

B

Grace

MRS

Grace and Propriety of his Action and Gesture, does Honour to an humane Figure, as much as the other vilifies and degrades it. Every one will easily imagine I mean Signior Nicolini, who sets off the Character he bears in an Opera by his Action, as much as he does the Words of it by his Voice. Every Limb, and every Finger, contributes to the Part he acts, insomuch that a deaf Man might go along with him in the Sense of it. There is scarce a beautiful Posture in an old Statue which he does not plant himself in, as the different Circumstances of the Story give Occasion for it. He performs the most ordinary Action in a Manner suitable to the Greatness of his Character, and shews the Prince even in the giving of a Letter, or the Dispatching of a Message. Our best Actors are somewhat at a Loss to support themselves with proper Gesture, as they move from any considerable Distance to the Front of the Stage; but I have seen the Person of whom I am now speaking, enter alone at the remotest Part of it, and advance from it with such Greatness of Air and Mien, as seemed to fill the Stage, and at the same Time commanded the Attention of the Audience with the Majesty of his Appearance. But notwithstanding the Dignity and Elegance of this Entertainment, I find for some Nights past, that Panchinello has robbed this Gentleman of the greater Part of his Female Spectators. The Truth of it is, I find it so very hard a Task to keep that Sex under any Manner of Government, that I have often resolved to give them over entirely, and leave them to their own Invention. I was in Hopes, that I had brought them to some Order, and was employing my Thoughts on the Reformation of their Petticoats, when on a sudden I received Information from all Parts, that they run gadding after a Puppet-Show. I know very well, that what I here say, will be thought by some malicious Persons to flow from Envy to Mr. Powell; for which Reason I shall set the late Dispute between us in a true Light. Mr. Powell and I had some Difference about four Months ago, which we managed by Way of Letter, as learned Men ought to do; and I was very well contented to bear such Sarcasms as he was pleased to throw upon me, and answered them with the same Freedom. In the Midst of this our Misunderstanding and Correspondence, I happened to give the World an Account of the Order of Esquires; upon which Mr. Powell was so disingenuous, as to make one of his Puppets (I wish I knew which of them it was) declare by Way of Prologue, That one Isaac Bickerstaff, a pretended Esquire, had wrote a scurilous Piece to the Dishonour of that Rank of Men; and then, with more Art than Honesty, concluded, That all the Esquires in the Pit were abused by his Antagonist as much as he was. This publick Accusation made all the Esquires of that County, and several of other Parts, my professed Enemies. I do not in the least question, but that he will proceed in his Hostilities; and I am informed, That Part of his Design in coming up to Town, was to carry the War into my own Quarters. I do therefore solemnly declare, (notwithstanding that I am a great Lover of Art and Ingenuity) that if I hear he opens any of his People's Mouth against me, I shall not fail to write a Critick upon his whole Performance; for I must confess, that I have naturally so strong a Desire of Praise, that I cannot bear Reproach, though from a Piece of Timber. As for Punch, who takes all Opportunities of bespattering me, I know very well his Original, and have been assured by the Joyner who put him together, that he was in long Dispute with himself, whether he should turn him into several Pegs and Utensils, or make him the Man he is. The same Person confessed to me, that he had once actually laid aside his Head for a Nut-cracker.

cracker. As for his scolding Wife, (however she may value herself at present) it is very well known, that she is but a Piece of a Crab-tree. This Artificer further whispered in my Ear, that all his Courtiers and Nobles were taken out of a Quickset-Hedge not far from Islington; and that Dr. Faustus himself, who is now so great a Conjurer, is supposed to have learned his whole Art from an old Woman in that Neighbourhood, whom he long served in the Figure of a Broom-staff.

BUT perhaps it may look trivial to insist so much upon Mens Persons; I shall therefore turn my Thoughts rather to examine their Behaviour, and consider, whether the several Parts are written up to that Character which Mr. Powell piques himself upon, of an able and judicious Dramatist. I have for this Purpose provided my self with the Works of above twenty French Criticks, and shall examine, (by the Rules which they have laid down upon the Art of the Stage) whether the Unity of Time, Place and Action, be rightly observed in any one of this celebrated Author's Productions; as also, whether in the Parts of his several Actors, and that of Punch in Particular, there is not sometimes an Impropriety of Sentiments, and an Impurity of Diction.

White's Chocolate house, January 2.

I came in here to-day at an Hour when only the Dead appear in Places of Resort and Gallantry, and saw hung up the Escutcheon of Sir Hamibal, a Gentleman who used to frequent this Place, and was taken up and interred by the Company of Upholders, as having been seen here at an unlicensed Hour. The Coat of the Deceased is, three Bools, and a Jack in a Green Field; the Crest, a Dice box, with the King of Clubs and Pam for Supporters. Some

Days

Days ago the Body was carried out of Town with great Pomp and Ceremony, in order to be buried with his Ancestors at the Peak. It is a Maxim in Morality, That we are to speak nothing but Truth of the Living, nothing but Good of the Dead. As I have carefully observed the First during his Life-time, I shall acquit my self as to the latter now he is deceased.

HE was knighted very young, not in the ordinary Form, but by the common Consent of Mankind.

HE was in his Person between round and square; in the Motion and Gesture of his Body he was unaffested and free, as not having too great a Respect for Superiors. He was in his Discourse bold and intrepid; and as every one has an Excellence as well as a Failing which distinguishes him from other Men, Eloquence was his predominant Quality, which he had to so great a Perfection, that it was easier to him to speak than to hold his Tongue. This sometimes exposed him to the Derision of Men who had much less Parts than himself; and indeed his great Volubility and inimitable Manner of Speaking, as well as the great Courage he shewed on those Occasions, did sometimes betray him into that Figure of Speech which is commonly distinguished by the Name of Gasconade. To mention no other, he professed in this very Place some few Days before he died, That he would be one of the Six that would undertake to assault me; for which Reason I have had his Figure upon my Wall till the Hour of his Death: And am resolved for the future to bury every one forthwith who I hear has an Intention to kill me.

SINCE I am upon the Subject of my Adversaries, I shall here publish a short Letter which I have received from a Well-wisher, and is as follows:

Sage SIR,

YOU cannot but know, there are many Scribblers and others who revile you and your Writings. It is wondered that you do not exert your self, and crush them at once. I am,

SIR,

(With great Respect)

Your most humble Admirer, and Disciple.

IN Answer to this, I shall act like my Predecessor Æsop, and give him a Fable instead of a Reply.

IT happened one Day, as a stout and honest Mastiff (that guarded the Village where he lived against Thieves and Robbers) was very gravely walking, with one of his Puppies by his Side, all the little Dogs in the Street gathered about him, and barked at him. The little Puppy was so offended at this Affront done to his Sire, that he asked him, Why he would not fall upon them, and tear them to Pieces? To which the Sire answered, with a great Composure of Mind, If there were no Curs, I should be no Mastiff.

— Pars minima est ipsa Puella sui. Ovid.

No 116. Thursday, January 5. 1709.

Sher-Lane, January 4.

THE Court being prepared for proceeding on the Cause of the Petticoat; I gave Orders to bring in a Criminal who was taken up as she went out of the Puppet-Show about three Nights ago, and was now standing in the Street with a great Concourse of People about her. Word was brought me, that she endeavoured twice or thrice to come in, but could not do it by reason of her Petticoat, which was too large for the Entrance of my House; though I had ordered both the Folding Doors to be thrown open for it's Reception. Upon this, I desired the Jury of Matrons, who stood at my right Hand, to inform themselves of her Condition, and know whether there were any private Reasons why she might not make her Appearance separate from her Petticoat. This was managed with great Discretion, and had such an Effect, that upon the Return of the Verdict from the Bench of Matrons, I issued out an Order forthwith, That the Criminal should be stripped of her Incumbrances, till she became little enough to enter my House. I had before given Directions for an Engine of several Legs, that could contract or open it self like the Top of an Umbrello, in order to place the Petticoat upon it, by which Means I might take a leisurely Survey of it, as it should appear in its proper Dimensions. This was all done accordingly; and forthwith, upon the Closing of the Engine, the Petticoat was brought into Court. I then directed the Machine to be set upon the Table, and dilated in such a Manner as to shew the Garment in its utmost Circumference; but my great Hall was too narrow for the Experiment; for before it was half unfolded, it descried so immoderate a Circle, that the lower Part of it brush'd upon my Face as I sat in my Chair of Judicature. I then enquired for the Person that belonged to the Petticoat; and to my great Surprise, was directed to a very beautiful young Damsel, with so pretty a Face and Shape, that I bid her come out of the Crowd, and seated her upon a little Crook at my left Hand. My pretty Maid, said I, Do you own your self to have been the Inhabitant of the Garment before us? The Girl I found had good Sense, and told me with a Smile, That notwithstanding it was her own Petticoat, she should be very glad to see an Example made of it; and that she wore it for no other Reason, but that she had a Mind to look as big and burly as other Persons of her Quality; That she had kept out of it as long as she could, and till she began to appear little in the Eyes of all her Acquaintance; That if she laid it aside, People would think she was not made like other Women. I always give great Allowances to the Fair Sex upon Account of the Fashion, and therefore was not displeased with the Defence of my pretty Criminal. I then ordered the Vest which stood before us to be drawn up by a Pully to the Top of my great Hall, and afterwards to be spread open by the Engine it was placed upon, in such a Manner, that it formed a very splendid and ample Canopy over our Heads, and covered the whole Court of Judicature with a Kind of Silken Rotunda; in its Form not unlike the Cupolo of St. Paul's. I enter'd upon the whole Cause with great Satisfaction as I sat under the Shadow of it.

THE Counsel for the Petticoat was now call'd in, and ordered to produce what they had to say against the popular Cry which was raised against it. They answered the Objections with great Strength and Solidity of Argument, and expatiated in very florid Harangues, which they did not fail to set off and furbelow (if I may be allowed the Metaphor) with many periodical Sentences and Turns of Oratory. The chief Arguments for their Client were taken, first, from the great Benefit that might arise to our Woollen Manufactory from this Invention, which was calculated as follows: The common Petticoat has not above four Yards in the Circumfecircumference; whereas this over our Heads had more in the Semi-diameter; so that by allowing it Twenty-four Yards in the Circumference, the Five Millions of Woollen Petticoats, which (according to Sir William Petty) supposing what ought to be supposed in all well-governed States, that all Petticoats are made of that Stuff, would amount to Thirty Millions of those of the ancient Mode. A prodigious Improvement of the woollen Trade! and what could not fail to sink the Power of France in a few Years.

TO introduce the second Argument, they begged leave to read a Petition of the Rope-Makers, wherein it was represented, That the Demand for Cords, and the Price of them, were much risen since this Fashion came up. At this, all the Company who were present, lifted up their Eyes into the Vault; and I must confess, we did discover many Traces of Cordage which were interwoven in the Stiffening of the Drapery.

A third Argument was founded upon a Petition of the Greenland Trade, which likewise represented the great Consumption of Whalebone which would be occasioned by the present Fashion, and the Benefit which would thereby accrue to that Branch of the British Trade.

TO conclude, they gently touched upon the Weight and Unwieldiness of the Garment, which they insinuated might be of great Use to preserve the Honour of Families.

THESE Arguments would have wrought very much upon me, (as I then told the Company in a long and elaborate Discourse) had I not considered the great and addirional Expence which such Fashions would bring upon Fathers and Husbands; and therefore by no Means to be thought of till some Years after a Peace. I further urged, that it would be a Prejudice to the Ladies themselves, who could never expect to have any Money in the Pocket, if they laid out so much on the Petticoat. To this I added, the great Temptation it might give to Virgins, of acting in Security like married Women, and by that Means give a Check to Matrimony, an Institution always encouraged by wise Societies.

AT the same Time, in Answer to the several Petitions produced on that Side, I shewed one subscribed by the Women of several Persons of Quality, humbly setting forth, That since the Introduction of this Mode, their respective Ladies had (instead of bestowing on them their cast Gowns), cut them into Shreds, and mixed them with the Cordage and Buckram, to compleat the Stiffening of their Under-Petticoats. For which, and sundry other Reasons, I pronounced the Petticoat a Forfeiture: But to shew that I did not make that Judgment for the Sake of filthy Lucre, I ordered it to be folded up, and sent it as a Present to a Widow Gentlewoman, who has Five Daughters, desiring she would make each of them a Petticoat out of it, and send me back the Remainder, which I design to cut into Stomachers, Caps, Facings of my Waistcoat-Sleeves, and other Garnitures suitable to my Age and Quality.

I would not be understood, that (while I discard this monstrous Invention) I am an Enemy to the proper Ornaments of the Fair Sex. On the contrary, as the Hand of Nature has pour'd on them such a Profusion of Charms and Graces, and sent them into the World more amiable and finished than the rest of her Works; so I would have them bestow upon themselves all the additional Beauties that Art can supply them with, provided it does not interfere with, disguise or pervert, those of Nature.

I consider Woman as a beautiful romantick Animal, that may be adorned with Furs and Feathers, Pearls and Diamonds, Ores und Silks. The Lynx shall cast its Skin at her Feet to make her a Tipper; the Peacock, Parrat and Swan, 16.

the
of by
In-er-one s of
the La-east em
the ich,
the did thy tut has ach ck toes, nd listo he ones, nd
ld li-h, or k d
d et d
s

N^o 116. The TATLER.

11

Swan, shall pay Contributions to her Muff; the Sea shall be searched for Shells, and the Rocks for Gems; and every Part of Nature furnish out its Share towards the Embellishment of a Creature that is the most consummate Work of it. All this, I shall indulge them in; but as for the Petticoat I have been speaking of, I neither can, nor will allow it.

██

Durate, & vacuet rebus formate securitatis. Virg.

N^o 117. Saturday, Jan 7, 1710/11.

Sheer Lane, January 6.

WHEN I look into the Frame and Constitution of my own Mind, there is no Part of it which I observe with greater Satisfaction, than that Tenderness and Concern which it bears for the Good and Happiness of Mankind. My own Circumstances are indeed so narrow and scanty, that I should taste but very little Pleasure, could I receive it only from those Enjoyments which are in my own Possession; but by this great Tincture of Humanity, which I find in all my Thoughts and Reflections, I am happier than any single Person can be, with all the Wealth, Strength, Beauty and Success, that can be conferred upon a Mortal, if he only possesses such a Proportion of these Blessings as is vested in himself, and is his own private Property. By this Means, every Man that does himself any real Service, does me a Kindness, I come in for my Share in all the Good that happens to a Man of Merit and Virtue, and partage of many Gifts of Fortune and Power that I was never born to. There is nothing in particular in which I so much rejoice, as the Deliverance of good and generous Spirits out of Dangers, Difficulties and Distresses. And because the World does not supply Instances of this Kind to furnish out sufficient Entertainments for such an Humanity and Benevolence of Temper, I have ever delighted in reading the History of Ages past, which draws together into a narrow Compass the great Occurrences and Events that are but thinly sown in those Tracts of Time which lie within our own Knowledge and Observation. When I see the Life of a great Man, who has deserved well of his Country, after having struggled through all the Oppositions of Prejudice and Envy, breaking out with Lustre, and shining forth in all the Splendor of Success, I close my Book, and am an happy Man for a whole Evening.

11

BUT since in History, Events are of a mixed Nature, and often happen alike to the Worthless and the Deserving, insomuch that we frequently see a virtuous Man dying in the midst of Disappointments and Calamities, and the Vicious ending their Days in Prosperity and Peace; I love to amuse my self with the Accounts I meet with in fabulous Histories and Fictions: For in this Kind of Writings we have always the Pleasure of seeing Vice punished, and Virtue rewarded: Indeed, were we able to view a Man in the whole Circle of his Existence, we should have the Satisfaction of seeing it close with Happiness or Misery, according to his proper Merit: But though our View of him is interrupted by Death before the finishing of his Adventures, (if I may so speak) we may be sure that the Conclusion and Catastrophe is altogether suitable to his Behaviour. On the contrary, the whole Being of a Man, considered as an Hero, or a Knight-Errant, is comprehended within the Limits of a Poem or Romance, and therefore always ends to our Satisfaction; so that Inventions of of this Kind are like Food and Exercise to a gross-natured Disposition, which they please and gratify at the same Time that they nourish and strengthen. The greater the Affliction is in which we see our Favourites in these Relations engaged, the greater is the Pleasure we take in seeing them relieved.

AMONG the many feigned Histories which I have met with in my Reading, there is none in which the Hero's Perplexity is greater, and the winding out of it more difficult, than that in a French Author whose Name I have forgot. It so happens, that the Hero's Mistress was the Sister of his most intimate Friend, who for certain Reasons was given out to be dead, while he was preparing to leave his Country in Quest of Adventures. The Hero having heard of his Friend's Death, immediately repaired to his Mistress, to condole with her, and comfort her. Upon his Arrival in her Garden, he discovered at a Distance a Man clasped in her Arms, and embraced with the most endearing Tenderness. What should he do? It did not consist with the Gentleness of a Knight-Errant either to kill his Mistress, or the Man whom she was pleased to favour. At the same Time, it would have spoiled a Romance, should he have laid violent Hands on himself. In short, he immediately entered upon his Adventures; and after a long Series of Exploits, found out by Degrees, that the Person he saw in his Mistress's Arms was her own Brother, taking Leave of her before he left his Country, and the Embrace she gave him nothing else but the affectionate Farewell of a Sister: So that he had at once the Two greatest Satisfactions that could enter into the Heart of Man, in finding his Friend alive, whom he thought dead; and his Mistress faithful, whom he had believed inconstant.

THERE are indeed some Disasters so very fatal, that it is impossible for any Accidents to rectify rectify them. Of this Kind was that of poor Lucretia; and yet we see Ovid has found an Expedient even in this Case. He describes a beautiful and royal Virgin walking on the Sea-shore, where she was discovered by Neptune, and violated after a long and unsuccessful Importunity. To mitigate her Sorrow, he offers her whatever she would wish for. Never certainly was the Wit of Woman more puzzled in finding out a Stratagem to retrieve her Honour. Had she desired to be changed into a Stock or Stone, a Beast, Fish or Fowl, she would have been a Loser by it: Or had she desired to have been made a Sea-Nymph, or a Goddess, her Immortality would but have perpetuated her Disgrace. Give me therefore, said she, such a Shape as may make me incapable of suffering again the like Calamity, or of being reproached for what I have already suffered. To be short, she was turned into a Man, and by that only Means avoided the Danger and Imputation she so much dreaded.

I was once my self in Agonies of Grief that are unutterable, and in so great a Distraction of Mind that I thought my self even out of the Possibility of receiving Comfort. The Occasion was as follows: When I was a Youth in a Part of the Army which was then quartered at Dover, I fell in Love with an agreeable young Woman, of a good Family in those Parts, and had the Satisfaction of seeing my Addresses kindly received, which occasioned the Perplexity I am going to relate.

WE were in a calm Evening diverting our selves upon the Top of the Cliff with the Prospect of the Sea, and trifling away the Time in such little Fondnesses as are most ridiculous to People in Business, and most agreeable to those in Love.

IN the midst of these our innocent Endearments, she snatched a Paper of Verses out of my

my Hand, and ran away with them. I was following her, when on a sudden the Ground, tho' at a considerable Distance from the Verge of the Precipice, sunk under her, and threw her down from so prodigious an Height upon such a Range of Rocks, as would have dashed her into Ten Thousand Pieces, had her Body been made of Adamant. It is much easier for my Reader to imagine my State of Mind upon such an Occasion, than for me to express it. I said to my self, it is not in the Power of Heaven to relieve me! When I awaked, equally transported and astonished, to see my self drawn out of an Affliction which the very Moment before appeared to me altogether inextricable.

THE Impressions of Grief and Horror were so lively on this Occasion, that while they lasted, they made me more miserable than I was at the real Death of this beloved Person, (which happened a few Months after, at a Time when the Match between us was concluded) inasmuch as the imaginary Death was untimely, and I my self in a Sort an Accessary, whereas her real Decease had at least these Alleviations, of being natural and inevitable.

THE Memory of the Dream I have related, still dwells so strongly upon me, that I can never read the Description of Dyer-Cliff in Shakespear's Tragedy of King Lear, without a fresh Sense of my Escape. The Prospect from that Place is drawn with such proper Incidents, that whoever can read it without growing giddy, must have a good Head, or a very bad one.

Come on, Sir, here's the Place; stand still! How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to cast one's Eyes so low?
The Crows and Coughs that wing the Midway Air, Show scarce as gross as Beetles. Half way down, Hangs one that gathers Sam'ire. Dreadful Trade!
Methinks he seems no bigger than his Head.
The Fishermen that walk upon the Beach,

Appear

Appear like Mice, and yond' tall anchoring Bark Diminish'd to her Boat, her Boat; a Buoy Almost too small for Sight. The murmuring Surge (That on the unnumber'd idle Pebble beats)
 Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more, Left my Brain turn.

Lusisti satis, edisti satis, atque bibisti, Tempus abire tibi. ————— Hor.

No. 118. Tuesday, Jan. 10. 1709.

From my own Apartment, January 8.

I THOUGHT to have given over my Prosecution of the Dead for this Season, having by me many other Projects for the Reformation of Mankind; but I have received so many Complaints from such different Hands, that I shall disoblige Multitudes of my Correspondents, if I do not take Notice of them. Some of the Deceased, who I thought had been laid quietly in their Graves, are such Hobgoblins in publick Assemblies, that I must be forced to deal with them as Euander did with his triple-lived Adversary, who, according to Virgil, was forced to kill him thrice over, before he could dispatch him.

Ter Letbo sternendus erat. —————

I am likewise informed, That several Wives of my dead Men have, since the Decese of their Husbands, been seen in many publick Places without Mourning, or Regard to common Decency.

I am further advised, That several of the Defunct, contrary to the Woollen Act, presume to dress themselves in Lace, Embroidery, Silks, Muslins, and other Ornaments forbidden to Persons in their Condition. These and other the like Informations moving me thereunto, I must desire, for Distinction-sake, and to conclude this Subject for ever, that when any of these posthumous Persons appear, or are spoken of, that their Wives may be called Widows; their Houses, Sepulchres; their Chariots, Hearses; and their Garments, Flanel: On which Condition, they shall be allowed all the Conveniencies that dead Men can in Reason desire.

AS I was writing this Morning on this Subject, I received the following Letter:

Mr. Bickerstaff, From the Banks of Styx.
 I MUST confess I treated you very scurrilously when you first sent me hither; but you have dispated such Multitudes after me to keep me in Countenance, that I am very well reconciled both to you and my Condition. We live very lovingly together; for as Death makes us all equal, it makes us very much delight in one another's Company. Our Time passes away much after the same Manner as it did when we were among you; Eating, Drinking and Sleeping, are our chief Diversions. Our Quid Nuncs between whiles go to a Coffee-house, where they have several warm Liquors made of the Waters of Lethe, with very good Poppy-Tea. We that are the sprightly Genius's of the Place, refresh our selves frequently with a Bottle of Mum, and tell Stories till we fall asleep. You would do well to send among us Mr. Dodwell's Book against the Immortality of the Soul, which would be of great Consolation to our whole Fraternity, who would be very glad to find that they are dead for good and all, and would in particular make me rest for ever,

Yours,

John Partridge.

P. S. Sir James is just arriv'd here in good Health.

THE

THE foregoing Letter was the more pleasing to me, because I perceived some little Symptoms in it of a Resuscitation ; and having lately seen the Predictions of this Author, which are written in a true Protestant Spirit of Prophecy, and a particular Zeal against the French King, I have some Thoughts of sending for him from the Banks of Styx, and reinstating him in his own House, at the Sign of the Globe, in Salisbury street. For the Encouragement of him and others, I shall offer to their Consideration a Letter which gives me an Account of the Revival of one of their Brethren.

SIR,

Dec. 31.

I HAVE perused your Tatler of this Day, and have wept over it with great Pleasure : I wish you would be more frequent in your Family-Pieces. For as I consider you under the Notion of a great Designer, I think these are not your least valuable Performances. I am glad to find you have given over your Face-painting for some Time, because I think you have employed your self more in Grotesque Figures than in Beauties ; for which Reason I would rather see you work upon History-Pieces, than on single Portraits. Your several Draughts of dead Men appear to me as Pictures of Still-Life, and have done great Good in the Place where I live. The Squire of a neighbouring Village, who had been a long Time in the Number of Non-Entities, is entirely recovered by them. For these several Years past, there was not an Hare in the County that could be at rest for him ; and I think, the greatest Exploit he ever boasted of, was, That when he was High Sheriff of the County, he hunted a Fox so far, that he could not follow him any fursher by the Lawe of the Land. All the Hours he spent at Home, were in swelling himself with October, and rehearsing the Wonders he did in the Field. Upon reading your Papers, he has sold his Dogs, shook off his dead Companions, looked into his Estate, got the Multiplication Table by Heart, Heart, paid his Tithes, and intends to take upon him the Office of Church-warden next Year. I wish the same Success with your other Patients, and am, &c.

Disto, January 9.

WHEN I came Home this Evening, a very right middle-aged Woman presented to me the following Petition :

To the Worshipful Isaac Bickerstaff Esq; Censor of Great Britain.

The humble Petition of Penelope Prim, Widow;

She weeb,

THAT your Petitioner was bred a Clear-starcher and Sempstress, and for many Years worked to the Exchange, and to several Aldermens Wives, Lawyers Clerks, and Merchants Apprentices.

THAT thro' the Scarcity caused by Regraters of Bread-corn, (of which Starch is made) and the Gentries immoderate frequenting the Opera's, the Ladies, to save Charges, have their Heads washed at Home, and the Beaus put out their Linen to common Landresses. So that your Petitioner hath little or no Work at her Trade: For want of which she is reduced to such Necessity, that she and her Seven Fatherless Children must inevitably perish, unless relieved by your Worship.

THAT your Petitioner is informed, That in Contempt of your Judgment pronounced on Tuesday the 3d Instant against the new-fashioned Petticoat, or old-fashioned Fardingal, the Ladies design to go on in that Dress. And since it is presumed your Worship will not suppress them by Force, your Petitioner humbly desires you would order, That Ruffs may be added to the Dress; and that she may be heard by

‘ by her Counsel, who has assured your Petitioner, he has such cogent Reasons to offer to your Court, that Ruffs and Fardingals are inseparable ; that he questions not but two Thirds of the greatest Beauties about Town, will have Cambrick Collars on their Necks before the End of Easter-Term next. He further says, That the Design of our Great Grandmothers in this Petticoat, was to appear much bigger than the Life ; for which Reason, they had false Shoulder Blades, like Wings, and the Ruff above-mentioned, to make their upper and lower Parts of their Bodies appear proportionable ; whereas the Figure of a Woman in the present Dress, bears (as he calls it) the Figure of a Cone, which (as he advises) is the same with that of an Extinguisher, with a little Knob at the upper End, and widening downward, till it ends in a Basis of a most enormous Circumference.

‘ YOUR Petitioner therefore most humbly prays, that you would restore the Ruff to the Fardingal, which in their Nature ought to be as inseparable as the Two Hungarian Twins.

And your Petitioner shall ever pray.

I have examined into the Allegations of this Petition, and find, by several ancient Pictures of my own Predecessors, particularly that of Dame Deborah Bickerstaff, my Great Grandmother, that the Ruff and Fardingal are made use of as absolutely necessary to preserve the Symmetry of the Figure ; and Mrs. Pyramid Bickerstaff her second Sister, is recorded in our Family-Book, with some Observations to her Disadvantage, as the first Female of our House that discovered, to any besides her Nurse and her Husband, an Inch below her Chin, or above her Instep. This convinces me of the Reasonableness of Mrs. Prim’s Demand ; and therefore I shall not allow the reviving of any one Part of that 118.

Peri-offer are two own, ecks fur-anduch hey
and up-near Wo-it)
) is with ing nor-bly
the be ay.
his res of mode he aid aisat er ere-I
of
at

No 118. The TATLER.

21

that ancient Mode, except the whole is complied with. Mrs. Prim is therefore hereby impowered to carry Home Ruffs to such as she shall see in the above-mentioned Petticoats, and require Payment on Demand.

Mr. Bickerstaff has under Consideration the Offer from the Corporation of Colchester of Four Hundred Pounds per Annum, to be paid Quarterly, provided that all his dead Persons shall be obliged to wear the Bays of that Place.

In Tenui Labor. — Virg.

No 119. Thursday, January 12. 1709.

Sheer Lane, January 12.

I HAVE lately applied my self with much Satisfaction to the curious Discoveries that have been made by the Help of Microscopes, as they are related by Authors of our own and other Nations. There is a great deal of Pleasure in prying into this World of Wonders, which Nature has laid out of Sight, and seems industrious to conceal from us. Philosophy had ranged over all the visible Creation, and began to want Objects for her Enquiries, when the present Age, by the Invention of Glasses, opened a new and inexhaustible Magazine of Rarities, more wonderful and amazing than any of those, which astonished our Forefathers. I was Yesterday amusing my self with Speculations of this Kind, and reflecting upon Myriads of Animals that swim in those little Seas of Juices that are contained in the several Vessels of an humane Body. While my Mind was thus filled with that secret Wonder

2017

Wonder and Delight, I could not but look upon my self as in an Act of Devotion, and am very well pleased with the Thoughts of the great Heathen Anatomist, who calls his Description of the Parts of an humane Body, An Hymn to the Supreme Being. The Reading of the Day produced in my Imagination an agreeable Morning's Dream, if I may call it such; for I am still in Doubt whether it passed in my sleeping or waking Thoughts. However it was, I fancied that my good Genius stood at my Bed's Head, and entertained me with the following Discourse; for upon my Rising, it dwelt so strongly upon me, that I writ down the Substance of it, if not the very Words.

IF (said he) you can be so transported with those Productions of Nature which are discovered to you by those artificial Eyes that are the Works of humane Invention, how great will your Surprize be, when you shall have it in your Power to model your own Eye as you please, and adapt it to the Bulk of Objects, which, with all these Helps, are by infinite Degrees too minute for your Perception. We who are unbodied Spirits can sharpen our Sight to what Degree we think fit, and make the least Work of the Creation distinct and visible. This gives us such Ideas as cannot possibly enter into your present Conceptions. There is not the least Particle of Matter which may not furnish one of us sufficient Employment for a whole Eternity. We can still divide it, and still open it, and still discover new Wonders of Providence, as we look into a different Texture of its Parts, and meet with Beds of Vegetables, Minerals and Metallick Mixtures, and several Kinds of Animals that lie hid, and as it were lost in such an endless Fund of Matter. I find you are surprized at this Discourse; but as your Reason tells you there are infinite Parts in the smallest Portion of Matter; it will likewise con-since you, that there is as great a Variety of secrets, and as much Room for Discoveries in Particle no bigger than the Point of a Pin, as in the Globe of the whole Earth. Your Microscopes bring to Sight Shoals of living Creatures in a Spoonful of Vinegar; but we who can distinguish them in their different Magnitudes, see among them several huge Lettahans that terrify the little Fry of Animals about them, and take their Pastime as in an Ocean, or the great Deep. I could not but smile at this Part of his Relation, and told him, I doubted not but he could give me the History of several invisible Giants, accompanied with their respective Dwarfs, in case that any of these little Beings are of an humane Shape. You may assure your self (said he) that we see in these little Animals different Natures, Instincts and Modes of Life, which correspond to what you observe in Creatures of bigger Dimensions. We descry Millions of Species subsisted on a green Leaf, which your Glasses represent only in Crowds and Swarms. What appears to your Eye but as Hair or Down rising on the Surface of it, we find to be Woods and Forests, inhabited by Beasts of Prey, that are as dreadful in those their little Haunts, as Lions and Tigers in the Deserts of Libya. I was much delighted with his Discourse, and could not forbear telling him, That I should be wonderfully pleased, to see a natural History of Imperceptibles, containing a true Account of such Vegetables and Animals as grow and live out of Sight. Such Disquisitions (answered he) are very suitable to reasonable Creatures; and you may be sure, there are many curious Spirits among us who employ themselves in such Amusements. For as our Hands, and all our Senses, may be formed to what Degree of Strength and Delicacy we please, in the same Manner as our Sight, we can make what Experiments we are inclined to, how small soever the Matter be in which we make make them. I have been present at the Dissection of a Mite, and have seen the Skeleton of a Flea. I have been shown a Forest of numberless Trees, which has been picked out of an Acorn. Your Microscope can shew you in it a compleat Oak in Miniature; and could you search all your Organs as we do, you might pluck an Acorn from this little Oak, which contains another Tree; and so proceed from Tree to Tree, as long as you would think fit to continue your Disquisitions. It is almost impossible (added he) to talk of Things so remote from common Life, and the ordinary Notions which Mankind receive from blunt and gross Organs of Sense, without appearing extravagant and ridiculous. You have often seen a Dog opened, to observe the Circulation of the Blood, or make any other useful Enquiry; and yet would be tempted to laugh if I should tell you, that a Circle of much greater Philosophers than any of the Royal Society were present at the cutting up of one of those little Animals which we find in the Blue of a Plum: That was ty'd down alive before them, and that they observed the Palpitations of the Heart, the Course of the Blood, the Working of the Muscles, and the Convulsions in the several Limbs, with great Accuracy and Improvement. I must confess, said I, for my own Part, I go along with you in all your Discoveries with great Pleasure; but it is certain, they are too fine for the Gross of Mankind, who are more struck with the Description of every Thing that is great and bulky. Accordingly we find the best Judge of humane Nature setting forth his Wisdom, not in the Formation of these minute Animals, (though indeed no less wonderful than the other) but in that of the Leviathan and Behemoth, the Horse and the Crocodile. Your Observation (said he) is very just; and I must acknowledge for my own Part, that although it is with much Delight that I see the Traces of Providence dence in these Instances, I still take greater Pleasure in considering the Works of the Creation in their Immensity, than in their Minuteness. For this Reason, I rejoice when I strengthen my Sight so as to make it pierce into the most remote Spaces, and take a View of those Heavely Bodies which lie out of the Reach of human Eyes, though assisted by Telescopes. What you look upon as one confused White in the Milky-Way, appears to me a long Tract of Heavens, distinguished by Stars that are ranged in proper Figures and Constellations. While you are admiring the Sky in a Starry Night, I am entertain'd with a Variety of Worlds and Suns placed one above another, and rising up to such an immense Distance, that no created Eye can see an End of them.

THE latter Part of his Discourse flung me into such an Astonishment, that he had been silent for some Time before I took Notice of it, when on a sudden I started up and drew my Curtains, to look if any one was near me, but saw no Body, and cannot tell to this Moment whether it was my good Genius or a Dream that left me.

librid I abxstodito labitissim. siw beth — Velut Silvis, ubi nullum 145199017 hec vos Palantis Error certe de Teamite dellit; qui bat satis hie sinistorum; sic dextorum abit. Hor.

INSTEAD of considering my present Passion or Character in any one Set of Men, my Thoughts were last Night employed no

Contemplation of human Life in general; and truly it appears to me, that the whole Species are hurried on by the same Desires, and engaged in the same Pursuits, according to the different Stages and Divisions of Life. Youth is devoted to Lust, middle Age to Ambition, old Age to Avarice. These are the Three general Motives and Principles of Action both in good and bad Men; though it must be acknowledged, that they change their Names, and refine their Natures, according to the Temper of the Person whom they direct and animate. For with the Good, Lust becomes virtuous Love; Ambition, true Honour; and Avarice, the Care of Poverty. This Scheme of Thought amused me very agreeably till I retired to Rest, and afterwards formed it self into a pleasing and regular Vision, which I shall describe in all its Circumstances, as the Objects presented themselves, whether in a serious or ridiculous Manner.

I dreamed that I was in a Wood of so prodigious an Extent, and cut into such a Variety of Walks and Alleys, that all Mankind were lost and bewildered in it. After having wandered up and down some Time, I came into the Centre of it, which opened into a wide Plain, filled with Multitudes of both Sexes. I here discovered Three great Roads, very wide and long, that led into Three different Parts of the Forest. On a sudden the whole Multitude broke into Three Parts, according to their different Ages, and marched in their respective Bodies into the Three great Roads that lay before them. As I had a Mind to know how each of these Roads terminated, and whither it would lead those who passed through them, I joined my self with the Assembly that were in the Flower and Vigour of their Age, and called themselves, The Flour of Looms. I found to my great Surprise, that several old Men besides my self had intruded into this agreeable Company ; as I had before observed, there were some young Men who had united themselves to the Band of Misers, and were walking up the Path of Avarice ; though both made a very ridiculous Figure, and were as much laughed at by those they joined, as by those they forsook. The Walk which we marched up, for Thickness of Shades, Embroidery of Flowers, and Melody of Birds, with the distant Purling of Streams, and Falls of Water, was so wonderfully delightful, that it charmed our Senses, and intoxicated our Minds with Pleasure. We had not been long here, before every Man singled out some Woman to whom he offered his Addresses, and professed himself a Lover ; when on a sudden we perceived this delicious Walk to grow more narrow as we advanced in it, till it ended in many intricate Thickets, Mazes and Labyrinths that were so mixed with Roses and Brambles, Brakes of Thorns, and Beds of Flowers, rocky Paths and pleasing Grotto's, that it was hard to say, whether it gave greater Delight or Perplexity to those who travelled in it.

IT was here that the Lovers began to be eager in their Pursuits. Some of their Mistresses, who only seemed to retire for the Sake of Form and Decency, led them into Plantations that were disposed into regular Walks ; where, after they had wheeled about in some Turnings and Windings, they suffered themselves to be overtaken, and gave their Hands to those who pursued them. Others withdrew from their Followers into little Wildernesses, where there were so many Paths interwoven with each other in so much Confusion and Irregularity, that several of the Lovers quitted the Pursuit, or broke their Hearts in the Chace. It was sometimes very odd to see a Man pursuing a fine Woman that was following another, whose Eye was fixed upon a Fourth, that had her own Game in View in some other

Quarter of the Wilderness. I could not but observe two Things in this Place, which I thought very particular; That several Persons who stood only at the End of the Avenues, and cast a careless Eye upon the Nymphs during their whole Flight, often catched them, when those who press'd them the most warmly through all their Turns and Doubles, were wholly unsuccessful; And that some of my own Age, who were at first looked upon with Aversion and Contempt, by being well acquainted with the Wilderness, and by dodging their Women in the particular Corners and Allies of it, catched them in their Arms, and took them from those whom they really loved and admired. There was a particular Grove, which was called, The Labyrinth of Coquets; where many were enticed to the Chase, but few returned with Purchase. It was pleasant enough to see a celebrated Beauty, by smiling upon one, casting a Glance upon another, beckoning to a third, and adapting her Charms and Graces to the several Follies of those that admired her, drawing into the Labyrinth a whole Pack of Lovers, that lost themselves in the Maze, and never could find their Way out of it. However, it was some Satisfaction to me, to see many of the Fair Ones who had thus deluded their Followers, and left them among the Intricacies of the Labyrinth, obliged when they came out of it, to surrender to the first Partner that offered himself. I now had crossed over all the difficult and perplexed Passages that seemed to bound our Walk, when on the other Side of them I saw the same great Road running on a little Way, till it was terminated by two beautiful Temples. I stood here for some Time, and saw most of the Multitude who had been dispersed amongst the Thickets, coming out two by two, and marching up in Pairs towards the Temples that stood before us. The Structure on the Right Hand was (as I afterwards found) consecrated secerated to virtuous Love, and could not be entered but by such as received a Ring, or some other Token, from a Person who was placed as a Guard at the Gate of it. He wore a Garland of Roses and Mertles on his Head, and on his Shoulders a Robe like an Imperial Mantle, white and unspotted all over, excepting only, that where it was clasped at his Breast, therel were two golden Turtle-Doves that buttoned it by their Bills, which were wrought in Rubies. He was called by the Name of Hymen, and was seated near the Entrance of the Temple, in a delicious Bower, made up of several Trees, that were embraced by Woodbines, Jessamines, and Amaranths, which were as so many Emblems of Marriage, and Ornaments to the Trunks that supported them. As I was single and unaccompanied, I was not permitted to enter the Temple, and for that Reason am a Stranger to all the Mysteries that were performed in it. I had however the Curiosity to observe how the several Couples that entered were disposed of; which was after the following Manner. There were two great Gates on the Backside of the Edifice, at which the whole Crowd was let out. At one of these Gates were two Women, extremely beautiful, tho' in a different Kind, the one having a very careful and composed Air, the other a Sort of Smile and ineffable Sweetness in her Countenance. The Name of the first was Discretion, of the other Complacency. All who came out of this Gate, and put themselves under the Direction of these two Sisters, were immediately conducted by them into Gardens, Groves and Meadows, which abounded in Delights, and were furnished with every Thing that could make them the proper Seats of Happiness. The second Gate of this Temple let out all the Couples that were unhappily married, who each out linked together by Chains, which each of them strove to break, but could not. Several of these were such as had never been acquainted with each other before they met in the great Walk, or had been too well acquainted in the Thicket. The Entrance to this Gate was posseſ'd by three Sisters, who joined themselves with these Wretches, and occasioned most of their Miseries. The youngest of the Sisters was known by the Name of Levity, who with the Innocence of a Virgin, had the Dress and Behaviour of a Harlot. The Name of the second was Contention, who bore on her Right Arm a Muff made of the Skin of a Porcupine; and on her Left carried a little Lap-Dog, that barked and snapped at every one that passed by her.

THE eldest of the Sisters, who seemed to have an haughty and imperious Air, was always accompanied with a tawny Cupid, who generally marched before her with a little Mace on his Shoulder, the End of which was fashioned into the Horns of a Stag. Her garments were yellow and her Complexion pale. Her Eyes were piercing, but had odd Casts in them, and that particular Distemper, which makes Persons who are troubled with it, see Objects double. Upon Enquiry, I was informed that her Name was Jealousy.

HAVING finished my Observations upon this Temple, and its Votaries, I repaired to that which stood on the Left Hand, and was called, The Temple of Lust. The Front of it was raised on Corinthian Pillars, with all the meretricious Ornaments that accompany that Order; whereas that of the other was composed of the chaste and Matron-like Ionic. The Sides of it were adorned with several grotesque Figures of Goats, Sparrows, Heathen Gods, Satyrs, and Monsters made up of half Man half Beast. The Gates were unguarded, and open to all that had a Mind to enter. Upon my going in, I found the Windows were blinded, and let in only a kind of Twilight, that served to discover a prodigious

Number

Number of dark Corners and Apartments, into which the whole Temple was divided. I was here stunned with a mixed Noise of Clamour and Jollity: On one Side of me I heard Singing and Dancing; on the other, Brawls and clashing of Swords. In short, I was so little pleased with the Place, that I was going out of it; but found I could not return by the Gate where I entered, which was barred against all that were come in, with Bolts of Iron, and Locks of Adamant. There was no going back from this Temple through the Paths of Pleasure which led to it: All who passed through the Ceremonies of the Place, went out at an iron Wicket, which was kept by a dreadful Giant called Remorse, that held a Scourge of Scorpions in his Hand, and drove them into the only Outlet from that Temple. This was a Passage so rugged, so uneven, and choked with so many Thorns and Briars, that it was a melancholy Spectacle to behold the Pains and Difficulties which both Sexes suffered who walked through it. The Men, though in the Prime of their Youth, appeared weak and infeeble with old Age: The Women wrung their Hands, and tore their Hair; and several lost their Limbs before they could extricate themselves out of the Perplexities of the Path in which they were engaged. The remaining Part of this Vision, and the Adventures I met with in the two great Roads of Ambition and Avarice, must be the Subject of another Paper.

ADVERTISEMENT.

I have this Morning received the following Letter from the famous Mr. Thomas Doggett.

SIR, on Monday next will be acted for my Benefit,
On the Comedy of Love for Love. If you will do me the Honour to appear there, I will publish on the Bills, That it is to be performed at the Request of Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq; and question not but it will bring me as great an Audience, as ever was at the House since the Morocco Ambassador was there. I am,

(With the greatest Respect)

Your most Obedient, and

Most Humble Servant,

To whom ever you will addres^s me, not Thomas Dogget,

BEING naturally an Encourager of Wit, as well as bound to it in the Quality of Censor, I returned the following Answer.

Mr. Dogget,

I AM very well pleased with the Choice you have made of so excellent a Play, and have always looked upon you as the best of Comedians; I shall therefore come in between the first and second Act, and remain in the Right-Hand Box over the Pit till the End of the fourth, provided you take Care that every Thing be rightly prepared for my Reception.

—Similis tibi, Cynthia, vel tibi cuius

Turbavit nitidus extinctus passer ocellos. Juv.

N^o 121. Tuesday, January 17. 1709.

From my own Apartment, Jan. 16.

I WAS recollecting the Remainder of my Vision, when my Maid came to me, and told me, there was a Gentlewoman below who seemed to be in great Trouble, and pressed very much to see me. When it lay in my Power to remove the Distress of an unhappy Person, I thought thought I should very ill employ my Time in attending Matters of Speculation, and therefore desired the Lady would walk in. When she entered, I saw her Eyes full of Tears. However her Grief was not so great as to make her omit Rules; for she was very long and exact in her Civilities, which gave me Time to view and consider her. Her Clothes were very rich, but tarnished; and her Words very fine, but ill-applied. These Distinctions made me without Hesitation (though I had never seen her before) ask her, if her Lady had any Commands for me? She then began to weep afresh, and with many broken Sighs told me, That their Family was in very great Affliction — I beseeched her to compose herself, for that I might possibly be capable of assisting them — She then cast her Eye upon my little Dog, and was again transported with too much Passion to proceed; but with much ado, she at last gave me to understand, That Cupid, her Lady's Lap-Dog, was dangerously ill, and in so bad a Condition, that her Lady neither saw Company, nor went abroad, for which Reason she did not come herself to consult me; that as I had mentioned with great Affection my own Dog, (here she courted, and looking first at the Cur, and then on me, said, indeed I had Reason, for he was very pretty) her Lady sent to me rather than to any other Doctor, and hoped I would not laugh at her Sorrow, but send her my Advice. I must confess, I had some Indignation to find my self treated like something below a Farrier; yet, well knowing, that the best, as well as most consider Way, of dealing with a Woman, is to let her see the Absurdity of them, I proceeded accordingly: Pray, Madam, said I, can you give me any methodical Account of this Illness, and how Cupid was first taken? Sir (said she) we have a little ignorant Country Girl who is kept to tend tend him: She was recommended to our Family by one, that my Lady never saw but once, at a Visit; and you know, Persons of Quality are always inclined to Strangers; for I could have helped her to a Cousin of my own, but —— Good Madam (said I) you neglect the Account of the sick Body, while you are complaining of this Girl. No, no, Sir (said she) begging your Pardon: But it is the general Fault of Physicians, they are so in haste, that they never hear out the Case. I say, this silly Girl, after washing Cupid, let him stand half an Hour in the Window without his Collar, where he catched Cold, and in an Hour after began to bark very hoarse. He had however a pretty good Night, and we hoped the Danger was over; but for these two Nights last past, neither he nor my Lady have slept a Wink. Has he (said I) taken any Thing? No (said she) but my Lady says, he shall take any Thing that you prescribe, provided you do not make Use of Jesuits Powder, or the Cold Bath. Poor Cupid (continued she) has always been phthisical, and as he lies under something like a Chin-Cough, we are afraid it will end in a Consumption. I then asked her if she had brought any of his Water to shew me. Upon this, she stared me in the Face, and said, I am afraid, Mr. Bickerstaff, you are not serious; but if you have any Receipt that is proper on this Occasion, pray let us have it; for my Mistress is not to be comforted. Upon this, I paused a little without returning any Answer, and after some short Silence, I proceeded in the following Manner: I have consider'd the Nature of the Distemper, and the Constitution of the Patient, and by the best Observation that I can make on both, I think it is safest to put him into a Course of Kitchen Physick. In the mean time, to remove his Hoarseness, it will be the most natural Way to make Cupid his own Drug-gist; for which Reason, I shall prescribe to him,

three

three Mornings successively, as much Powder as will lie on a Groat, of that noble Remedy which the Apothecaries call Album Grana. Upon hearing this Advice, the young Woman smiled, as if she knew how ridiculous an Errand she had been employed in; and indeed I found by the Sequel of her Disburse, that she was an arch Baggage, and of bad Characters that is frequent enough in Persons of her Employment, who are so used to conform themselves in every Thing to the Humours and Passions of their Mistresses, that they sacrifice Superiority of Sense to Superiority of Condition, and are insensibly betrayed into the Passions and Prejudices of those whom they serve, without giving themselves Leave to consider, that they are extravagant and ridiculous. However, I thought it very natural, when her Eyes were thus open, to see her give a new Turn to her Discourse, and from sympathizing with her Mistress in her Follies, to fall a railing at her. You cannot imagine, said she, Mr. Bickstaff, what a Life she makes us lead for the Sake of this little ugly Cur. If he dies, we are the most unhappy Family in Town. She chanced to lose a Parrot last Year, which, to tell you truly, brought me into her Service; for she turned off her Woman upon it, who had lived with her ten Years, because she neglected to give him Water, though every one of the Family says, she was as innocent of the Bird's Death, as the Babe that is unborn. Nay, she told me this very Moment, That if Captain should die, she would send the poor innocent Welsh Lewis telling you of, to Bradwell, and have this Milk Woman tried for her Life at the Old Bailey, for putting Water into his Milk. In short, she talketh like any distracted Creature.

SINCE it is so, young Woman (said I) I will by no Means let you offend her, by staying on this Message longer than is absolutely necessary, and so forced her out.

WHILE

WHILE I am studying to curb those Evils and Distresses that are necessary or natural to human Life, I find my Task growing upon me, since by these accidental Cares, and acquired Calamities, (if I may so call them) my Patients contract Distempers to which their Constitution is of it self a Stranger. But this is an Evil I have for many Years remarked in the fair Sex; and as they are by Nature very much formed for Affection and Dalliance, I have observed, That when by too obstinate a Cruelty, or any other Means, they have disappointed themselves of the proper Objects of Love, as Husbands, or Children, such Virgins have exactly at such a Year, grown fond of Lap-Dogs, Purrats, or other Animals. I know at this Time a celebrated Toast, whom I allow to be one of the most agreeable of her Sex, that in the Presence of her Admirers, will give a Torrent of Kisses to her Cat, any one of which a Christian would be glad of. I do not at the same Time deny, but there are as great Enormities of this Kind committed by our Sex as theirs. A Roman Emperor had so very great an Esteem for an Horse of his, that he had Thoughts of making him a Consul; and several Moderns of that Rank of Men whom we call Country Squires, won't scruple to kill their Hounds before all the World, and declare in the Presence of their Wives, that they had rather salute a Favourite of the Pack, than the fairest Woman in England. These voluntary Friendships between Animals of different Species, seem to arise from Instinct; for which Reason, I have always looked upon the mutual Good-will between the Squire and the Hound, to be of the same Nature with that between the Lion and the Jackall.

THE only Extravagance of this Kind which appears to me excusable, is one that grew out of an Excess of Gratitude, which I have somewhere met with in the Life of a Turkish Emperor.

His Horse had brought him safe out of a Field of Battel, and from the Pursuit of a victorious Enemy. As a Reward for such his good and faithful Service, his Master built him a Stable of Marble, shod him with Gold, fed him in an Ivory Manger, and made him a Rack of Silver. He annexed to the Stable several Fields and Meadows, Lakes, and running Streams. At the same Time he provided for him a Seraglio of Mares, the most beautiful that could be found in the whole Ottoman Empire. To these were added a suitable Train of Domesticks, consisting of Grooms, Farriers, Rubbers, &c. accommodated with proper Liveries and Pensions. In short, nothing was omitted that could contribute to the Ease and Happiness of his Life who had preserved the Emperor's

By reason of the extreme Cold, and the Changeableness of the Weather, I have been prevailed upon to allow the free Use of the Bedding, till the 20th of February next ensuing.

Cur in Theatrum, Cate scire, amissi? Marti N^o 122. Thursday, Jan. 19. 1709.

From my own Apartment, January 18.

IFIND it is thought necessary, that I (who have taken upon me to censure the Irregularities of the Age) should give an Account of my own Actions when they appear doubtful, or subject to Misconstruction. My appearing at the Play on Monday last, is looked upon as a Step in my Conduct, which I ought to explain, that others may not be misled by my Example. It is true in Matter of Fact, I was present at the ingenious Entertainment of that Day, and placed my self in a Box which was prepared for me with great Civility and Distinction. It is said of Virgil, when he enter'd a Roman Theatre, where there were many thousands of Spectators present, That the whole Assembly rose up to do him Honour; a Respect which was never before paid to any but the Emperor. I must confess, That universal Clap, and other Testimonies of Applause, with which I was received at my first Appearance in the Theatre of Great Britain, gave me as sensible a Delight, as the abovementioned Reception could give to that immortal Poet. I should be ungrateful at the same Time, if I did not take this Opportunity of acknowledging the great Civilities that were shewn me by Mr. Thomas Dogget, who made his Compliments to me between the Acts, after a most ingenuous and discreet Manner; and at the same Time communicated to me, that the Company of Upholders desired to receive me at their Door at the End of the Hay-market, and to light me Home to my Lodgings. That Part of the Ceremony I forbade, and took particular Care during the whole Play to observe the Conduct of the Drama, and give no Offence by my own Behaviour. Here I think it will not be foreign to my Character, to lay down the proper Duties of an Audience, and what is incumbent upon each individual Spectator in publick Diversions of this Nature. Every one should on these Occasions shew his Attention, Understanding and Virtue. I would undertake to find out all the Persons of Sense and Breeding by the Effect of a single Sentence, and to distinguish a Gentleman as much by his Laugh, as his Bow. When we see the Footman and his Lord diverted by the same Jest, it very much turns to the Diminution of the one, or the Honour of the other. But though a Man's Quality may appear in his Understanding and Taste,

the

the Regard to Virtue ought to be the same in all Ranks and Conditions of Men, however they make a Profession of it under the Name of Honour, Religion, or Morality. When therefore we see any Thing diverting an Audience, either in Tragedy or Comedy, that strikes at the Duties of civil Life, or exposes what the best Men in all Ages have look'd upon as sacred and inviolable, it is the certain Sign of a profligate Race of Men, who are fallen from the Virtue of their Forefathers, and will be contemptible in the Eyes of their Posterity. For this Reason I took great Delight in seeing the generous and disinterested Passion of the Lovers in this Comedy, (which stood so many Trials, and was proved by such a Variety of diverting Incidents) received with an universal Approbation. This brings to my Mind a Passage in Cicero, which I could never read without being in Love with the Virtue of a Roman Audience. He there describes the Shouts and Applauses which the People gave to the Persons who acted the Parts of Pilades and Orestes, in the noblest Occasion that a Poet could invent to shew Friendship in Perfection. One of them had forfeited his Life by an Action which he had committed; and as they stood in Judgment before the Tyrant, each of them strove who should be the Criminal, that he might save the Life of his Friend. Amidst the Vehemence of each asserting himself to be the Offender, the Roman Audience gave a Thunder of Applause, and by that Means, as the Author hints, approved in others what they would have done themselves on the like Occasion. Methinks, a People of so much Virtue were deservedly placed at the Head of Mankind: But alas! Pleasures of this Nature are not frequently to be met with on the English Stage.

THE Athenians, at a Time when they were the most polite, as well as the most powerful Government in the World, made the Care of the Stage one of the chief Parts of the Administration: And I must confess, I am astonished at the Spirit of Virtue which appeared in that People upon some Expressions in a Scene of a famous Tragedy; an Account of which we have in one of Seneca's Epistles. A covetous Person is represented speaking the common Sentiments of all who are possessed with that Vice in the following Soliloquy, which I have translated literally.

*L E T me be called a base Man, so I am called a sick one. If a Man is rich, who asks if he is good?
The Question is, How much we have, not from whence, or by what Means, we have it. Every one has so much Merit, as he has Wealth. For my own Part, let me be rich, O ye Gods! or let me die. The Man dies happily, who dies increasing his Treasure. There is more Pleasure in the Possession of Wealth, than in that of Parents, Children, Wife or Friends.*

THE Audience were very much provoked by the first Words of this Speech; but when the Actor came to the Close of it, they could bear no longer. In short, the whole Assembly rose up at once in the greatest Fury, with a Design to pluck him off the Stage, and brand the Work it self with Infamy. In the Midst of the Tumult, the Author came out from behind the Scenes, begging the Audience to be composed for a little while, and they should see the tragical End which this Wretch should come to immediately. The Promise of Punishment appeased the People, who sat with great Attention and Pleasure to see an Example made of so odious a Criminal. It is with Shame and Concern that I speak it; but I every much question, whether it is possible to make a Speech so impious as to raise such a laudable Horror and Indignation in a modern Audience. It is very natural for an Author to make Ostentation of his Reading, as it is for an old Man to tell Stories; for which Reason

on I must beg the Reader will excuse me, if or once indulge my self in both these Inclinations. We see the Attention, Judgment and Virtue of a whole Audience, in the foregoing Instances. If we would imitate the Behaviour of single Spectator, let us reflect upon that of Socrates, in a Particular which gives me as great an Idea of that extraordinary Man, as any Circumstance of his Life; or what is more, of his Death. This venerable Person often frequented the Theatre, which brought a great many thither, out of a Desire to see him. On which Occasion it is recorded of him, That he sometimes stood to make himself the more conspicuous, and to satisfie the Curiosity of the Beholders. He was one Day present at the first Representation of a Tragedy of Euripides, who was his intimate Friend, and whom he is said to have assisted in several of his Plays. In the Midst of the Tragedy, which had met with very great Success, there chanc'd to be a Line that seemed to encourage Vice and Immorality. badorum ody. binding. to
THIS was no sooner spoken, but Socrates to rise from his Seat, and without any Regard to his Affection for his Friend, or to the Success of the Play, shewed himself displeased at what was said, and walked out of the Assembly. In que-tion not but the Reader will be curios to know what the Line was that gave this Divine Hethen so much Offence. If my Memory fails me not, it was in the Part of Hippolitus, who when he is pressed by an Oath, which he had taken to keep Silence, returned for Answer, That he had taken the Oath with his Tongue, but not with his Heart. Had a Person of a vicious Character made such a Speech, it might have been allowed as a proper Representation of the Base-ness of his Thoughts: But such an Expression out of the Mouth of the virtuous Hippolitus, was giving a Sanction to Falshood, and establishing Perjury by a Maxim.

HAVING

HAVING got over all Interruptions, I have set apart to Morrow for the closing of my Vision.

Et quodcumque innotescit, nescit, ut ostendit
Qui nescivit, et nescire debet, ut ostendit.

*Audire atque togam jubeo componere, quisquis
Ambitione mala, aut argenti paller amore.*

Hor

No. 123. Saturday, Jan. 21. 1709.

From my own Apartment, Jan. 20.

A Continuation of the Vision.

WITH much Labour and Difficulty I passed thro' the first Part of my Vision; and recovered the Centre of the Wood, from whence I had the Prospect of the three great Roads. I here joined my self to the middle-aged Party of Mankind, who marched behind the Standard of Ambition. The great Road lay in a direct Line, and was terminated by the Temple of Virtue. It was planted on each Side with Laurels, which were intermixed with Marble Trophies, carved Pillars, and Statues of Lawgivers, Heroes, Statesmen, Philosophers, and Poets. The Persons who travelled up this great Path, were such whose Thoughts were bent upon doing eminent Services to Mankind, or promoting the Good of their Country. On each Side of this great Road were several Paths, that were also laid out in straight Lines, and ran parallel with it. These were most of them covered Walks, and received into them Men of retired Virtue, who proposed to themselves the same End of their Journey, tho' they chose to make it in Shade and Obscurity. The Edifices at the Extremity of the Walk were so contrived, that we could not see the Temple of Honour by reason of

the

he Temple of Virtue, which stood before it. At the Gates of this Temple we were met by the Goddess of it, who conducted us into that of Honour, which was joined to the other Edifice by a beautiful triumphal Arch; and had no other Entrance into it. When the Deity of the inner structure had received us, she presented us in a Body to a Figure that was placed over the high Alter, and was the Emblem of Eternity. She sat on a Globe in the midst of a Golden Zodiac, holding the Figure of a Sun in one Hand, and a Moon in the other. Her Head was veiled, and her Feet covered. Our Hearts glowed within us as we stood amidst the Sphere of Light which this Image cast on every Side of it.

HAVING seen all that happned to this Band of Adventurers, I repaired to another Pile of Building that stood within View of the Temple of Honour, and was raised in Imitation of it upon the very same Model; but at my Approach to it, I found that Stones were laid together without Mortar, and that the whole Fabrick stood upon so weak a Foundation that it shook with every Wind that blew. This was called the Temple of Vanity. The Goddess of it sat in the midst of a great many Tapers, that burned Day and Night, and made her appear much better than she would have done in open Day-light. Her whole Art was to shew her self more beautiful and majestick than she really was; For which Reason she had painted her Face, and wore a Cluster of false Jewels upon her Breast: But what I more particularly observed, was, the Breadth of her Petticoat, which was made altogether in the Fashion of a modern Fardingal. This Place was filled with Hypocrites, Pedants, Free-Thinkers, and prating Politicians, with a Rabble of those who have only Titles to make them great Men. Female Votaries crowded the Temple, choaked up the Avenues of

of it, and were more in Number than the Sand upon the Sea-shore. I made it my Business in my Return towards that Part of the Wood from whence I first set out, to observe the Walks which led to this Temple; for I met in several who had begun their Journey with the Band of virtuous Persons, and travelled some Time in their Company: But upon Examination I found, that there were several Paths which led out of the great Road into the Sides of the Wood, and ran into so many crooked Turnes and Windings, that those who travelled through them, often turned their Backs upon the Temple of Virtue, then crossed the strait Road, and sometimes marched in it for a little Space, till the crooked Path which they were engaged in, again led them into the Wood. The several Alleys of these Wanderers had their particular Ornaments: One of them I could not but take Notice of in the Walk of the mischievous Pretenders to Politicks, which had at every Turne the Figure of a Person, whom by the Incription I found to be Markiavell, pointing out the Way with an extended Finger like a Mercury. I was now returned in the same Manner as before, with a Design to observe carefully every Thing that pass'd in the Region of Avarice, and the Occurrences in that Assembly, which was made up of Persons of my own Age. This Body of Travellers had not gone far in the third great Road, before it led them insensibly into a deep Valley, in which they journied several Days with great Toil and Uneasiness, and without the necessary Refreshments of Food and Sleep. The only Relief they met with, was in a River that ran through the Bottom of the Valley on a Bed of Golden Sand: They often drank of this Stream, which had such a particular Quality in it, that though it refreshed them for a Time, it rather inflamed than quenched their Thirst. On each Side of the river was a Range of Hills full of precious ore; for where the Rains had washed off the Earth, one might see in several Parts of them ong Veins of Gold, and Rocks that looked like pure Silyer. We were told, That the Deity of the Place had forbid any of his Votaries to dig into the Bowels of these Hills, or convert the Treasures they contained to any Use, under pain of starving. At the End of the Valley stood the Temple of Avarice, made after the Manner of a Fortification, and surrounded with a housand triple-headed Dogs, that were placed here to keep off Beggars. As our Approach they all fell a-barking, and would have very much terrified us, had not an old Woman, who had called herself by the forged Name of Competency, offered herself for our Guide. She carried under her Garment a Golden Bough, which she no sooner held up in her Hand, but the Dogs lay down, and the Gates flew open for our Reception. We were led through an hundred iron Doors, before we entered the Temple. At the upper End of it sate the God of Avarice, with a long filthy Beard, and a meagre starved Countenance, enclosed with Heaps of Ingots and Pyramids of Money, but half naked and shivering with Cold. On his Right Hand was a Fiend called Rapine, and on his Left a particular Favourite, to whom he had given the Title of Parsimony. The first was his Collector, and the other his Cashier.

River

THERE were several long Tables placed on each side of the Temple, with respective Officers attending behind them. Some of these I enquired into. At the first Table was kept the Office of Corruption. Seeing a Solicitor extremely busy, and whispering every Body that passed by, I kept my Eye upon him very attentively, and saw him often going up to a Person that had a Pen in his Hand, with a Multiplication-Table and an Almanack before him, which, which, as I afterwards heard, was all the Learning he was Master of. The Solicitor would often apply himself to his Ear, and at the same Time convey Money into his Hand, for which the other would give him out a Piece of Paper or Parchment, signed and sealed in Form. The Name of this dextrous and successful Solicitor was Bribery. At the next Table was the Office of Extortion. Behind it sate a Person in a Bob-Wig, counting over a great Sum of Money. He gave out little Purles to several, who after a short Tour brought him, in Return, Sacks full of the same kind of Coin. I saw at the same Time a Person called Fraud, who sate behind a Counter with false Scales, light Weights, and scanty Measures, by the skilful Application of which Instruments, she had got together an immense Heap of Wealth. It would be endless to name the several Officers, or describe the Votaries that attended in this Temple. There were many old Men panting and breathless, reposing their Heads on Bags of Money; nay, many of them actually dying, whose very Pangs and Convulsions (which rendered their Purles useless to them) only made them grasp them the faster. There were some tearing with one Hand all Things, even to the Garments and Flesh of many miserable Persons who stood before them, and with the other Hand, throwing away what they had seized, to Harlots, Flatterers, and Pandars, that stood behind them.

ON a sudden the whole Assembly fell a-trembling, and upon Enquiry, I found, that the great Room we were in, was haunted with a Spectre, that many Times a Day appeared to them, and terrified them to Distraction.

IN the Midst of their Terror and Amazement the Apparition entered, which I immediately knew to be Poverty. Whether it were by my Acquaintance with this Phantom, which had rendered the Sight of her more familiar to me, or however it was, she did not make so indigent or frightful a Figure in my Eye, as the God of this loathsome Temple. The miserable Votaries of this Place were, I found, of another Mind. Every one fancied himself threatened by the Apparition as she stalked about the Room, and began to lock their Coffers, and tie their Bags, with the utmost Fear and trembling.

had

I MUST confess, I look upon the Passion which I saw in this unhappy People to be of the same Nature with those unaccountable Antipathies which some Persons are born with, or rather as a Kind of Phrensy, not unlike that which throws a Man into Terrors and Agonies at the Sight of so useful and innocent a Thing as Water. The whole Assembly was surprized, when, instead of paying my Devotions to the Deity whom they all adored, they saw me address my Self to the Phantom.

‘ OH Poverty ! (said I) my first Petition to thee is, That thou wouldst never appear to me hereafter; but if thou wilt not grant me this, that thou wouldst not bear a Form more terrible than that in which thou appearest to me at present. Let not thy Threats and Menaces betray me to any Thing that is ungrateful or unjust. Let me not shut my Ears to the Cries of the Needy. Let me not forget the Person that has deserved well of me. Let me not, for any Fear of thee, desert my Friend, my Principles, or my Honour. If Wealth is to visit me, and to come with her usual Attendants, Vanity and Avarice, do thou, Oh Poverty ! hasten to my Rescue; but bring along with thee the two Sisters, in whose Company thou art always cheerful, Liberty and Innocence. ’

THE Conclusion of this Vision must be deferred to another Opportunity.

— Ex humili summa ad fastigia verum Extollit, quoties voluit Fortuna jocari. — Juv.

No. 124. Tuesday, Jan. 24. 1706.

From my own Apartment, Jan. 13.

I WENT on Saturday last to make a Visit in the City; and as I passed through Cheapside, I saw Crowds of People turning down towards the Bank, and struggling who should first get their Money into the new erected Lottery. It gave me a great Notion of the Credit of our present Government and Administration, to find People press as eagerly to pay Money, as they would to receive it; and at the same Time a due Respect for that Body of Men who have found out so pleasing an Expedient for carrying on the common Cause, that they have turned a Tax into a Diversion. The Cheerfulness of Spirit, and the Hopes of Success, which this Project has occasioned in this great City, lightens the Burden of the War, and puts me in Mind of some Games which they say were invented by wise Men who were Lovers of their Country, to make their Fellow-Citizens undergo the Tedium and Fatigues of a long Siege. I think there is a Kind of Homage due to Fortune, (if I may call it so) and that I should be wanting to my self if I did not lay in my Pretences to her Favour, and pay my Compliments to her by recommending a Ticket to her Disposal. For this Reason, upon my Return to my Lodgings, I sold off a Couple of Globes and a Telescope, which, with the Cash I had by me, raised the Sum that was requisite for that Purpose. I find by my Calculations, that it is but an Hundred and Fifty Thousand to one against my being worth a Thousand Pounds per Annum for Thirty-two Years; and if any Plumb in the City will lay me an Hundred and Fifty Thousand Pounds to Twenty Shillings (which is an even Bet) that I am not this fortunate Man, I will take the Wager, and shall look upon him as a Man of singular Courage and Fair-dealing, having given Orders to Mr. Morpew to subscribe such a Policy in my Behalf, if any Person accepts of the Offer. I must confess, I have had such private Intimations from the Twinkling of a certain Star in some of my Astronomical Observations, that I should be unwilling to take Fifty Pounds a Year for my Chance, unless it were to oblige a particular Friend. My chief Business at present is, to prepare my Mind for this Change of Fortune; For as Seneca, who was a greater Moralist, and a much richer Man than I shall be with this Addition to my present Income, says, Munera ista Fortuna putatis? Insidia sunt. What we look upon as Gifts and Presents of Fortune, are Traps and Snares which she lays for the Unwary. I am arming my self against her Favours with all my Philosophy; and that I may not lose my self in such a Redundance of unnecessary and superfluous Wealth, I have determined to settle an annual Pension out of it upon a Family of Palatinas, and by that Means give these unhappy Strangers a Taste of British Property. At the same Time, as I have an excellent Servant-Maid, whose Diligence in attending me has increased in Proportion to my Infirmities, I shall settle upon her the Revenue arising out of the Ten Pounds, and amounting to Fourteen Shillings per Annum, with which she may retire into Wales, where she was born a Gentlewoman, and pass the remaining Part of her Days in a Condition suitable to her Birth.

and Quality. It was impossible for me to make an Inspection into my own Fortune on this Occasion, without seeing at the same Time the Fate of others who are embarked in the same Adventure. And indeed it was a great Pleasure to me to observe, That the War, which generally impoverishes those who furnish out the Expence of it, will by this Means give Estates to some, without making others the poorer for it. I have lately seen several in Liveries, who will give as good of their own very suddenly; and took a particular Satisfaction in the Sight of a young Country-Wench, whom I this Morning passed by as she was whirling her Mop, with her Petticoats tucked up very agreeably, who, if there is any Truth in my Art, is within Ten Months of being the handsomest great Fortune in Town. I must confess, I was so struck with the Foresight of what she is to be, that I treated her accordingly, and said to her, pray, young Lady, permit me to pass by. I would for this Reason advise all Masters and Mistresses to carry it with great Moderation and Condescension towards their Servants till next Michaelmas, lest the Superiority at that Time should be inverted. I must likewise admonish all my Brethren and Fellow-Adventurers, to fill their Minds with proper Arguments for their Support and Consolation in case of ill Success. It so happens in this Particular, that though the Gainers will have Reason to rejoice, the Losers will have no Reason to complain. I remember, that Day after the Thousand Pounds Prize was drawn in the Penny Lottery, I went to visit a splenatrick Acquaintance of mine, who was under much Dejection, and seemed to me to have suffered some great Disappointment. Upon Enquiry, I found he had put Two Pence for himself and his Son into the Lottery, and that neither of them had drawn the Thousand Pounds. Hereupon this unlucky Person took Occasion to enumerate the Misfortunes of his Life, and concluded with telling me, That he never was successful in any of his Undertakings. I was forced to comfort him with the common Reflection upon such Occasions, That Men of the greatest Merit are not always Men of the greatest Success, and that Persons of his Character must not expect to be as happy as Fools. I shall proceed in the like Manner with my Rivals and Competitors for the Thousand Pounds a Year which we are now in Pursuit of ; and that I may give general Content to the whole Body of Candidates, I shall allow all that draw Prizes to be Fortunate, and all that miss them to be wise.

I must not here omit to acknowledge, that I have received several Letters upon this Subject, but find one common Error running through them all, which is, That the Writers of them believe their Fate in these Cases depends upon the Astrologer, and not upon the Stars, as in the following Letter from one, who, I fear, flatters himself with Hopes of Success, which are altogether groundless, since he does not seem to me so great a Fool as he takes himself to be.

SIR,

COMING to Town, and finding my Friend Mr. Partridge dead and buried, and you the only Conjurer in Repute, I am under a Necessity of applying my self to you for a Favour, which nevertheless I confess it would better become a Friend to ask, than one who is, as I am, altogether a Stranger to you ; but Poverty, you know, is impudent ; and as that gives me the Occasion, so that alone could give me the Confidence to be thus impertinent.

I am, Sir, very poor, and very desirous to be otherwise : I have got Ten Pounds, which I design to venture in the Lottery now on Foot. What I desire of you is, that by our Art, you will choose such a Thicket for me as shall arise a Benefit sufficient to maintain me. I must beg Leave to inform you, That I am good for nothing, and must therefore insist upon a larger Lot that would satisfy those who are capable by their own Abilities of adding something to what you should assign them ; whereas I must expect an absolute independent Maintenance, because, as I said, I can do nothing. 'Tis possible, after this free Confession of mine, you may think I don't deserve to be rich ; but I hope you'll likewise observe, I can ill afford to be poor. My own Opinion is, that I am well qualified for an Estate, and have a good Title to Luck in a Lottery ; but I resign my self wholly to your Mercy, not without Hopes that you will consider, the less I deserve, the greater the Generosity in you. If you reject me, I have agreed with an Acquaintance of mine to bury me for my Ten Pounds. I once more recommend my self to your Favour, and bid you adieu.

I cannot forbear publishing another Letter which I have received, because it redounds to my own Credit, as well as to that of a very honest Footman.

Mr Bickerstaff,

Jan. 23. 1709-10.

I AM bound in Justice to acquaint you, That I put an Advertisement into your last Paper about a Watch which was lost, and was brought to me on the very Day your Paper came out, by a Footman, who told me, That he would have brought it, if he had not read your Discourse of that Day against Avarice ; but that since he had read it, he scorned to take a Reward for doing what in Justice he ought to do. I am,

SIR,

Your most humble Servant,

John Hammond

Quem

*Quem mala futilitia, & quacunque inscitia ver
Cacum agit, insanum Chrysippi porticus, & grec Autumat; bac populos, bac magnos formula Reges, Excepto sapiente, tenet. — Hor.*

Nº 125. Thursday, Jan. 26. 1709.

From my own Apartment, Jan. 25.

HERE is a Sect of ancient Philosophers, who, I think, have left more Volumes behind them, and those better written than any other of the Fraternities in Philosophy. It was a Maxim of this Sect, That all those who do not live up to the Principles of Reason and Virtue, are Madmen. Every one, who governs himself by these Rules, is allowed the Title of Wise, and reputed to be in his Senses; and every one in Proportion, as he deviates from them, is pronounced frantick and distracted. Cicero having chosen this Maxim for his Theme, takes Occasion to argue from it very agreeably with Clodius, his implacable Adversary, who had procured his Banishment. A City (says he) is an Assembly distinguished into Bodies of Men, who are in Possession of their respective Rights and Privileges, cast under proper Subordinations, and in all its Parts obedient to the Rules of Law and Equity. He then represents the Government from whence he was banished, at a Time when the Consul, Senate and Laws, had lost their Authority, as a Commonwealth of Lunaticks. For this Reason he regards his Expulsion from Rome, as a Man would being turned out of Bedlam, if the Inhabitants of it should drive him out of their Walls as a Person unfit for their Community. We are therefore to look upon every Man's Brain to be touched, however he may appear in the general Conduct of his Life, if he has an unjustifiable Singularity in any Part of his Conversation or Behaviour: Or if he swerves from right Reason, however common his Kind of Madness may be, we shall not excuse him for its being epidemical; it being our present Design to clap up all such as have the Marks of Madness upon them, who are now permitted to go about the Streets for no other Reason, but because they do no Mischief in their Fits. Abundance of imaginary great Men are put in Straw to bring them to a right Sense of themselves: And is it not altogether as reasonable, that an insignificant Man, who has an immoderate Opinion of his Merits, and a quite different Notion of his own Abilities from what the Rest of the World entertain, should have the same Care taken of him, as a Beggar who fancies himself a Duke or a Prince? Or, Why should a Man, who starves in the midst of Plenty, be trusted with himself, more than he who fancies he is an Emperor in the midst of Poverty? I have several Women of Quality in my Thoughts, who set so exorbitant a Value upon themselves, that I have often most heartily pitied them, and wished them, for their Recovery, under the same Discipline with the Pewterer's Wife. I find by several Hints in ancient Authors, that when the Romans were in the Height of Power and Luxury, they assigned out of their vast Dominions an Island called Anticyra, as an Habitation for Madmen. This was the Bedlam of the Roman Empire, whither all Persons who had lost their Wits used to resort from all Parts of the World in Quest of them. Several of the Roman Emperors were advised to repair to this Island; but most of them, instead of listening to such sober Counsels, gave Way to their Distraction, till the People knocked them in the Head as despairing of their Cure. In short, it was as usual for Men of distempered Brains to take a Voyage to An- ticyra in those Days, as it is in ours for Persons who have a Disorder in their Lungs to go to Montpellier.

THE prodigious Crops of Hellebore with which this whole Island abounded, did not only furnish them with incomparable Tea, Snuff, and Hungary Water, but impregnated the Air of the Country with such sober and salutiferous Streams, as very much comforted the Heads, and refreshed the Senes of all that breathed in it. A discarded Statesman, that at his first Landing appeared stark staring mad, would become calm in a Week's Time; and upon his Return Home, live easy and satisfied in his Retirement. A moaping Lover would grow a pleasant Fellow by that Time he had rid thrice about the Island; and a hair-brained Rake, after a short Stay in the Country, go Home again a composed, grave, worthy Gentleman.

I have premised these Particulars before I enter on the main Design of this Paper, because I would not be altogether notional in what I have to say, and pass only for a Projector in Morality. I could quote Horace and Seneca, and some other ancient Writers of good Repute, upon the same Occasion, and make out by their Testimony, that our Streets are filled with distract Persons; that our Shops and Taverns, private and publick Houses, swarm with them; and that it is very hard to make up a tolerable Assembly without a Majority of them. But what I have already said, is, I hope, sufficient to justify the ensuing Project, which I shall therefore give some Account of without any further Preface.

1. IT is humbly proposed, That a proper Receivable or Habitation be forthwith erected for all such Persons as upon due Trial and Examination, shall appear to be out of their Wits.

2. THAT to serve the present Exigency, the College in Moor-Fields be very much extended at both Ends, and that it be converted into a Square, by adding Thrice other Sides to it.

3. THAT no Body be admitted into these Three additional Sides, but such whose Phrensy can lay no Claim to an Apartment in that Row of Building which is already erected.

4. THAT the Architect, Physician, Apothecary, Surgeon, Keepers, Nurses and Porters, be all and each of them cracked, provided that their Phrensy does not lie in the Profession or Employment to which they shall severally and respectively be assigned.

N. B. IT is thought fit to give the foregoing Notice, that none may present himself here for any Post of Honour or Profit who is not duly qualified.

5. THAT over all the Gates of the additional Buildings, there be Figures placed in the same Manner as over the Entrance of the Edifice already erected; provided they represent such Distractions only as are proper for these additional Buildings; as of an envious Man gnawing his own Flesh, a Gamester pulling himself by the Ears, and knocking his Head against a Marble Pillar, a covetous Man warming himself over a Heap of Gold, a Coward flying from his own Shadow, and the like.

HAVING laid down this general Scheme of my Design, I do hereby invite all Persons who are willing to encourage so publick-spirited a Project, to bring in their Contributions as soon as possible, and to apprehend forthwith any Politician whom they shall catch raving in a Coffee-House, or any Free-Thinker whom they shall find publishing his Deliriums, or any other Person who shall give the like manifest Signs of a crazed Imagination; And I do at the same Time give this, publick Notice to all the Madmen, about this great City. That they may return to, their Senses with all imaginable Expedition, lest, if they should come into my Hands, I should put them into a Regimen which they would not, like: For if I find any one of them persist in, his franck Behaviour, I will make him in a Month's Time as famous as ever Oliver's Porter, was.

Anguillam Cauda tenet. T. D'Urfey

N° 126. Saturday, Jan. 28. 1709.

From my own Apartment, Jan. 27.

HERE is no Sort of Company so agreeable as that of Women who have good Sense without Affectation, and can converse with Men without any private Design of imposing Chains and Fetter. Belidera, whom I visited this Evening, is one of these. There is an invincible Prejudice in Favour of all she says, from her being a beautiful Woman, because she does not consider her self as such when she talks to you. This amiable Temper gives a certain Tincture to all her Discourse, and made it very agreeable to me, till we were interrupted by Lydia, a Creature who has all the Charms that can adorn a Woman. Her Attractions would indeed be irresistible, but that she thinks them so, and is always employing them in Stratagems and Conquests. When I turned my Eye upon her as she sat down, I saw One with a Person of that Character, which, for the further Information of my Country Correspondents, I had long wanted an Opportunity of explaining. Lydia is a finished Coquet, which is a Scat among Women, I of all others the most mischievous, and makes the greatest Havock and Disorder in Society. I went on in the Discourse I was in with Belvidera, without shewing that I had observed any Thing extraordinary in Lydia: Upon which, I immediately saw her look me over as some very ill-bred Fellow; and casting a scornful Glance on my Dress, gave a Shrug at Belvidera. But as much as she despised me, she wanted my Admiration, and made Twenty Offers to bring my Eyes her way: But I reduced her to a Restlessness in her Seat, and impertinent playing of her Fan, and many other Motions and Gestures, before I took the least Notice of her. At last I looked at her with a Kind of Surprize, as if she had before been unobserved, by Reason of an ill Light where she sat. It is not to be expressed what a sudden Joy I saw rise in her Countenance, even at the Approbation of such a very old Fellow: But she did not long enjoy her Triumph without her Rival; for there immediately entred Castabella, a Lady of a quite contrary Character, that is to say, as eminent a Prude as Lydia is a Coquet. Belvidera gave me a Glance, which methought intimated, That they were both Curiosities in their Kind, and worth Remarking. As soon as we were again seated, I stole Looks at each Lady, as if I was comparing their Perfections. Belvidera observed it, and began to lead me into a Discourse of them both to their Faces, which is to be done easily enough; for one Woman is generally so Intent upon the Faults of another, that she has not Reflection enough to observe when her own are represented. I have taken Notice, Mr. Bickerstaff, (said Belvidera) That you have, in some Parts of your Writings, drawn Characters of our Sex, in which you have not, to my Apprehension, been clear enough and distinct, particularly in those of a Prude and a Coquet. Upon the Mention of this, Lydia was rouzed with the Expectation pestration of seeing Castabella's Picture, and Castabella with the Hopes of that of Lydia. Madam, (said I to Belvidera) when we consider Nature, we shall often find very contrary Effects flow from the same Cause. The Prude and Coquet (as different as they appear in their Behaviour) are in Reality the same Kind of Women: The Motive of Action in both, is the Affectation of pleasing Men. They are Sisters of the same Blood and Constitution, only one chuses a Grave, and the other a light Dress. The Prude appears more virtuous, the Coquet more vicious, than she really is. The distant Behaviour of the Prude, tends to the same Purpose as the Advances of the Coquet; and you have as little Reason to fall into Despair from the Severity of the one, as to conceive Hope from the Familiarity of the other. What leads you into a clear Sense of their Character is, That you may observe each of them has the Distinction of Sex in all her Thoughts, Words and Actions. You can never mention any Assembly you were lately in, but one asks you with a Rigid, the other with a sprightly Air, Pray, what Men were there? As for Prudes, it must be confessed, that there are several of them, who, like Hypocrites, by long Practice of a false Part, become sincere; or at least delude themselves into a Belief that they are so.

FOR the Benefit of the Society of Ladies, I shall propose one Rule to them as a Test of their Virtue. I find in a very celebrated modern Author, That the great Foundress of the Pietists, Madam de Bourignon, who was no less famous for the Sanctity of her Life, than for the Singularity of some of her Opinions, was used to boast, That she had not only the Spirit of Continency in her self, but that she had also the Power of communicating it to all who beheld her. This the Scoffers of those Days called, The Gift of Infrigidation, and took Occasion from it to rally her Face, rather than admire her Virtue.

Virtue, I would therefore advise the Prude, who has a Mind to know the Integrity of her own Heart, to lay her Hand seriously upon it, and to examine her self, whether she could sincerely rejoice in such a Gift of conveying chaste Thoughts to all her Male Beholders? If she has any Aversion to the Power of inspiring so great a Virtue, whatever Notion she may have of her Perfection, she deceives her own Heart, and is still in the State of Prudery. Some perhaps will look upon the Boast of Madam de Bourignon as the utmost Ostentation of a Prude.

IF you would see the Humour of a Coquet pushed to the last Excess, you may find an Instance of it in the following Story, which I will set down at Length, because it pleased me when I read it, tho' I cannot recollect in what Author.

A young Coquet Widow in France having been followed by a Gascon of Quality, who had boasted among his Companions of some Favours which he had never received, to be revenged of him, sent for him one Evening, and told him, It was in his Power to do her a very particular Service. The Gascon, with much Profession of his Readiness to obey her Commands begged to hear in what Manner she designed to employ him. You know (said the Widow) my Friend Belinda, and must often have heard of the Jealousy of that impotent Wretch her Husband. Now it is absolutely necessary, for the carrying on a certain Affair, That his Wife and I should be together a whole Night. What I have to ask of you, is, to dress your self in her Night-Clothes, and lie by him a whole Night in her Place, that he may not miss her while she is with me. The Gascon (though of a very lively and undertaking Complexion) began to startle at the Proposal. Nay, says the Widow, if you have not the Courage to go thro' what I ask of you, I must employ some Body else.

else that will. Madam, (says the Gascon) I'll kill him for you if you please; but for lying with him! — How is it possible to do it without being discovered? If you do not discover your self, (says the Widow) you will lie safe enough, for he is past all Curiosity. He comes in at Night while she is asleep, and goes out in a Morning before she awakes, and is in Pain for nothing, so he knows she is there. Madam, (replied the Gascon) How can you reward me for passing a Night with this old Fellow? The Widow answered with a Laugh, Perhaps by admitting you to pass a Night with one you think more agreeable. He took the Hint, put on his Night-Clothes, and had not been a-bed above an Hour before he heard a Knocking at the Door, and the Treading of one who approach'd the other Side of the Bed, and who he did not question was the good Man of the House. I do not know, whether the Story would be better by telling you in this Place, or at the End of it, That the Person who went to Bed to him was our young Coquet Widow. The Gascon was in a terrible Fright every Time she moved in the Bed, or turned towards him, and did not fail to shrink from her till he had conveyed himself to the very Ridge of the Bed. I will not dwell upon the Perplexity he was in the whole Night, which was augmented, when he observed that it was now broad Day, and that the Husband did not yet offer to get up and go about his Business. All that the Gascon had for it, was to keep his Face turned from her, and to feign himself a sleep, when, to his utter Confusion, the Widow at last puts out her Arm, and pulls the Bell at her Bed's Head. In came her Friend, and two or three Companions to whom the Gascon had boasted of her Favours. The Widow jumped into a Wrapping-Gown, and joined with the rest in laughing at this Man of Intrigue.

Nimirum insanus paucis videatur, et quod Maxima Pars Hominum Morbo jactatur eodem.
Hor.

No 127. Tuesday, January 31. 1709.

From my own Apartment, Jan. 30.

THE R. E. is no Affection of the Mind so much blended in humane Nature, and wrought into our very Constitution, as Pride. It appears under a Multitude of Disguises, and breaks out in Ten Thousand different Symptoms. Every one feels it in himself, and yet wonders to see it in his Neighbour. I must confess, I met with an Instance of it the other Day, where I should very little have expected it. Who would believe the proud Person I am going to speak of, is a Cobler upon Ludgate-Hill? This Artist, being naturally a Lover of Respect, and considering that his Circumstances are such that no Men living will give it him, has contrived the Figure of a Beau in Wood, who stands before him in a bending Posture, with his Hat under his Left Arm, and his Right Hand extended in such a Manner as to hold a Thread, a Piece of Wax, or an Awl, according to the particular Service in which his Master thinks fit to employ him. When I saw him, he held a Candle in this obsequious Posture. I was very well pleased with the Cobler's Invention, that had so ingeniously contrived an inferior, and stood a little while contemplating this inverted Idolatry, wherein the Image did Homage to the Man. When we meet with such a fanttick Vanity in one of this Order, it is no Wonder if we may trace it through all Degrees above it, and partiparticularly through all the Steps of Greatness. We easily see the Absurdity of Pride when it enters into the Heart of a Cobler; though in Reality it is altogether as ridiculous and unreasonable where ever it takes Possession of an humane Creature. There is no Temptation to it from the Reflection upon our Being in general, or upon any comparative Perfection, whereby one Man may excel another. The greater a Man's Knowledge is, the greater Motive he may seem to have for Pride; but in the same Proportion as the one rises, the other sinks, it being the chief Office of Wisdom to discover to us our Weaknesses and Imperfections.

A S Folly is the Foundation of Pride, the natural Superstructure of it is Madness. If there was an Occasion for the Experiment, I would not question to make a proud Man a Lunatick in three Weeks Time, provided I had it in my Power to ripen his Phrensy with proper Applications. It is an admirable Reflection in Terrace, where it is said of a Parasite, Hic Homines ex Stultis facit Insanos. This Fellow (says he) has an Art of converting Fools into Madmen. When I was in France, (the Region of Complaisance and Vanity) I have often observed, That a great Man who has entered a Levy of Flatterers humble and temperate, has grown so insensibly heated by the Court, which was paid him on all Sides, that he has been quite distracted before he could get into his Coach.

IF we consult the Collegiates of Moorfields, we shall find most of them are beholden to their Pride for their Introduction into that magnificent Palace. I had some Years ago the Curiosity to enquire into the particular Circumstances of these whimsical Freeholders, and learned from their own Mouths the Condition and Character of each of them. Indeed I found, that all I spoke to, were Persons of Quality. There were at that Time five Duchesses, three Earls, two Heathen Gods, an Emperor, and a Prophet. There were also a great Number of such as were locked up from their Estates, and others who concealed their Titles. A Leather-seller of Taunton whisper'd me in my Ear, That he was the Duke of Monmouth; but begged me not to betray him. At a little Distance from him sate a Taylor's Wife, who asked me as I went by, if I had seen the Sword-bearer? Upon which I presumed to ask her, Who she was? And was answer'd, My Lady Mayoreess.

I was very sensibly touched with Compassion towards these miserable People; and indeed, extremely mortified to see Humane Nature capable of being thus disfigured. However, I reaped this Benefit from it, That I was resolv'd to guard my self against a Passion which makes such Havock in the Brain, and produces so much Disorder in the Imagination. For this Reason, I have endeavoured to keep down the secret Swellings of Resentment; and stifle the very first Suggestions of Self-esteem; to establish my Mind in Tranquillity, and overvalue Nothing in my own, or in another's Possession.

FOR the Benefit of such whose Heads are a little turned, though not to so great a Degree as to qualify them for the Place of which I have been now speaking, I shall assign one of the Sides of the College which I am erecting, for the Cure of this dangerous Distemper.

THE most remarkable of the Persons, whose Disturbance arises from Pride, and whom I shall use all possible Diligence to cure, are such as are hidden in the Appearance of quite contrary Habits and Dispositions. Among such, I shall in the first Place take Care of one, who is under the most subtle Species of Pride that I have observed in my whole Experience.

THIS Patient is a Person for whom I have a great Respect, as being an old Courtier, and a Friend of mine in my Youth. The Man has but a bare Subsistence, just enough to pay his Reckoning with us at the Trumpet: But by having spent the Beginning of his Life in the Hearing of great Men, and Persons of Power, he is always promising to do good Offices, to introduce every Man he converses with into the World; will desire one of ten Times his Substance to let him see him sometimes, and hints to him, that he does not forget him. He answers to Matters of no Consequence with great Circumpection; but however, maintains a general Civility in his Words and Actions, and an innocent Benevolence to all whom he hath to do with. This he practises with a grave Tone and Air; and tho' I am his Senior by twelve Years, and richer by forty Pounds per Annum, he had Yesterday the Impudence to commend me to my Face, and tell me, he should be always ready to encourage me. In a Word, he is a very insignificant Fellow, but exceeding gracious. The best Return I can make him for his Favours, is to carry him my self to Bedlam, and see him well taken Care of.

THE next Person I shall provide for, is of a quite contrary Character; that has in him all the Stiffness and Insolence of Quality, without a Grain of Sense or Good Nature to make it either respected or beloved. His Pride has infected every Muscle of his Face; and yet after all his Endeavours to shew Mankind that he contemns them, he is only neglected by all that see him, as not of Consequence enough to be hated.

FOR the Cure of this particular Sort of Madness, it will be necessary to break through all Forms with him, and familiarise his Carriage by the Use of a good Cudgel. It may likewise be of great Benefit to make him jump over a Stick half a Dozen Times every Morning.

A third, whom I have in my Eye, is a young Fellow, whose Lunacy is such, that he boasts

boasts of nothing but what he ought to be ashamed of. He is vain of being rotten, and talks publickly of having committed Crimes, which he ought to be hanged for by the Laws of his Country.

THERE are several others whose Brains are hurt with Pride, and whom I may hereafter attempt to recover; but shall conclude my present List with an old Woman, who is just dropping into her Grave, that talks of nothing but her Birth. Tho' she has not a Tooth in her Head, she expects to be valued for the Blood in her Veins, which she fancies is much better than that which glows in the Checks of Belinda, and sets half the Town on Fire.

— Venient a Dote Sagitte. Juv.

N^o 128. Thursday, Febr. 2. 1709.

From my own Apartment, February 1.

THIS Morning I received a Letter from a Fortune-Hunter, which being better in its Kind than Men of that Character usually write, I have thought fit to communicate to the Publick.

To Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq;

SIR,

I TAKE the Boldness to recommend to your Care the inclosed Letter, not knowing how to communicate it but by your Means to the agreeable Country-Maid you mention with so much Honour in your Discourse concerning the Lottery.

I SHOULD be ashamed to give you this Trouble without offering at some small Re-quital:

quital; I shall therefore direct a new Pair of Globes and a Telescope of the best Maker, to be left for you at Mr. Morpheus's, as a Testimony of the great Respect with which I am

Your most humble Servant, &c.

To Mopfa in Sheer-Lane.

Fairest Unknown,

IT being discovered by the Stars, that about three Months hence you will run the Hazard of being persecuted by many worthless Pretenders to your Person, unless timely prevented, I now offer my Service for your Security against the Persecution that threatens you. This is therefore to let you know, That I have conceived a most extraordinary Passion for you; and that for several Days I have been perpetually haunted with the Vision of a Person I have never yet seen. To satisfy you that I am in my Senses, and that I do not mistake you for any one of higher Rank, I assure you, that in your daily Employment, you appear to my Imagination more agreeable in a short scanty Petticoat, than the finest Woman of Quality in her spreading Fardingal; and that the dextrous Twirl of your Mop has more native Charms, than the studied Airs of a Lady's Fan. In a Word, I am captivated with your menial Qualifications: The Domestick Virtues adorn you like attendant Cupids; Cleanliness and bealtful Industry wait on all your Motions; and Dust and Cobwebs fly your Approach.

NOW, to give you an honest Account of my self, and that you may see my Designs are honourable, I am an Esquire of an ancient Family, born to about fifteen hundred Pounds a Year, half of which I have spent in discovering my self to be a Fool, and with the rest am resolved to retire with some plain honest Partner, and study to be wiser. I had my Education in a laced Coat, and a French Dancing School; and by my Travel into Foreign Parts, have just as much Breeding to spare, as you may think you want, which I intend to exchange as fast as I can for old English Honesty and good.

good Sense I will not impose on you by a false Recomendation of my Person, which (to shew you my Sincerity) is none of the handsomest, being of a Figure somewhat short; but what I want in Length, I make out in Breadth. But in Amends for that and all other Defects, if you can like me when you see me, I shall continue to you, whether I find you fair, black or brown, 27 Jan. 1709-10.

The most constant of Lovers

THIS Letter seems to be written by a Wag, and for that Reason I am not much concerned for what Reception Mopsa shall think fit to give it; but the following certainly proceeds from a poor Heart, that languishes under the most deplorable Misfortune that possibly can befall a Woman. A Man that is treacherously dealt with in Love, may have Recourse to many Consolations. He may gracefully break through all Opposition to his Mistress, or explain with his Rival; urge his own Constancy, or aggravate the Falshood by which it is repaid. But a Woman that is ill treated, has no Refuge in her Griefs but in Silence and Secrecy. The World is so unjust, that a Female Heart which has been once touched, is thought for ever blemished. The very Grief in this Case is look'd upon as a Reproach, and a Complaint almost a Breach of Chastity. For these Reasons we see Treachery and Falshood are become as it were male Vices, and are seldom found, never acknowledged, in the other Sex. This may serve to introduce Stasira's Letter, which, without any Turn or Art, has something so pathetical and moving in it, that I verily believe it to be true, and therefore heartily pity the injured Creature that writ it.

To

To Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq;

SIR,

YOU seem in many of your Writings to be a Man of a very compassionate Temper, and well acquainted with the Passion of Love. This encourages me to apply my self to you in my present Distress, which I believe you will look upon to be very great, and treat with Tenderness, notwithstanding it wholly arises from Love, and that it is a Woman that makes this Confession. I am now in the 23d Year of my Age, and have for a great while entertained the Addresses of a Man who I thought lov'd me more than Life. I am sure I did him; and must own to you, not without some Confusion, that I have thought on nothing else for these two long Years, but the happy Life we should lead together, and the Means I should use to make my self still dearer to him. My Fortune was indeed much beyond his; and as I was always in the Company of my Relations, he was forced to discover his Inclinations, and declare himself to me by Stories of other Persons, kind Looks, and many Ways, which he knew too well that I understood. Oh! Mr. Bickerstaff, it is impossible to tell you, how industrious I have been to make him appear lovely in my Thoughts. I made it a Point of Conscience to think well of him, and of no Man else: But he has since had an Estate fallen to him, and makes Love to another of a greater Fortune than mine. I could not believe the Report of this at first; but about a Fortnight ago I was convinced of the Truth of it by his own Behaviour. He came to give our Family a formal Visit, when, as there were several in Company, and many Things talked of, the Discourse fell upon some unhappy Woman who was in my own Circumstances. It was said by one in the Room, That they could not believe the Story could be true, because they did not believe any Man could be so false. Upon which, I stole a Look upon him with an Anguish not to be express'd. He saw my Eyes full of Tears, yet had the Cruelty to say, That he could see no Falshood in Alterations of this Nature, where there had been no Contracts or Vows interchanged. Pray, do not make a Fest of Misery, but tell me seriously your Opinion of his Behaviour; and if you can have any Pity for my Condition, publish this in your next Paper, that being the only Way I have of complaining of his Unkindness, and shewing him the Injustice he has done me. I am,

Your humble Servant,

The unfortunate Statira.

THE Name my Correspondent gives herself, puts me in Mind of my old reading in Romances, and brings into my Thoughts a Speech of the renowned Don Bellianis, who, upon a Complaint made him of a discourteous Knight, that had left his injured Paramour in the same Manner, dries up her Tears with a Promise of Relief. Disconsolate Damsel, (quoth he) a foul Disgrace it were to all right worthy Professors of Chivalry, if such a Blot to Knighthood should pass unchastised. Give me to know the Abode of this recreant Lover, and I will give him as a Feast to the Fowls of the Air, or drag him bound before you at my Horse's Tail.

I am not ashamed to own my self a Champion of distressed Damsels, and would venture as far to relieve them as Don Bellianis; for which Reason, I do invite this Lady to let me know the Name of the Traitor who has deceived her; and do promise, not only her, but all the Fair Ones of Great Britain, who lie under the same Calamity, to employ my Right Hand for their Redress, and serve them to the last Drop of Ink.

Ingenio manus est & cervix casa. Juv.

N^o 129. Saturday, Febr. 4. 1709.

From my own Apartment, February 11.

WHEN my Paper for to Morrow was prepared for the Press, there came in this Morning

Morning a Mail from Holland, which brought me several Advices from Foreign Parts, and took my Thoughts off Domestick Affairs. Among others, I have a Letter from a Burgher of Amsterdam, who makes me his Compliments, and tells me, he has sent me several Draughts of humorous and satirical Pictures by the best Hands of the Dutch Nation. They are a trading People, and in their very Minds Mechanicks. They express their Wit in Manufacture, as we do in Manuscript. He informs me, That a very witty Hand has lately represented the present Posture of publick Affairs in a Landskip, or rather Sea-piece, wherein the Potentates of the Alliance are figured as their Interests correspond with, or affect each other, under the Appearance of Commanders of Ships. These Vessels carry the Colours of the respective Nations concerned in the present War. The whole Design seems to tend to one Point, which is, That several Squadrons of British and Dutch Ships are battering a French Man of War, in order to make her deliver up a Long-Boat with Spanish Colours. My Correspondent informs me, That a Man must understand the Compass perfectly well, to be able to comprehend the Beauty and Invention of this Piece, which is so skilfully drawn, that the particular Views of every Prince in Europe, are seen according as the Ships lie to the main Figure in the Picture, and as that Figure may help or retard their Sailing. It seems this Curiosity is now on Board a Ship bound for England, and with other Rarities made a Present to me. As soon as it arrives, I design to expose it to publick View at my Secretary Mr. Lillie's, who shall have an Explication of all the Terms of Art; and I doubt not but it will give as good Content as the Moving-Picture in Fleet-street.

BUT above all the Honours I have received from the Learned World abroad, I am most delighted with the following Epistle from Rome.

Pasquin of Rome to Isaac Bickerstaff of Great Britain Greeting.

SIR,

YOUR Reputation has passed the Alps, and would have come to my Ears by this Time, I had any. In short, Sir, you are looked upon here as a Northern Drole, and the greatest Virtuoso amongst the Tramontanes. Some indeed say, That Mr. Bickerstaff and Pasquin are only Names invented to father Compositions which the natural Parent do not care for owning. But however that is, all agree that there are several Persons, who, if they durst attack you, would endeavour to leave you no more Limb than I have. I need not tell you that my Adversaries have joined in a Confederacy with Time to demolish me, and that, if I were not a very great Wit, I should make the worst Figure in Europe, being abridged of my Legs, Arms, Nose and Ears. If you think fit to accept of the Correspondence of so fatious a Cripple, I shall from Time to Time send you an Account of what happens at Rome. You have only heard of it from Latin and Greek Authors; nor perhaps, have read no Accounts from hence, but of Triumph, Ovation or Apotheosis, and will, doubtless, be surprised to see the Description of a Procession, Jubilee or Canonization. I shall however send you what the Place affords, in Return to what I shall receive from you. If you will acquaint me with your next Promotion of General Officers, I will send you an Account of our next Advancement of Saints. If you will let me know who is reckoned the bravest Warrior in Great Britain, I'll tell you who is the best Fiddler in Rome. If you will favour me with an Inventory of the Riches that were brought into your Nation by Admiral Wager, I will not fail giving you an Account of a Pot of Medals that has been lately dug up.

re, and are now under the Examination of our Ministers of State.

THERE is one Thing, in which I desire you would be very particular. What I mean, is an exact List of all the Religions in Great Britain, as likewise the Habits, which are said here to be the great Points of Conscience in England, whether they are made of Serge or Broad-Cloth, of Silk or Linen. I should be glad to see a Model of the most conscientious Dress among you, and desire you would send me a Hat of each Religion; as likewise, if it be not too much Trouble, a Cravat. It would also be very acceptable here to receive an Account of those two religious Orders, which are lately sprung up amongst you, the Whigs and the Tories, with the Points of Doctrine, Severities in Discipline, Penances, Mortifications, and good Works, by which they differ from another. It would be no less kind, if you would explain to us a Word, which they do not understand even at our English Monastery, Toasts, and let us know whether the Ladies so called are Nuns or lay-Sisters.

IN Return, I will send you the Secret History of several Cardinals, which I have by me in Manuscript, with Gallantries, Amours, Politicks and Inquiries, by which they made their Way to the Holy Purple.

BUT when I propose a Correspondence I must not tell you what I intend to advise you of hereafter, and neglect to give you what I have at present. The Pope has been sick for this Fortnight of a violent Tooth-ach, which has very much raised the French Faction, and put the Conclave into a great Ferment. Every one of the Pretenders to the Succession is grown twenty years older than he was a Fortnight ago. Each Candidate tries who shall cough and stoop most; for these are at present the great Gifts, that recommend to the Apostolical Seat, which he stands the fairest for, who is likely to resign it the soonest. I have known the time, when it used to rain Lovis-d'Ors on such Occasions; but whatever is the Matter, there are very few of them to be seen at present at Rome, insomuch that it is thought a Man might purchase Infallibility at a very reasonable Rate. It is nevertheless hoped, that his Holiness may recover, and bury these his imaginary Successors.

THERE has lately been found an human Tooth in a Catecomb, which has engaged a Couple of Convents in a Law-Suit; each of them pretending, that it belonged to the Jaw-Bone of a Saint, who was of their Order. The College have sat upon it since, and I find there is a Disposition among them to take it out of the Possession of both the contending Parties, by reason of a Speech, which was made by one of the Cardinals, who, by reason of its being found out of the Company of any other Bones, asserted, That it might be one of the Teeth, which was coughed out by Ælia an old Woman, whose Loss is recorded in Martial.

I have nothing remarkable to communicate to you of State-Affairs, excepting only, that the Pope has lately received an Horse from the German Ambassador, as an Acknowledgment for the Kingdom of Naples, which is a Fief of the Church. His Holiness refused this Horse from the Germans ever since the Duke of Anjou has been possessed of Spain; but as they lately took Care to accompany it with a Body of ten thousand more, they have at last overcome his Holiness's Modesty and prevailed upon him to accept the Present. I am,

S I R,

Your most Obedient,

Humble Servant,

PASQUIN.

P. S. Morforio is very much yours.

At me

um magnis vixisse invita fatebitur usque vidia.

Hor.

130. Tuesday, Feb. 7. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 6.

FIND some of the most polite Latin Authors, who wrote at a Time, when Rome was in its lory, speak with a certain noble Vanity of the rightness and Splendor of the Age, in which they lived. Pliny often compliments his Emperor Trajan upon this Head; and when he would animate him to any Thing great, or disade him from any Thing that was improper, he insinuates, that it is befitting or unbecoming (he claritas & nitor seculi) that Period of Time, which was made illustrious by his Reign. When we cast our Eyes back on the History of Mankind, and trace them through their several Successions to their first Original, we sometimes see them breaking out in great and memorable Actions, and towering up to the utmost Heights of Virtue and Knowledge; when perhaps, if we carry our Observations to a little Distance, we see them sunk into Sloth and Ignorance, and together lost in Darkness and Obscurity. Sometimes the whole Species is asleep for two or three Generations, and then again awakens into Action, flourishes in Heroes, Philosophers and Poets, who do Honour to human Nature, and leave such Tracts of Glory behind them, as distinguish the Years, in which they acted their Part, from the ordinary Course of Time.

METHINKS a Man cannot without a secret Satisfaction, consider the Glory of the present sent Age, which will shine as bright as any other in the History of Mankind. It is still big with great Events, and has already produced Changes and Revolutions, which will be as much admired by Posterity, as any, that have happened in the Days of our Fathers, or in the old Times before them. We have seen Kingdoms divided and united, Monarchs erected and deposed, Nations transferred from one Sovereign to another; Conquerors raised to such a Greatness, as has given a Terror to Europe, and thrown down by such a Fall, as has moved their Pity.

BUT it is still a more pleasing View to an Englishman, to see his own Country give the chief Influence to so illustrious an Age, and stand in the strongest Point of Light amidst the diffused Glory that surrounds it.

IF we begin with learned Men, we may observe to the Honour of our Country, that those, who make the greatest Figure in most Arts and Sciences, are universally allowed to be of the British Nation; and what is more remarkable, That Men of the greatest Learning are among the Men of the greatest Quality.

A Nation may indeed abound with Persons of such uncommon Parts and Worth, as may make them rather a Misfortune than Blessing to the Publick. Those, who singly might have been of infinite Advantage to the Age they live in, may, by arising up together in the same Crisis of Time, and by interfering in their Pursuits of Honour, rather interrupt, than promote the Service of their Country. Of this we have a famous Instance in the Republick of Rome, where Cesar, Pompey, Cato, Cicero, and Brutus, endeavoured to recommend themselves at the same Time to the Admiration of their Contemporaries. Mankind was not able to provide for so many extraordinary Persons at once, or find out Posts suitable to their Ambition and Abilities. For this Reason, they were all as miserable in their Deaths, Deaths, as they were famous in their Lives, and occasioned not only the Ruin of each other, but also that of the Commonwealth.

IT is therefore a particular Happiness to a People, when the Men of superior Genius and Character are so justly disposed in the high Places of Honour, that each of them moves in a Sphere, which is proper to him, and requires those particular Qualities, in which he excels.

IF I see a General commanding the Forces of his Country, whose Victories are not to be parallel'd in Story, and who is as famous for his Negotiations as his Victories; and at the same Time see the Management of a Nation's Treasury in the Hands of one, who has always distinguished himself by a generous Contempt of his own private Wealth, and an exact Frugality of that which belongs to the Publick; I cannot but think a People under such an Administration may promise themselves Conquest abroad, and Plenty at Home. If I were to wish for a proper Person to preside over the publick Councils, it should certainly be one as much admired for his universal Knowledge of Men and Things, as for his Eloquence, Courage and Integrity, in the exerting of such extraordinary Talents.

WHO is not pleased to see a Person in the highest Station in the Law, who was the most eminent in his Profession, and the most accomplished Orator at the Bar? Or at the Head of the Fleet a Commander, under whose Conduct the Common enemy received such a Blow, as he has never been able to recover?

WERE we to form to our selves the Idea of one, whom we should think proper to govern a distant Kingdom, consisting chiefly of those, who differ from us in Religion, and are influenced by foreign Politicks, would it not be such a one, as has signalized himself by an uniform and unshaken Zeal for the Protestant Interest, and by his Dexterity in defeating the Skill and Artifice of its Enemies. In short, if we find a great Man popular for his Honesty and Humanity, as well as famed for his Learning and great Skill in all the Languages of Europe; or a Person eminent for those Qualifications, which make Men shine in publick assemblies, or for that Steadiness, Constancy and good Sense, which carry a Man to the desired Point through all the Opposition of Tumult and Prejudice, we have the Happiness to behold them all in Posts suitable to their Characters.

SUCH a Constellation of great Persons, if I may so speak, while they shine out in their own distinct Capacities, reflect a Lustre upon each other, but in a more particular Manner on their Sovereign, who has placed them in those proper Situations, by which their Virtues become so beneficial to all her Subjects. It is the Anniversary of the Birth-day of this glorious Queen, which naturally led me into this Field of Contemplation, and instead of joining in the publick Exultations, that are made on such Occasions, to entertain my Thoughts with the more serious Pleasure of ruminating upon the Glories of her Reign.

WHILE I behold Her surrounded with Triumphs, and adorned with all the Prosperity and Success, which Heaven ever shed on a Mortal, and still considering herself as such, tho' the Person appears to me exceeding great, that has these just Honours paid to Her; yet I must confess, she appears much greater in that she receives them with such a glorious Humility, and shews she has no further Regard for them, than as they arise from these great Events, which have made her Subjects happy. For my own Part, I must confess, when I see private Virtues in so high a Degree of Perfection, I am not astonished at any extraordinary Success that attends them, but look upon publick Triumphs as the natural Consequences of religious Retirements.

ADVER-

ADVERTISEMENT.

FINDING some Persons have mistaken Pasquin, who was mentioned in my last, for one, who has been pilloried at Rome; I must here advertise them, That it is only a maimed Statue so called, on which the private Scandal of that City is generally pasted. Morforio is a Person of the same Quality, who is usually made to answer whatever is published by the other: The Wits of that Place, like too many of our own Country, taking Pleasure in setting Innocent People together by the Ears. The Mentioning of this Person, who is a great Wit, and a great Cripple, put me in Mind of Mr. Eastcourt, who is under the same Circumstances. He was formerly my Apothecary, and being at present disabled by the Gout and Stone, I must recommend him to the Publick on Thursday next, that admirable Play of Ben. Johnson's called, The silent Woman, being appointed to be acted for his Benefit. It would be indecent for me to appear twice in a Season at these ludicrous Diversions; but as I always give my Man and my Maid one Day in the Year, I shall allow them this, and am promised by Mr. Eastcourt, my ingenious Apothecary, that they shall have a Place kept for them in the first Row of the middle Gallery.

— Scelus est jugulare Falernum, Et dare Campano toxica seva Mero. Mart.

N° 131. Thursday, February 9. 1709.

Sheer Lane, February 8.

THERE is in this City a certain Fraternity of Chemical Operators, who work under Ground in Holes, Caverns, and dark Retirements, to conceal their Mysteries from the Eyes and Observation of Mankind. These subterraneous Philosophers are daily employed in the Transmutation of Liquors, and by the Power of Magical Drugs and Incantations, raising under the Streets of London the choicest Products of the Hills and Valleys of France. They can squeeze Bourdeaux out of the Sloe, and draw Champaigne from an Apple. Virgil in that remarkable Prophecy, Incultisque rubens pendebit Sentibus Uva.

The ripening Grape shall hang on ev'ry Thorn, seems to have hinted at this Art, which can turn a Plantation of Northern Hedges into a Vineyard. These Adepts are known among one another by the Name of Wine-Brewers, and I am afraid do great Injury, not only to her Majesty's Customs, but to the Bodies of many of her good Subjects.

HAVING received sundry Complaints against these invisible Workmen, I ordered the proper Officer of my Court to ferret them out of their respective Caves, and bring them before me, which was Yesterday executed accordingly.

THE Person, who appeared against them, was a Merchant, who had by him a great Magazine of Wines, that he had laid in before the War: But these Gentlemen (as he said) had so vitiated the Nation's Palate, that no Man could believe his to be French, because it did not taste like what they sold for such. As a Man never pleads better than where his own personal Interest is concern'd, he exhibited to the Court with great Eloquence, That this new Corporation of Druggists had inflamed the Bills of Mortality, and puzzled the College of Physicians with Diseases for which they neither knew a Name or Cure. He accused some of giving all their Customers Cholicks and Megrims; and mentioned one who had boasted, he had a Tun of Claret by him, that in a Fortnight's Time should give the Gout to a Dozen of the healthfullest Men in the City, provided that their Constitutions were prepared for it by Wealth and Idleness. He then enlarged with a great Shew of Reason, upon the Prejudice, which these Mixtures and Compositions had done to the Brains of the English Nation; as is too visible (said he) from many late Pamphlets, Speeches and Sermons, as well as from the ordinary Conversations of the Youth of this Age. He then quoted an ingenious Person, who would undertake to know by a Man's Writings the Wine he most delighted in; and on that Occasion named a certain Satirist, whom he had discovered to be the Author of a Lampoon, by a manifest Taste of the Sloe, which shewed it self in it by much Roughness, and little Spirit.

IN the last Place he ascribed to the unnatural Tumults and Fermentations, which these Mixtures raise in our Blood; the Divisions, Heats and Animosities that reign among us; and in particular, asserted most of the modern Enthusiasms and Agitations to be nothing else, but the Effects of adulterated Port.

THE Counsel for the Brewers had a Face so extremely inflamed and illuminated with Carbuncles, that I did not wonder to see him an Advocate for these Sophistications. His Rhetorick was likewise such as I should have expected from the common Draught, which I found he often drank to a great Excess. Indeed I was so surprised at his Figure and Parts, that I ordered him to give me a Taste of his usual Liquor; which I had no sooner drank, but I found a Pimple rising in my Forehead; and felt such a sensible Decay in my Understanding, that I would not proceed in the Trial till the Fume of it was entirely dissipated.

THIS notable Advocate had little to say in the Defence of his Clients, but that they were under a Necessity of making Claret, if they would keep open their Doors, it being the Nature of Mankind to love every Thing, that is prohibited. He further pretended to reason, That it might be as profitable to the Nation to make French Wine as French Hats; and concluded with the great Advantage, that this had already brought to Part of the Kingdom. Upon which he informed the Court, That the Lands in Herefordshire were raised two Years Purchase since the Beginning of the War.

WHEN I had sent out my Summons to these People, I gave at the same Time Orders to each of them to bring the several Ingredients he made use of in distinct Phials, which they had done accordingly, and ranged them into two Rows on each Side of the Court. The Workmen were drawn up in Ranks behind them. The Merchant informed me, That in one Row of Phials were the several Colours they dealt in, and in the other the Tastes. He then shew'd me on the Right Hand one, who went by the Name of Tom Tintoret, who (as he told me) was the greatest Master in his Colouring of any Vintner in London. To give me a Proof of his Art, he took a Glass of fair Water; and by the Infusion of three Drops out of one of his Phials, converted it into a most beautiful pale Burgundy. Two more of the same Kind heightened it into a perfect Languedoc: From thence it is passed into a florid Hermitage: And after having gone through two or three other Changes, by the Addition of a single Drop, ended in a very deep Pontack. This ingenious Vertuoso seeing me very much surprized at his Art, told me, That he had not an Opportunity of shewing it in Perfection, having only made use of Water for the Ground-Work of his Colouring: But that if I were to see an Operation upon Liquors of stronger Bodies, the Art would appear to a much greater Advantage. He added, That he doubted not but it would please my Curiosity to see the Cider of one Apple take only only a Vermilion, when another, with a less Quantity of the same Infusion, would rise into a dark Purple, according to the different Texture of Parts in the Liquor. He informed me also, That he could hit the different Shades and Degrees of Red, as they appear in the Pink and the Rose, the Clove and the Carnation, as he had Rhenish or Moselle, Perry or White Port, to work in.

I was so satisfied with the Ingenuity of this Virtuoso, that, after having advised him to quit so dishonest a Profession, I promised him, in Consideration of his great Genius, to recommend him as a Partner to a Friend of mine, who has heaped up great Riches, and is a Scarlet Dyer.

THE Artists on my other Hand were ordered in the second Place to make some Experiments of their Skill before me: Upon which the famous Harry Sippet stepped out, and asked me, What I would be pleased to drink? At the same Time he filled out three or four White Liquors in a Glass, and told me, That it should be what I pleased to call for; adding very learnedly, That the Liquor before me was as the naked Substance, or first Matter of his Compound, to which he and his Friend, who stood over against him, could give what Accidents or Form they pleased. Finding him so great a Philosopher, I desired he would convey it into the Qualities and Essence of right Bourdeaux. Coming, coming Sir, (said he) with the Air of a Drawer; and after having cast his Eye on the several Tastes and Flavours, that stood before him, he took up a little Cruet, that was filled with a kind of inky Juice, and pouring some of it out into the Glass of White Wine, presented it to me and told me, This was the Wine, over which most of the Business of the last Term had been dispatched. I must confess, I looked upon that sooty Drug, which he held up in his Cruet, as the Quintessence of English Bourdeaux, and therefore desired him him to give me a Glass of it by it self, which he did with great Unwillingness. My Cat at that Time sate by me upon the Elbow of my Chair, and as I did not care for making the Experiment upon my self, I reached to her to sip of it, which had like to have cost her her Life; for notwithstanding it flung her at first into freakish Tricks, quite contrary to her usual Gravity, in less than a Quarter of an Hour she fell into Convulsions; and had it not been a Creature more tenacious of Life than any other, would certainly have died under the Operation.

I was so incensed by the Tortures of my innocent Domestick, and the unworthy Dealings of these Men, that I told them, if each of them had as many Lives as the injured Creature before them, they deserved to forfeit them for the pernicious Arts, which they used for their Profit. I therefore bid them look upon themselves as no better, than as a kind of Assassins and Murderers within the Law. However, since they had dealt so clearly with me, and laid before me their whole Practice, I dismissed them for that Time; with a particular Request, That they would not poison any of my Friends and Acquaintance, and take to some honest Livelihood without Loss of Time.

FOR my own Part, I have resolved hereafter to be very careful in my Liquors, and have agreed with a Friend of mine in the Army, upon their next March, to secure me two Hogsheads of the best Stomach-Wine in the Cellars of Verailles, for the Good of my Lucubrations, and the Comfort of my old Age.

Habeo senectuti magnam gratiam, que mibi sermonis aviditatem auris, potionis & sibi suscitat. Talk de Sen.

No 132. Saturday, Febr. 11. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 10.

After having applied my Mind with more than ordinary Attention to my Studies, it is my usual Custom to relax and unbend it in the Conversation of such, as are rather easy, than shining Companions. This I find particularly necessary for me before I retire to Rest, in order to draw my Slumbers upon me by Degrees, and fall asleep insensibly. This is the particular Use I make of a Set of heavy honest Men, with whom I have passed many Hours with much Indolence, though not with great Pleasure. Their Conversation is a Kind of Preparative for Sleep: It takes the Mind down from its Abstractions, leads it into the familiar Traces of Thought, and lulls it into that State of Tranquillity, which is the Condition of a Thinking Man, when he is but half awake. After this, my Reader will not be surprised to hear the Account, which I am about to give of a Club of my own Contemporaries, among whom I pass Two or Three Hours every Evening. This I look upon as taking my first Nap before I go to Bed. The Truth of it is, I should think my self unjust to Posterity, as well as to the Society of the Trumpet, of which I am a Member, did not I in some Part of my Writings give an Account of the Persons, among whom I have passed almost a sixth Part of my Time for these last Forty Years. Our Club consisted originally of Fifteen; but partly by the Severity of the Law in arbitrary Times, and parti-

ly by the natural Effects of old Age, we are at present reduced to a third Part of that Number: In which however we have this Consolation That the best Company is said to consist of Five Persons. I must confess, besides the aforementioned Benefit, which I meet with in the Conversation of this select Society, I am not the less pleased with the Company, in that I find myself the greatest Wit among them, and am heard as their Oracle in all Points of Learning and Difficulty.

SIR Geoffrey Notch, who is the oldest of the Club, has been in Possession of the Right-Hand Chair Time out of Mind, and is the only Man among us, that has the Liberty of stirring the Fire. This our Foreman is a Gentleman of an ancient Family, that came to a great Estate some Years before he had Discretion, and run it out in Hounds, Horses, and Cock-fighting; for which Reason he looks upon himself as an honest worthy Gentleman, who has had Misfortunes in the World, and calls every thriving Man a pitiful Upstart.

MAJOR Matchlock is the next Senior, who served in the last Civil Wars, and has all the Battels by Heart. He does not think any Action in Europe worth talking of since the Fight of Marton-Moor; and every Night tells us of his having been knocked off his Horse at the Rising of the London Apprentices; for which he is in great Esteem among us.

HONEST old Dick Reptile is the Third of our Society; He is a good-natured indolent Man, who speaks little himself, but laughs at our Jokes, and brings his young Nephew along with him, a Youth of Eighteen Years old, to shew him good Company, and give him a Taste of the World. This young Fellow sits generally silent; but whenever he opens his Mouth, or laughs at any Thing, that passes, he is constantly told by his Uncle, after a jocular Manner, Ay, ay, Jack, you you young Men think us Fools; but we old Men know you are.

THE greatest Wit of our Company, next to my self, is a Bencher of the neighbouring Inn, who in his Youth frequented the Ordinaries about Charing-Cross, and pretends to have been intimate with Jack Ogle. He has about Ten Disticks of Hudibras without Book, and never leaves the Club till he had applied them all. If any modern Wit be mentioned, or any Town-Frolick spoken of, he shakes his Head at the Dulness of the present Age, and tells us a Story of Jack Ogle.

FOR my own Part, I am esteemed among them, because they see I am something respected by others; tho' at the same Time I understand by their Behaviour, that I am considered by them as a Man of a great deal of Learning, but no Knowledge of the World; insomuch, That the Major sometimes, in the Height of his military Pride, calls me the Philosopher: And Sir Geoffery, no longer ago than last Night, upon a Dispute what Day of the Month it was then in Holland, pulled his Pipe out of his Mouth, and cried, What does the Scholar say to it?

OUR Club meets precisely at Six a-clock in the Evening; but I did not come last Night till half an Hour after Seven, by which means I escaped the Battle of Naseby, which the Major usually begins at about Three Quarters after Six: I found also, that my good Friend, the Bencher, had already spent Three of his Disticks, and only waiting an Opportunity to hear a Sermon spoken of, that he might introduce the Couplet where a Stick rhimes to Ecclesiastick. At my Entrance into the Room, they were naming a red Petticoat and a Cloak, by which I found that the Bencher had been diverting them with a Story of Jack Ogle.

I had no sooner taken my Seat, but Sir Geoffery, to shew his Good-will towards me, gave me me a Pipe of his own Tobacco, and stirred up the Fire. I lookt upon it as a Point of Morality, to be obliged by those, who endeavour to oblige me, and therefore in Requital for his Kindness, and to set the Conversation a-going, I took the best Occasion I could to put him upon telling us the Story of old Gantlett, which he always does with very particular Concern. He traced up his Descent on both Sides for several Generations, describing his Diet and Manner of Life, with his several Battels, and particularly that in which he fell. This Gantlett was a Game-Cock, upon whose Head the Knight, in his Youth, had won Five Hundred Pounds, and lost Two Thousand. This naturally set the Major upon the Account of Edge-bill Fight, and ended in a Duel of Jack Ogle's.

OLD Reptile was extremely attentive to all that was said, tho' it was the same he had heard every Night for these Twenty Years, and upon all Occasions, winked upon his Nephew to mind what passed.

THIS may suffice to give the World a Taste of our Innocent Conversation, which we spun out till about Ten of the Clock, when my Maid came with a Lanthorn to light me Home. I could not but reflect with my self, as I was going out, upon the talkative Humour of old Men, and the little Figure, which that Part of Life makes in one, who cannot employ this natural Propensity in Discourses, which would make him venerable. I must own, it makes me very melancholy in Company, when I hear a young Man begin a Story; and have often observed, That one of a Quarter of an Hour long in a Man of Five and Twenty, gathers Circumstances every Time he tells it, till it grows into a long Canterbury: Tale of Two Hours by that Time he is Threescore.

THE only Way of avoiding such a trifling and frivolous old Age, is, to lay up in our Way to it such Stores of Knowledge and Observations, as may make us useful and agreeable in our declining Years. The Mind of Man in a long Life will become a Magazine of Wisdom or Folly, and will consequently discharge it self in something impertinent or improving. For which Reason, as there is nothing more ridiculous, than an old trifling Story-teller, so there is nothing more venerable, than one who has turned his Experience to the Entertainment and Advantage of Mankind.

IN short, we who are in the last Stage of Life, and are apt to indulge our selves in Talk, ought to consider, if what we speak be worth being heard, and endeavour to make our Discourse like that of Nestor, which Homer compares to the Flowing of Honey for its Sweetness.

I am afraid I shall be thought guilty of this Excess I am speaking of, when I cannot conclude without observing, that Milton certainly thought of this Passage in Homer, when, in his Description of an eloquent Spirit, he says, His Tongue droped Manna.

Dum tacent, clamant.

Tull.

N^o 133. Tuesday, February 14. 1709.

Skeer-Lane, February 13.

SILENCE is sometimes more significant and sublime, than the most noble and most expressive Eloquence, and is on many Occasions the Indication of a great Mind. Several Authors have treated of Silence, as a Part of Duty and Discretion, but none of them have considered it in this Light. Homer compares the Noise and Clamour of the Trojans advancing towards the Enemy, to the Cackling of Cranes, when they invade an Army of Pygmies. On the contrary, he

he makes his Countrymen and Favourites, the Greeks, more forward in a regular determined March, and in the Depth of Silence. I find in the Accounts, which are given us of some of the more Eastern Nations, where the Inhabitants are disposed by their Constitutions and Climate to higher Strains of Thought, and more elevated Raptures than what we feel in the Northern Regions of the World, That Silence is a religious Exercise among them. For when their publick Devotions are in the greatest Fervour, and their Hearts lifted up as high as Words can raise them, there are certain Suspensions of Sound and Motion for a Time, in which the Mind is left to it self, and supposed to swell with such secret Conceptions, as are too big for Utterance. I have my self been wonderfully delighted with a Master-piece of Musick, when in the very Tumult and Ferment of their Harmony, all the Voices and Instruments have stopped short on a sudden, and after a little Pause recovered themselves again as it were, and renewed the Consort in all its Parts. Methoughts this short Interval of Silence has had more Musick in it, than any the same Space of Time before or after it. There are Two Instances of Silence in the Two greatest Poets, that ever wrote, which are something in them as sublime, as any of the Speeches in their whole Works. The first is that of Ajax, in the Eleventh Book of the Odyssy. Ulysses, who had been the Rival of this great Man in his Life, as well as the Occasion of his Death, upon meeting his Shade in the Region of departed Heroes, makes his Submission to him with an Humility next to Adoration, which the other passes over with dumb sullen Majesty, and such a Silence, as (to use the Words of Longinus) had more Greatness in it than any Thing he could have spoken.

THE next Instance I shall mention is in Virgil, where the Poet doubtless imitates this Silence of Ajax in that of Dido; though I do not know know that any of his Commentators have taken Notice of it. Aeneas finding among the Shades of despairing Lovers the Ghost of her, who had lately died for him, with the Wound still fresh upon her, addresses himself to her with expanded Arms, Flouds of Tears, and the most passionate Professions of his own Innocence, as to what had happened; all which Dido receives with the Dignity and Disdain of a resenting Lover, and an injured Queen; and is so far from vouchsafing him an Answer, that she does not give him a single Look. The Poet represents her as turning away her Face from him while he spoke to her; and after having kept her Eyes for some Time upon the Ground, as one that heard and contemned his Protestations, flying from him into the Grove of Myrtle, and into the Arms of another, whose Fidelity had deserved her Love.

I have often thought our Writers of Tragedy have been very defective in this Particular, and that they might have given great Beauty to their Works, by certain Stops and Pauses in the Representation of such Passions, as it is not in the Power of Language to express. There is something like this in the last Act of Venice Preserved, where Pierre is brought to an infamous Execution, and begs of his Friend, as a Reparation for past Injuries, and the only Favour he could do him, to rescue him from the Ignominy of the Wheel by stabbing him. As he is going to make this dreadful Request, he is not able to communicate it, but withdraws his Face from his Friend's Ear, and bursts into Tears. The melancholy Silence that follows hereupon, and continues till he has recovered himself enough to reveal his Mind to his Friend, raises in the Spectators a Grief, that is inexpressible, and an Idea of such a complicated Distress in the Actor, as Words cannot utter. It would look as ridiculous to many Readers to give Rules and Directions for proper Silences, as for Pen-

ning

ning a Whisper: But it is certain, That in the Extremity of most Passions, particularly Surprize, Admiration, Astonishment, nay, Rage it self, there is nothing more graceful than to see the Play stand still for a few Moments, and the Audience fixed in an agreeable Suspence, during the Silence of a skilful Actor.

BUT Silence never shews it self to so great an Advantage, as when it is made the Reply to Calumny and Defamation, provided that we give no just Occasion for them. We might produce an Example of it in the Behaviour of one, in whom it appeared in all its Majesty, and one, whose Silence, as well as his Person, was altogether Divine. When one considers this Subject only in its Sublimity, this great Instance could not but occur to me; and since I only make use of it to shew the highest Example of it, I hope I do not offend in it. To forbear replying to an unjust Reproach, and overlook it with a generous, or (if possible) with an entire Neglect of it, is one of the most heroick Acts of a great Mind: And I must confess, when I reflect upon the Behaviour of some of the greatest Men in Antiquity, I do not so much admire them that they deserved the Praise of the whole Age they lived in, as because they contemned the Envy and Detraction of it.

ALL that is incumbent on a Man of Worth, who suffers under so ill a Treatment, is to lie by for some Time in Silence and Obscurity, till the Prejudice of the Times be over, and his Reputation cleared. I have often read, with a great deal of Pleasure, a Legaey of the famous Lord Bacon, one of the greatest Genius's that our own, or any Country, has produced. After having bequeathed his Soul, Body, and Estate, in the usual Form, he adds, My Name and Memory I leave to Foreign Nations, and to my Countrymen, after some Time be passed over.

AT the same Time that I recommend this Philosophy to others, I must confess, I am so poor a Proficient in it my self, that if in the Course of my Lucubrations it happens, as it has done more than once, that my Paper is duller than in Conscience it ought to be, I think the Time an Age till I have an Opportunity of putting out another, and growing famous again for Two Days.

I must not close my Discourse upon Silence, without informing my Reader, That I have by me an elaborate Treatise on the Aposiopesis called an Et cetera, it being a Figure much used by some learned Authors, and particularly by the great Littleton, who, as my Lord Chief Justice Coke observes, had a most admirable Talent at an Et cetera.

ADVERTISMENT.

TO oblige the Pretty Fellows, and my Fair Readers, I have thought fit to insert the whole Passage above-mentioned relating to Dido, as it is translated by Mr. Dryden.

Not far from thence, the mournful Fields appear;
So call'd from Lovers, that inhabit there.
The Souls, whom that unhappy Flame invades,
In Secret Solitude, and Mirthless Shades, Make endless Moans, and pining with Desire Lament too late their unextinguish'd Fire.
Here Procris, Eryphile here, be found Baring her Breast, yet bleeding with the Wound, Made by her Son. He saw Pasiphae there,
With Phædra's Ghoſt, a foul incestuous Pair:
There Laodamia with Evadne moves:
Unhappy both, but loyal in their Loves.
Cœneus, a Woman once, and once a Man:
But ending in the Sex she first began.
Not far from these Phœnician Dido stood;
Fresh from her Wound, her Bosom batb'd in Blood.
Whom,

Whom, when the Trojan Hero hardly knew,
 Obscure in Shades, and with a doubtful View, (Doubtful as he, who runs thro' dusky Night,
 Or thinks he sees the Moon's uncertain Light :)
 With Tears he first approach'd the fallen Shade,
 And, as his Love inspired him, thus he said,
 Unhappy Queen ! Then is the common Breath
 Of Rumour true, in your reported Death ?
 And I, alas, the Cause ! By Heav'n, I vow,
 And all the Powers that rule the Realms below,
 Unwilling I forsook your friendly State,
 Commanded by the Goods, and forc'd by Fate ;
 Those Gods, that Fate, whose unresisted Might Have sent me to these Regions void of Light,
 Through the vast Empire of eternal Light.
 Nor dar'd I to presume, that, press'd with Grief,
 My Flight should urge you to this dire Relief.
 Stay, stay your Steps, and listen to my Vows :
 'Tis the last Interview, that Fate allows !
 In vain he thus attempts her Mind to move,
 With Tears and Pray'rs, and late repenting Love,
 Disdainfully she look'd, then turning round ;
 But fix'd her Eyes unmov'd upon the Ground ;
 And, what he says, and swareas, regards no more Than the deaf Rocks, when the loud Billows roar ;
 But whirl'd away, to shun his hateful Sight,
 Hid in the Forest, and the Shades of Night ;
 Then sought Sichæus through the shady Grove,
 Who answer'd all her Cares, and equal'd all her Love.

Quis talia fando,
 Myrmidonum Dolopumve, aut duri miles Ulyssi, Temperet a lacrymis. Virg.

N^o 134. Thursday, February 16. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 15.
 I WAS awakened very early this Morning by the distant Crowing of a Cock, which I thought had

ad the finest Pipe I ever heard. He seemed to me to strain his Voice more than ordinary, as if he designed to make himself heard to the remotest Corner of this Lane. Having entertained myself a little before I went to Bed with a Discourse in the Transmigration of Men into other Animals, I could not but fancy that this was the soul of some drowsy Bellman who used to sleep upon his Post, for which he was condemned to do Penance in Feathers, and distinguish the several Watches of the Night under the Outside of a Cock. While I was thinking of the Condition of this poor Bellman in Masquerade, I heard a great Knocking at my Door, and was soon after told by my Maid, That my worthy Friend the tall black Gentleman, who frequents the Coffee-Houses hereabouts, desired to speak with me. This ancient Pythagorean, who has as much Honesty as any Man living, but good Nature to an Excess, brought me the following Petition, which I am apt to believe he penned himself, the Petitioner not being able to express his Mind in Paper under his present Form, however famous he might have been for writing Verses, when he was in his original Shape.

To Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq; Censor of Great Britain.

The humble Petition of Job Chanticleer, in Behalf of himself, and many other poor Sufferers in the same Condition,

Sheweth,

THAT whereas your Petitioner is truly descended of the ancient Family of the Chanticleers, at Cock-Hall near Rumsford in Essex, it has been his Misfortune to come into the mercenary Hands of a certain ill-disposed Person, commonly called an Higler, who, under the close Confinement of a Pannier, has conveyed him and many others up to London; but hearing by Chance of your Worship's great Humanity towards Robin-Redbreasts and Tom-Tits, he is emboldened to beseech you to take his deplorable Condition into your tender Consideration, who otherwise must suffer (with many Thousands more as innocent as himself) that inhumane Barbarity of a Sbove-Tuske Persecution. We humbly hope, that our Courage and Vigilance may plead for us on this Occasion.

“ hearing

YOUR poor Petitioner most earnestly implores your immediate Protection from the Insolence of the Rabble, the Batteries of Cat-sticks, and a painful lingering Death.

And your Petitioner, &c.

From my Coop in Clare-Market,

February 13. 1709.

UPON Delivery of this Petition, the worthy Gentleman, who presented it, told me the Customs of many wise Nations of the East, through which he had travelled; That nothing was more frequent than to see a Dervise lay out a whole Year's Income in the Redemption of Larks or Linnets that had unhappily fallen into the Hands of Bird-Catchers: That it was also usual to run between a Dog and a Bull to keep them from hurting one another, or to lose the Use of a Limb in parting a Couple of furious Mastiffs. He then insisted upon the Ingratitude and Disingenuity of treating in this Manner a necessary and domestick Animal, that has made the whole House keep good Hours, and called up the Cook-Maid for Five Years together. What would a Turk say, continued he, should he hear, that it is a common Entertainment in a Nation, which pretends to be one of the most civilized of Europe, to tie an innocent Animal to a Stake and put him to an ignominious Death, who has perhaps been the Guardian and Proveditor of a poor Family.

VOL

great Family as long as he was able to get Eggs for his Mistress.

I thought what this Gentleman said was very reasonable; and have often wondered, that we do not lay aside a Custom which makes us appear barbarous to Nations much more rude and unpolished than our selves. Some French Writers have represented this Diversion of the common People much to our Disadvantage, and imputed it to natural Fierceness and Cruelty of Temper; as they do some other Entertainments peculiar to our Nation: I mean those elegant Diversions of Bull-baiting and Prize-fighting, with the like ingenious Recreations of the Bear-Garden. I wish I knew how to answer this Re-broach which is cast upon us, and excuse the Death of so many innocent Cocks, Bulls, Dogs, and Bears, as have been set together by the Ears, or died untimely Deaths, only to make us Sport.

IT will be said, That these are the Entertainments of common People. It is true; but they are the Entertainments of no other common people. Besides, I am afraid there is a Tincture of the same savage Spirit in the Diversions of those of higher Rank, and more refined Relish. Raine observes, That the English Theatre very much delights in Bloodshed, which he likewise represents as an Indication of our Tempers. I myself, there is something very horrid in the publick Executions of an English Tragedy. Stabbing and Poisoning, which are performed behind the Scenes in other Nations, must be done openly among us, to gratify the Audience.

WHEN poor Sandford was upon the Stage, I have seen him groaning upon a Wheel, stuck with Daggers, impaled alive, calling his Executioners, with a dying Voice, Cruel Dogs and villains! And all this to please his judicious spectators, who were wonderfully delighted with seeing a Man in Torment so well acted. The poor rush of it is, the Politeness of our English Stage, in in Regard to Decorum, is very extraordinary. We act Murders, to shew our Intrepidity, and Adulteries to shew our Gallantry: Both of them are frequent in our most taking Plays, with this Difference only, That the first are done in the Sight of the Audience, and the other wrought up to such an Height upon the Stage, that they are almost put in Execution before the Actor can get behind the Scenes.

I would not have it thought, that there is just Ground for those Consequences which our Enemies draw against us from these Practices; but methinks one would be sorry for any Manner of Occasion for such Misrepresentations of us. The Virtues of Tenderness, Compassion, and Humanity, are those by which Men are distinguished from Brutes, as much as by Reason itself; and it would be the greatest Reproach to a Nation to distinguish it self from all others by any Defect in these particular Virtues. For which Reasons, I hope that my dear Countrymen will no longer expose themselves by an Effusion of Blood, whether it be of Theatrical Heroes, Cocks, or any other innocent Animals which we are not obliged to slaughter for our Safety, Convenience or Nourishment. When any of these Ends are not served in the Destruction of a living Creature, I cannot but pronounce it a great Piece of Cruelty, if not a kind of Murder.

Quod si in hoc erro, quod animos hominum immortales esse credam, libenter erro: Nec mibi hunc errorem, quo delector, dum vivi, extorqueri volo: Sin mortuus (ut quidam minuti Philosophi censent) nihil sentiam; non vero, ne hunc errorem meum mortui Philosophi irrideant. Tull.

No 135. Saturday, February 13. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 17.

SEVERAL Letters which I have lately received give me Information, That some well-disposed Persons have taken Offence at my using the Word Free-thinker as a Term of Reproach. To set therefore this Matter in a clear Light, I must declare, that no one can have a greater Veneration than my self for the Free-thinkers of antiquity, who acted the same Part in those Times, as the great Men of the Reformation did in several Nations of Europe, by exerting themselves against the Idolatry and Superstition of the Times in which they lived. It was by this noble Impulse that Socrates and his Disciples, as well as all the Philosophers of Note in Greece, and Cicero, Seneca, with all the learned Men of Rome, endeavoured to enlighten their Contemporaries amidst the Darkness and Ignorance in which the World was then sunk and buried.

THE great Points which these Free-Thinkers endeavoured to establish and inculcate into the Minds of Men, were, the Formation of the Universe, the Superintendence of Providence, the Perfection of the Divine Nature, the Immortality of the Soul, and the future State of Rewards and Punishments. They all complied with the Religion of their Country, as much as possible, possible, in such Particulars as did not contradict and pervert these great and fundamental Doctrines of Mankind. On the contrary, the Persons who now set up for Free-thinkers, are such as endeavour by a little Trash of Words and Sophistry, to weaken and destroy those very Principles, for the Vindication of which, Freedom of Thought at first became laudable and heroick. These Apostates from Reason and good Sense, can look at the glorious Frame of Nature, without paying an Adoration to him that raised it; can consider the great Revolutions in the Universe, without lifting-up their Minds to that superior Power which hath the Direction of it; can presume to censure the Deity in his Ways towards Men; can level Mankind with the Beasts that perish; can extinguishing their own Minds all the pleasing Hopes of a future State, and lull themselves into a stupid Security against the Terrors of it. If one were to take the Word Priestcraft out of the Mouths of these shallow Monsters, they would be immediately struck dumb. It is by the Help of this single Term that they endeavour to disappoint the good Works of the most learned and venerable Order of Men, and harden the Hearts of the Ignorant against the very Light of Nature, and the common received Notions of Mankind. We ought not to treat such Miscreants as these upon the Foot of fair Disputants, but to pour out Contempt upon them, and speak of them with Scorn and Infamy, as the Pests of Society, the Revilers of Humane Nature, and the Blasphemers of a Being, whom a good Man would rather die than hear dishonoured. Cicero, after having mentioned the great Heroes of Knowledge that recommended this Divine Doctrine of the Immortality of the Soul, calls those small Pretenders to Wisdom who declared against it, certain Attute Philosophers, using a Diminutive even of the Word Little, to express the despisable

35.
dia
Doc Per such So rin n of ick.
nse, ith-
it;
Uni suit;
ays
the own ate, inst
the ese ately ngle ood der ant om-ght
the con-orn eviof die
ing hat Im-rover-ive spiri-
ble

cable Opinion he had of them. The Contempt he throws upon them in another Passage is yet more remarkable, where, to shew the mean Thoughts he entertains of them, he declares, he would rather be in the Wrong with Plato, than in the Right with such Company. There is indeed nothing in the World so ridiculous as one of these grave Philosophical Free-Thinkers, that hath neither Passions nor Appetites to gratify, no Heats of Blood nor Vigour of Constitution that can turn his System of Infidelity to his Advantage, or raise Pleasures out of them which are inconsistent with the Belief of an Hereafter. One that has neither Wit, Gallantry, Mirth, or Youth to indulge by these Notions, but only a poor, joyless, uncomfortable Vanity of distinguishing himself from the rest of Mankind, is rather to be regarded as a mischievous Lunatick, than a mistaken Philosopher. A chaste Infidel, a speculative Libertine, is an Animal that I should not believe to be in Nature, did I not sometimes meet with this Species of Men, that plead for the Indulgence of their Passions in the midst of a severe studious Life, and talk against the Immortality of the Soul over a Dish of Coffee.

I would fain ask a Minute Philosopher, what Good he proposes to Mankind by the publishing of his Doctrines? Will they make a Man a better Citizen, or a Father of a Family, a more endearing Husband, Friend, or Son? Will they enlarge his publick or private Virtues, or correct any of his Frailities or Vices? What is there either joyful or glorious in such Opinions? Do they either refresh or enlarge our Thoughts? Do they contribute to the Happiness, or raise the Dignity of humane Nature? The only Good that I have ever heard pretended to, is, That they banish Terrors, and set the Mind at Ease. But whose Terrors do they banish? It is certain, if there were any Strength in their Arguments, they would give great Disturbance to Minds that are influenced by Virtue, Honour and Morality, and take from us the only Comforts and Supports of Affliction, Sickness, and Old Age. The Minds therefore which they set at Ease, are only those of impenitent Criminals and Malefactors, and which to the Good of Mankind, should be in perpetual Terror and Alarm.

I must confess, nothing is more usual than for a Free-Thinker, in Proportion as the Insolence of Scepticism is abated in him by Years and Knowledge, or humbled or beaten down by Sorrow or Sickness, to reconcile himself to the general Conceptions of reasonable Creatures; so that we frequently see the Apostates turning from their Revolt toward the End of their Lives, and employing the Refuse of their Parts in promoting those Truths which they had before endeavoured to invalidate.

THE History of a Gentleman in France is very well known, who was so zealous a Promoter of Infidelity, that he had got together a select Company of Disciples, and travelled into all Parts of the Kingdom to make Converts. In the midst of his fantastical Success he fell sick, and was reclaimed to such a Sense of his Condition, that after he had passed some Time in great Agonies and Horrors of Mind, he begged those who had the Care of burying him, to dress his Body in the Habit of a Capuchin, that the Devil might not run away with it. And to do further Justice upon himself, desired them to tie an Halter about his Neck, as a Mark of that ignominious Punishment, which in his own Thoughts he had so justly deserved.

I would not have Persecution so far disgraced, as to wish these Vermin might be animadverted on by any legal Penalties; though I think it would be highly reasonable, that those few of them who die in the Profession of their Infidelity, should have such Tokens of Infamy fixed fixed upon them, as might distinguish those Bodies which are given up by the Owners to Oblivion and Putrefaction, from those which rest in Hope, and shall rise in Glory. But at the same Time that I am against doing them the Honour of the Notice of our Laws, which ought not to suppose there are such Criminals in Being, I have often wondered, how they can be tolerated in any mixed Conversations while they are venting these absurd Opinions; and should think, that if on any such Occasion, half a Dozen of the most robust Christians in the Company would lead one of these Gentlemen to a Pump, or convey him into a Blanket, they would do very good Service both to Church and State. I do not know how the Laws stand in this Particular; but I hope, whatever Knocks, Bangs or Thumps, might be given with such an honest Intention, would not be construed as a Breach of the Peace. I dare say, they would not be returned by the Person who receives them; for whatever these Fools may say in the Vanity of their Hearts, they are too wise to risque their Lives upon the Uncertainty of their Opinions.

WHEN I was a young Man about this Town, I frequented the Ordinary of the Black Horse in Holbourn, where the Person that usually presided at the Table was a rough old-fashioned Gentleman, who, according to the Customs of those Times, had been the Major and Preacher of a Regiment. It happened one Day that a noisy young Officer, bred in France, was venting some new-fangled Notions, and speaking, in the Gaiety of his Humour, against the Dispensations of Providence. The Major at first only desired him to talk more respectively of one for whom all the Company had an Honour; but finding him run on his Extravagance, began to reprimand him after a more serious Manner. Young Man, said he, do not abuse your Benefactor whilst you are eating his Bread. Consider whose Air you breathe, whose Presence you are in, and who it is that gave you the Power of that very Speech which you make use of to his Dishonour. The young Fellow, who thought to turn Matters into a Jeſt, asked him, if he was going to preach? But at the same Time desired him to take Care what he said when he spoke to a Man of Honour. A Man of Honour, says the Major, thou art an Infidel and a Blasphemer, and I shall use thee as ſuch. In ſhort, the Quarrel ran ſo high, that the Major was desired to walk out. Upon their coming into the Garden, the old Fellow advised his Antagoniſt to conſider the Place into which one Paſſ might drive him; but finding him grow upon him to a Degree of Scurrility, as believing the Advice proceeded from Fear; Sirrah, says he, If a Thunderbolt does not ſtrike the dead before I come at thee, I shall not fail to chaffiſe thee for thy Profaneness to thy Maker, and thy Sawciness to his Servant. Upon this he drew his Sword, and cried out with a loud Voice, The Sword of the Lord and of Gideon; which ſo terrified his Antagoniſt, that he was immediately disarmed, and thrown upon his Knees. In this Poſture he begged his Life; but the Major refuſed to grant it, before he had asked Pardon for his Offence in a ſhort extemporaſy Prayer which the old Gentleman diſcardeſt to him upon the Spot, and which his Proſelyte repeated after him in the Preſence of the whole Ordinary, that were now gathered about him in the Garden.

Deprendi miserum eſt: Fabio vel judice vincam. Hor.

No 136. Tuesday, Febr. 21. 1709.

White's Chocolate-house, February 18.

The History of Tom Varnish.

BECAUSE I have a profefſed Averſion to long Beginnings of Stories, I will go into this at once, by telling you, That there dwells near the Royal Exchange as happy a Couple as ever enter'd into Wedlock. These live in that mutual Confidence of each other, which renders the Satisfactions of Marriage even greater than those of Friendship, and makes Wife and Husband the dearest Appellations of humane Life. Mr. Ballance is a Merchant of good Consideration, and understands the World not from Speculation, but Practice. His Wife is the Daughter of an honest House, ever bred in a Family-Way; and has, from a natural good Understanding, and great Innocence, a Freedom which Men of Sense know to be the certain Sign of Virtue, and Fools take to be an Encouragement to Vice.

TOM VARNISH, a young Gentleman of the Middle-Temple, by the Bounty of a good Father who was so obliging as to die, and leave him in his twenty-fourth Year, besides a good Estate, a large Sum, which lay in the Hands of Mr. Ballance, had by this Means an Intimacy at his House; and being one of those hard Students who read Plays for Improvement in the Law, took his Rules of Life from thence. Upon mature Deliberation, he conceived it very proper, that he, as a Man of Wit and Pleasure of the Town, should have an Intrigue with his Merchant's Wife. He no sooner thought of this Adventure, but he began it by an amorous Epistle to the Lady, and a faithful Promise to meet upon her, at a certain Hour the next Evening, when he knew her Husband was to be absent.

THE Letter was no sooner received, but it was communicated to the Husband, and produced no other Effect in him, than that he joined with his Wife to raise all the Mirth they could out of this fantastical Piece of Gallantry. They were so little concerned at this dangerous Man of Mode, that they plotted Ways to perplex him without hurting him. Varnish comes exactly at his Hour; and the Lady's well-acted Confusions at his Entrance, gave him Opportunity to repeat some Couplets very fit for the Occasion with very much Grace and Spirit. His Theatrical Manner of making Love was interrupted by an Alarm of the Husband's coming; and the Wife, in a personated Terror, beseeched him, If he had any Value for the Honour of a Woman that loved him, he would jump out of the Window. He did so, and fell upon Feather-Beds placed on purpose to receive him.

IT is not to be conceived how great the Joy of an amorous Man is when he has suffered for his Mistress, and is never the worse for it. Var-nish the next Day writ a most elegant Biller, wherein he said all that Imagination could form upon the Occasion. He violently protested, going out of the Window was no Way terrible, but as it was going from her, with several other kind Expressions, which procured him a second Assignment. Upon his second Visit, he was conveyed by a faithful Maid into her Bed-Chamber, and left there to expect the Arrival of her Mistress. But the Wench, according to her Instructions, ran in again to him, and lock'd the Door after her to keep out her Master. She had just Time enough to convey the Lover into a Chest before she admitted the Husband and his Wife into the Room.

YOU may be sure that Trunk was absolutely necessary to be opened; but upon her Husband's ordering it, she assured him, she had taken all the Care imaginable in packing-up the Things with her own Hand, and he might send the Trunk aboard as soon as he thought fit. The easie Husband believed his Wife, and the good Couple went to Bed; Var-nish having the Happiness to pass the Night in his Mistress's Bed-Chamber without Molestation. The Morning arose, but our Lover was not well situated to observe her Blushes; so that all we know of his Sentiments on this Occasion, is, That he heard Ballance ask for the Key, and say, he would himself go with this Chest, and have it opened before the Captain of the Ship, for the greater Safety of so valuable a Lading.

for

THE Goods were hoisted away, and Mr. Bal- lance marching by his Chest with great Care and Diligence, omitted nothing that might give his Passenger Perplexity: But to consummate all, he delivered the Chest, with strict Charge, in case they were in Danger of being taken, to throw it over board, for there were Letters in it, the Matter of which might be of great Service to the Enemy.

N. B. IT is not thought adviseable to proceed further in this Account, Mr. Varnish being just returned from his Travels, and willing to conceal the Occasion of his first applying himself to the Languages.

Sheer-Lane, February 20.

I have been earnestly solicited for a further Term, for wearing the Fardingal by several of the Fair Sex, but more especially by the following Petitioners.

The humble Petition of Deborah Hark, Sarah Threadpaper, and Rachel Thimble, Spinsters, and single Women, commonly called Waiting-Maids, in Behalf of themselves and their Sisterhood;

Sheweth,

THAT your Worship hath been pleased to order and command, That no Person or Persons shall presume to wear quilted Petticoats, on Forfeiture of the said Petticoats, or Penalty of wearing Ruffs, after the 17th Instant now expired.

THAT

THAT your Petitioners have Time out of Mind been entitled to wear their Ladies Clothes, or to sell the same.

THAT the Sale of the said Clothes is spoiled by your Worship's said Prohibition.

YOUR Petitioners therefore most humbly pray, That your Worship would please to allow, That all Gentlewomens Gentlewomen may be allowed to wear the said Dress, or to repair the Loss of such a Perquisite in such Manner as your Worship shall think fit.

And your Petitioners, &c.

I do allow the Allegations of this Petition to be just, and forbid all Persons but the Petitioners, or those who shall purchase from them, to wear the said Garment after the Date hereof.

Ter centum tonat ore Deos, Erebumq; Chaosque

Tergeminamque Hecaten. — Virg.

N° 137. Thursday, Febr. 23, 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 22.

DICK Reptile and I sat this Evening later than the rest of the Club; and as some Men are better Company when only with one Friend, others when there is a larger Number, I found Dick to be of the former Kind. He was bewailing to me in very just Terms, the Offences which he frequently met with in the Abuse of Speech: Some use ten times more Words than they need, some put in Words quite foreign to their Purpose, and others adorn their Discourses with Oaths and Blasphemies by Way of Tropes and Figures. What my good Friend started, dwelt upon me after I came Home this Evening, and led me into an Enquiry with my self, Whence should 36. t of dies ailed bly almener to such ordinary tio-to J er en

nd,
nd il-ched, ur-ith, nd
elt nd ce
ld

should arise such strange Extravagancies in Discourse? Whereas it must be obvious to all reasonable Beings, That the sooner a Man speaks his Mind, the more complaisant he is to the Man with whom he talks: But upon mature Deliberation, I am come to this Resolution, That for one Man who speaks to be understood, there are ten who talk only to be admired.

THE ancient Greeks had little independent Syllables called Expletives, which they brought into their Discourses both in Verse and Prose, for no other Purpose but for the better Grace and Sound of their Sentences and Periods. I know no Example but this which can authorize the Use of more Words than are necessary. But whether it be from this Freedom taken by that wise Nation, or however it arises, Dick Ropile hit upon a very just and common Cause of Offence in the Generality of the People of all Orders. We have one here in our Lane who speaks nothing without quoting an Authority; for it is always with him, so and so, as the Man said. He asked me this Morning, How I did? as the Man said, and hoped I would come now and then to see him, as the Man said. I am acquainted with another, who never delivers himself upon any Subject, but he cries, He only speaks his poor Judgment; this is his humble Opinion; or as for his Part, if he might presume to offer any Thing on that Subject. But of all the Persons who add Elegancies and Superfluities to their Discourses, those who deserve the foremost Rank are the Swearers; and the Lump of these may, I think, be very aptly divided into the common Distinction of high and low. Dullness and Barrenness of Thought is the Original of it in both these Sects, and they differ only in Constitution: The Low is generally a phlegmatick, and the High a choleric Coxcomb. The Man of Phlegm is sensible of the Emptiness of his Discourse, and will tell you, That I fack-ins,

ins, such a Thing is true: Or if you warm him a little, he may run into Passion, and cry, Od-bodikins, you do not say right. But the High affects a Sublimity in Dulness, and invokes Hell and Damnation at the breaking of a Glass, or the Slowness of a Drawer.

I was the other Day trudging along Fleet-street on Foot, and an old Army-Friend came up with me. We were both going towards Westminster, and finding the Streets were so crowded that we could not keep together, we resolved to club for a Coach. This Gentleman I knew to be the first of the Order of the Cholerick. I must confess, (were there no Crime in it) nothing could be more diverting than the Impertinence of the High Juror: For whether there is Remedy or not against what offends him, still he is to shew he is offended, and he must sure not omit to be magnificently passionate, by falling on all Things in his Way. We were stopped by a Train of Coaches at Temple-Bar. What the Devil! (says my Companion) cannot you drive on, Coachman? D--n you all, for a Set of Sons of Whores, you will stop here to be paid by the Hour! There is not such a Set of confounded Dogs as the Coachmen unhanged! But these rascally Cits—'ounds, why should not there be a Tax to make these Dogs widen their Gates? Oh! but the Hell-hounds move at last. Ay, said I, I knew you would make 'em whip on if once they heard you—No, says he, but would it not fret a Man to the Devil, to pay for being carried flower than he can walk. Look'ee, there is for ever a Stop at this Hole by St. Clement's Church. Blood, you Dog!—Hark'ee, Sirrah, —Why, and be d—n'd to you, do not you drive over that Fellow?—Thunder, Furies, and Damnation! I'll cut your Ears off, you Fellow before there—Come hither, you Dog you, and let me ring your Neck round your Shoulders.

We

I 37. him Ode
h af-Hell
s, or fins with min-wded ed to w to x. I noertire is ll. he e not lling pped
the rive Sons
the nded hese e be tes? said once d it eing ere ent's rah, you
and llow
and lers.
We

N^o 137. THE TATLER. III

We had a Repetition of the same Eloquence at the Cockpit, and the turning into Palace-Yard.

THIS gave me a perfect Image of the Insignificancy of the Creatures who practise this Enormity; and made me conclude, That it is ever Want of Sense makes a Man guilty in this Kind. It was excellently well said, That this Folly had no Temptation to excuse it, no Man being born of a swearing Constitution. In a Word, a few rumbling Words and Consonants clapped together without any Sense, will make an accomplished Swearer: And it is needless to dwell long upon this blustering Impertinence, which is already banished out of the Society of well-bred Men, and can be useful only to Bullies and ill Tragick Writers, who would have Sound and Noise pass for Courage and Sense.

St. James's Coffee-house, February 22.

THERE arrived a Messenger last Night from Harwich, who left that Place just as the Duke of Marlborough was going on Board. The Character of this important General going out by the Command of his Queen, and at the Request of his Country, puts me in Mind of that noble Figure which Shakespear gives Harry the Fifth upon his Expedition against France. The Poet wishes for Abilities to represent so great an Hero.

Ob for a Muse of Fire! (says he)
Then should the warlike Harry, like himself,
Assume the Port of Mars; and at his beels, Leash'd in, like Hounds, should Famine, Sword and Crouch for Employments. (Fire,

A Conqueror drawn like the God of Battel, with such a dreadful Leash of Hell-hounds at his Command, makes a Picture of as much Majesty and Terror, as is to be met with in any Poet.

SHAKE-

SHAKESPEAR understood the Force of this particular Allegory so well, that he had it in his Thoughts in another Passage, which is altogether as daring and sublime as the former. What I mean is in the Tragedy of Julius Cesar, where Antony, after having foretold the Blood-shed and Destruction that should be brought up on the Earth by the Death of that great Man, to fill up the Horror of his Description, adds the following Verses:

*And Cæsar's Spirit ranging for Revenge,
With Ate by his Side, come hot from Hell,
Shall in these Confines, with a Monarch's Voice, Cry Havock; and let slip the Dogs of War.*

I do not question but these Quotations will call to Mind in my Readers of Learning and Taste, that imaginary Person described by Virgil with the same Spirit. He mentions it upon the Occasion of a Peace which was restored to the Roman Empire, and which we may now hope for from the Departure of that great Man who has given Occasion to these Reflections. The Temple of Janus (says he) shall be shut, and in the Midst of it Military Fury shall sit upon a Pile of broken Arms, loaded with an hundred Chains, bellowing with Madness, and grinding his Teeth in Blood.

*Claudentur portæ, furor impius intus.
Seva sedens super arma, &c centum vintus abenis.
Post tergum nodis, fremit horridus ore cruento.*

- * Janus himself before his Fane shall wait,
- * And keep the dreadful Issues of his Gate,
- * With Bolts and Iron Bars. Within remains
- * Imprison'd Fury bound in brazen Chains;
- * High on a Trophy rais'd of useles Arms,
- * He sits, and threatens the World with vain Alarms.

Dryden

AD-

ADVERTISEMENT.

THE Tickets which were delivered out for the Benefit of Signor Nicolini Grimaldi on the 24th Instant, will be taken on Thursday the 2d of March, is Benefit being deferred till that Day.

N. B. IN all Opera's for the Future, where it Thunder and Lightens in proper Time and in Tune, the Matter of the said Lightning is to be the finest Rosin; and for the Sake of Harmony, the same which is used to the best Cremona Fiddles.

NOTE also, That the true perfumed Lightning is only prepared and sold by Mr. Charles Lillie, at the Corner of Beauford-Buildings.

THE Lady who has chosen Mr. Bickerstaff for her Valentine, and is at a Loss what to present him with, is desired to make him, with her own Hands, a warm Night-cap.

Secretosque pios, bis dantem jura Catonem. Virg.

N° 138. Saturday, Febr. 25. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 24.

IT is an Argument of a clear and worthy Spirit in a Man to be able to disengage himself from the Opinions of others, so far as not to let the Deference due to the Sense of Mankind insnare him to act against the Dictates of his own Reason. But the Generality of the World are so far from walking by any such Maxim, that it is almost a standing Rule to do as others do, or be ridiculous. I have heard my old Friend Mr. Hart speak it as an Observation among the Players, That it is impossible to act with Grace, except the Actor has forgot that he is before an Audience. Till he has arrived at that, his Motion, his Air, his every Step

Step and Gesture, has something in them which discovers he is under a Restraint for Fear of being ill received ; or if he considers himself as in the Presence of those who approve his Behaviour, you see an Affectation of that Pleasure run through his whole Carriage. It is as common in Life, as upon the Stage, to behold a Man in the most indifferent Action betray a Sense he has of doing what he is about gracefully. Some have such an immoderate Relish for Applause, that they expect it for Things, which in themselves are so frivolous, that it is impossible, without this Affectation, to make them appear worthy either of Blame or Praise. There is Will Glare, so passionately intent upon being admired, that when you see him in publick Places, every Muscle of his Face discovers his Thoughts are fixed upon the Consideration of what Figure he makes. He will often fall into a musing Posture to attract Observation, and is then obstructing himself upon the Company when he pretends to be withdrawn from it. Such little Arts are the certain and infallible Tokens of a superficial Mind, as the avoiding Observation is the Sign of a great and sublime one. It is therefore extremely difficult for a Man to judge even of his own Actions, without forming to himself an Idea of what he should act, were it in his Power to execute all his Desires without the Observation of the rest of the World. There is an Allegorical Fable in Plato, which seems to admonish us, That we are very little acquainted with our selves, while we know our Actions are to pass the Censures of others ; but had we the Power to accomplish all our Wishes unobserved, we should then easily inform our selves how far we are possessed of real and intrinsick Virtue. The Fable I was going to mention, is that of Gyges, who is said to have had an enchanted Ring, which had in it a miraculous Quality, making him who wore it, visible or invisible, as he turned which turned it to or from his Body. The Use Gyges made of his occasional Invisibility, was, by the Advantage of it, to violate a Queen, and murder a King. Tully takes Notice of this Allegory, and says very handsomely, That a Man of Honour who had such a Ring, would act just in the same Manner as he would do without it. It is indeed no small Pitch of Virtue under the Temptation of Impunity, and the Hopes of accomplishing all a Man desires, not to transgress the Rules of Justice and Virtue; but this is rather not being an ill Man, than being positively a good one; and it seems wonderful, that so great a Soul as that of Tully, should not form to himself a Thousand worthy Actions which a virtuous Mind would be prompted to by the Possession of such a Secret. There are certainly some Part of Mankind who are Guardian Beings to the other. Sallust could say of Cato, That he had rather be than appear good; but indeed, this Eulogium rose no higher than (as I just now hinted) to an Inoffensiveness, rather than an active Virtue. Had it occurred to the noble Orator to represent, in his Language, the glorious Pleasures of a Man secretly employed in Beneficence and Generosity, it would certainly have made a more charming Page than any he has now left behind him. How might a Man, furnished with Gyges's Secret, employ it in bringing together distant Friends, laying Snares for creating Good-will in the Room of groundless Hatred; in removing the Pangs of an unjust Jealousy, the Shyness of an imperfect Reconciliation, and the Tremor of an awful Love? Such a one could give Confidence to bashful Merit, and Confusion to overbearing Impudence.

C E R T A I N it is, That secret Kindnesses done to Mankind, are as beautiful as secret Injuries are detestable. To be invisibly good, is as God-like, as to be invisibly ill, Diabolical. As degenerate as we are apt to say the Age we live in in is, there are still amongst us Men of illustrious Minds, who enjoy all the Pleasures of good Actions, except that of being commended for them. There happens among others very worthy Instances of a publick Spirit, one of which I am obliged to discover, because I know not otherwise how to obey the Commands of the Benefactor. A Citizen of London has given Directions to Mr. Rainer, the Writing-master of Paul's School, to educate at his Charge Ten Boys (who shall be nominated by me) in Writing and Accompts, till they shall be fit for any Trade. I desire therefore such as know any proper Objects for receiving this Bounty, to give Notice thereof to Mr. Morpew, or Mr. Lillie, and they shall, if properly qualified, have Instructions accordingly.

ACTIONS of this Kind have in them something so transcendent, that it is an Injury to applaud them, and a Diminution of that Merit which consists in shunning our Approbation. We shall therefore leave them to enjoy that glorious Obscurity, and silently admire their Virtue, who can contemn the most delicious of human Pleasures, that of receiving due Praise. Such celestial Dispositions very justly suspend the Discovery of their Benefactions, till they come where their Actions cannot be misinterpreted, and receive their first Congratulations in the Company of Angels.

ADVERTISEMENT.

WHEREAS Mr. Bickerstaff, by a Letter bearing Date this 24th of February, has received Information, That there are in and about the Royal Exchange a Sort of People commonly known by the Name of Wheters, who drink themselves into an intermediate State of being neither drunk or sober before the Hours of Change, or Business, and in that Condition buy and sell Stocks, discount Notes, and do many other of well-disposed, Citizens; This is to give Notice, that from this Day forward, no Whetter shall be able to give or endorse any Note, or execute any other Part of Commerce, after the third Half-pint, before the Hour of one: And, whoever shall transact any Matter or Matters with a Whetter, (not being himself of that Order) shall be conducted to Moorfields upon the first Application of his next a-kim.

Act

N. B. NO Tavern near the Change shall deliver Wine to such as drink at the Bar standing, except the same shall be Three Pints of the best Cyder; and the Master of the House shall produce a Certificate of the same from Mr. Tintoret, or some other credible Wine-Painter.

WHEREAS the Model of the intended Bedlam is now finished, and that the Edifice it self will be very suddenly begun; it is desired, That all such as have Relations, whom they would recommend to our Care, would ring in their Proofs with all Speed; none being to be admitted of Course but Lovers, who are put into an immediate Regimen. Young Politicians also are received without Fees or Examination.

— Nihil est quod credere de se est iniquum
Non possit, cum iudicatur Diis aequa potestas. Juv.

139. Tuesday, February 28. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, February 27.

WHEN I reflect upon the many Nights I have late up for some Months last past in the greatest Anxiety for the Good of my Neighbours and Contemporaries, it is no small Discouragement to me, to see how slow a Progress make in the Reformation of the World. But indeed I must do my Female Readers the Justice to own, that their tender Hearts are much more suscepsusceptible of good Impressions, than the Mind of the other Sex. Busines and Ambition take in Mens Thoughts too much to leave Room for Philosophy: But if you speak to Women in a Style and Manner proper to approach them, they never fail to improve by your Counsel: I shall therefore for the Future turn my Thoughts more particularly to their Service, and study the best Methods to adorn their Persons, and inform their Minds in the justest Method to make them what Nature designed them, the most beauteous Objects of our Eyes, and the most agreeable Companions of our Lives. But when I say this, I must not omit at the same Time to look into their Errors and Mistakes, that being the readiest Way to the intended End of adorning and instructing them. It must be acknowledged, that the very Inadvertencies of this Sex are owing to the other; for if Men were not Flatterers, Women could not fall into that general Cause of all their Follies, and our Misfortunes, their Love of Flattery. Were the Commendation of these agreeable Creatures built upon its proper Foundation, the higher we raised their Opinion of themselves, the greater would be the Advantage to our Sex; but all the Topick of Praise is drawn from very senseless and extravagant Ideas we pretend we have of their Beauty and Perfection. Thus when a young Man falls in Love with a young Woman, from that Moment she is no more Mrs. Alice such a one, born of such a Father, and educated by such a Mother; but from the first Minute that he casts his Eye upon her with Desire, he conceives a Doubt in his Mind, What heavenly Power gave so unexpected a Blow to an Heart that was ever before untouched. But who can resist Fate and Destiny, which are lodged in Mrs. Alice's Eyes? After which he desires Orders accordingly, Whether he is to live or die; the Smile or Frown of his Goddess is the only Thing that can now either save or destroy him. By this Means, the well-humoured Girl, that would have romped with him before she received this Declaration, assumes a State suitable to the Majesty he has given her, and treats him as the Vassal he calls himself. The Girl's Head is immediately turned by having the Power of Life and Death, and takes Care to suit every Motion and Air to her new Sovereignty. After he has placed himself at his Distance, he must never hope to recover his former Familiarity, till she has had the Addresses of another, and found them less sincere.

IF the Application to Women were justly turned, the Address of Flattery, though it implied at the same Time an Admonition, would be much more likely to succeed. Should a captivated Lover, in a Billet, let his Mistress know, That her Piety to her Parents, her Gentleness of Behaviour, her prudent Oeconomy with respect to her own little Affairs in a Virgin Condition, had improved the Passion which her Beauty had inspired him with, into so settled an Esteem for her, that of all Women breathing he wished her his Wife; though his commanding her for Qualities he knew she had as a Virgin, would make her believe he expected from her an answerable Conduct in the Character of a Matron: I will answer for it, his Suit would be carried on with less perplexity.

INSTEAD of this, the Generality of our young Women, taking all their Notions of Life from gay Writings, or Letters of Love, consider themselves as Goddesses, Nymphs, and Shepherdesses.

BY this Romantick Sense of Things, all the natural Relations and Duties of Life are forgotten, and our Female Part of Mankind are bred and treated, as if they were designed to inhabit the happy Fields of Arcadia, rather than be Wives and Mothers in old England. It is indeed long since I had the Happiness to converse familiarly with this Sex, and therefore have been fearful of falling into the Error which exclusive Men are very subject to, that of giving false Representations of the World from which they have retired, by imaginary Schemes drawn from their own Reflections. And old Men cannot easily gain Admittance into the Dressing-room of Ladies; I therefore thought it Time well spent, to turn over Acton, and use all my occult Art, to give my old Comedian Ring the same Force with that of Gyges, which I have lately spoken of. By the Help of this, I went unobserved to a Friend's House a-mine, and followed the Chamber-Maid invisibly about Twelve of the Clock into the Bed-chamber of the beauteous Flavia, his fine Daughter, just before she got up.

fals-

I drew the Curtains, and being wrapped up in the Safety of my old Age, could with much Pleasure, without Passion, behold her sleeping with Waller's Poems, and a Letter fixed in the Part of him, where every Woman thinks herself described. The Light flashing upon her Face awakened her: She opened her Eyes, and her Lips too, repeating that Piece of false Wit in that admired Poet;

*Such Helen was: And who can blame the Boy,
That in so bright a Flame consum'd his Troy?*

THIS she pronounced with a most bewitching Sweetness; but after it fetched a Sigh, that me thought had more Desire than Languishment, then took out her Letter, and read aloud, for the Pleasure, I suppose, of hearing soft Words in Praise of herself, the following Epistle.

MADAM,

I SATE near you at the Opera last Night; but knew no Entertainment from the vain Show and Noise about me, while I waited wholly intent upon the Motion of your bright Eyes, in hopes of a Glance, that might restore me to the Pleasures of Sight and Hearing in the Midst

Midst of Beauty and Harmony. It is said, the Hell of be Accursed in the next Life arises from an Incapacity to partake the Joys of the Blessed, though they were to be admitted to them. Such I am sure was my Condition all this Evening; and if you, my Deity, cannot have so much Mercy, as to make me by your Influence capable of tasting the Satisfactions of Life, my Being is ended, which consisted only in your Favour.

THE Letter was hardly read over, when she rushed out of Bed in her Wrapping-Gown, and consulted her Glass for the Truth of his Passion. She raised her Head, and turned it to a Profile, repeating the last Lines, My Being is ended, which consisted only in your Favour. The Goddesses immediately called her Maid, and fell to dressing that mischievous Face of hers, without any Manner of Consideration for the Mortal who had offered up his Petition. Nay, it was so far otherwise, that the whole Time of her Woman's combing her Hair was spent in Discourse of the Impertinence of his Passion, and ended, in declaring a Resolution, if she ever had him, to make him wait. She also frankly told the Favourite Gypsy that was prating to her, that her passionate Lover had put it out of her Power to be civil to him, if she were inclined to it; for (said she) if I am thus Celestial to my Lover, he will certainly so far think himself disappointed, as I grow into the Familiarity and Form of a mortal Woman.

I came away as I went in, without staying for other Remarks than what confirmed me in the Opinion, That it is from the Notions the Men inspire them with, that the Women are so fantastical in the Value of themselves. This imaginary Pre-eminence which is given to the Fair Sex, is not only formed from the Addresses of People of Condition; but it is the Fashion and Humour of all Orders to go regularly out of their Wits, as soon as they begin to make Love. I know at this Time Three Goddesses in the New-

Exchange; and there are Two Shepherdesses that sell Gloves in Westminster-Hall.

— Aliena negotia centum
Per caput & circumfaliunt latus.

Hor.

N^o 140. Thursday, March 2. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, March 1.

HAVING the Honour to be by my Great Grandmother a Welshman, I have been among some choice Spirits of that Part of Great Britain, where we solaced our selves in Celebration of the Day of St. David. I am, I confess, elevated above that State of Mind which is proper for Lucubration: But I am the less concerned at this, because I have for this Day or Two last past observed, that we Novelists have been condemned wholly to the Pastry-Cooks, the Eyes of the Nation being turned upon greater Matters. This therefore being a Time when none but my immediate Correspondents will read me, I shall speak to them chiefly at this present Writing. It is the Fate of us who pretend to joke, to be frequently understood to be only upon the Drole when we are speaking the most seriously; as appears by the following Letter to Charles Lillie.

Mr. Lillie, London, 28 Febr. 1709-10

IT being professed by 'Squire Bickerstaff, that his Intention is to expose the Vices and Follies of the Age, and to promote Virtue and Good-will amongst Mankind; it must be a Comfort to a Person labouring under great Straights and Difficulties, to read any Thing that has the Appearance of Succour. I should be glad to know therefore, whether the Intelligence given in his Tatler of Saturday last, of the intended Charity of certain Citizen of London, to maintain the Education of Ten Boys in Writing and Accountts till they be fit for Trade, be given only to encourage and recommend Persons to the Practice of such noble and charitable Designs, or whether there be a Person who really intends to do so. If the latter, I bumbly beg 'Squire Bickerstaff's Pardon for making a Doubt, and impuse it to my Ignorance; and most bumbly crave, That he would be pleased to give Notice in his Tatler, when he thinks fit, whether his Nomination of Ten Boys be disposed of, or whether there be Room for Two Boys to be recommended to him; and that he will permit the Writer of this to present him with Two Boys, who, it is bumbly presumed, will be judged to be very remarkable Objects of such Charity.

SIR,
Your most bumble Servant,

I am to tell this Gentleman in sober Sadness, and without Jest, That there really is so good and charitable a Man as the Benefactor enquired for in his Letter, and that there are but Two Boys yet named. The Father of one of them was killed at Blenheim, the Father of the other at Almanza. I do not here give the Names of the Children, because I should take it to be an Insolence in me to publish them, in a Charity which I have only the Direction of as a Servant to that worthy and generous Spirit who bestows upon them this Bounty, without laying the Bondage of an Obligation. What I have to do is to tell them, they are beholden only to their Maker, to kill in them as they grow up the false Shame of Poverty; and let them know, That their present Fortune, which is come upon them by the Loss of their Fathers on so glorious Occasions, is much more honourable, than the Inheritance of the most ample ill-gotten Wealth.

THE next Letter which lies before me is from a Man of Sense, who strengthens his own Authority with that of Tully, in perswading me to what he very justly believes one cannot beverse.

Mr. Bickerstaff, London 27 Febr. 1709.

I AM so confident of your Inclination to promote any Thing that is for the Advancement of liberal Arts, that I lay before you the following Translation of a Paragraph in Cicero's Oration in Defence of Archimedes the Poet, as an Incentive to the agreeable and instructive Reading of the Writings of the Augustan Age. Most Vices and Follies proceed from a Man's Incapacity of entertaining himself, and we are generally Fools upon Company, because we dare not be wise alone. I hope some future Occasions, you will find this no barrier to Him. Tully, after having said some very handsome Things of his Client, commends the Arts of which he was Master, as follows:

I Else much Profit be not reaped in the Study of Letters, and if Pleasure only be found; yet, in my Opinion, this Relaxation of the Mind should be esteemed most humane and ingenuous. Other Things are not for all Ages, Places and Seasons. These Studies form Youth, delight old Age, adorn Prosperity, and soften, and even remove Adversity, entertain at Home, and no Hindrance abroad; don't leave us at Night, and keep us Company on the Road and in the Country. I am, Your humble Servant, STREPTHON.

THE following Epistle seems to want the quickest Dispatch, because a Lady is every Moment offended till it is answered; which is best done by letting the Offender see in her own Letter how tender she is of calling him so.

SIR,

THIS comes from a Relation of yours, thought unknown to you, who, besides the Tie of Consanguinity,

1703 infinity, has some Value for you on the Account of your speculations, those being designed to refine our Conversation, as well as cultivate our Minds. I humbly beg the Favour of you, in one of your Tatlers, (after what Manner you please) to correct a particular Friend of mine, for an Indororum he is guilty of in Discourse of calling his Acquaintance, when he speaks of them
Adam: As for Example, my Cousin Jenny Distaff-Adam Distaff; which I am sure you are sensible is very unpolite, and 'tis what makes me often uneasy for him, though I cannot tell him of it my self, which apaciate makes me guilty of the Presumption, that I depend on your Goodness to excuse; and I do assure you, the honest Gentleman will mind your Reprobation, for he is barmy am, revised oldstand may

SIR,

Tourm oft bumble

Servant and Cousin;

Dorothy Drumstick

I had no sooner read the just Complaint of Mrs. Drumsick, but I received an urgent one from another of the fair Sex, upon Faults of more pernicious Consequence.

Mr. Bickerstaff,
O B S E R V I N G that you are entered into a Correspondence with Palquin, who is, I suppose, Roman Catholick, I beg of you to forbear giving any Account of our Religion or Manners, till you have rooted out certain Misbehaviours even in our churches. Among others, that of Bowing, Saluting, taking Snuff, and other Gestures. Lady Autumn made me a very low Courtesy the other Day from the next Pew, and, with the most courtly air imaginable, called herself, Miserable Sinner. Her Niece soon after, in saying, Forgive us our Trespassions, concluded with a glotting Look at my Brother. He returned it, opening his Snuff-Box, and repeating yet a more solemn Expression. I beg of you, Mr. Censor, not to tell Pasquin any Thing of this Kind, and to believe this does not come from one of a morose Temper, mean Birth, rigid Education, narrow Fortune, or Bigotry in Opinion, or from one in whom Time had worn out all Taste of Pleasure. I assure you, it is far otherwise, for I am possessed of all the contrary Advantages; and hope, Wealth, good Humour, and good Breeding, may be best employed in the Service of Religion and Virtue; and desire you would, as soon as possible, remark upon the above-mentioned Indecorums, that we may not longer transgress against the latter, to preserve our Reputation in the former.

Your humble Servant,

LYDIA.

THE last Letter I shall insert, is what follows. This is written by a very inquisitive Lady; and I think, such Interrogative Gentlewomen are to be answered no other Way than by Interrogation. Her Billet is this :

Dear Mr. Bickerstaff,

ARE you quite as good as you seem to be?

Chloe

To which I can only answer :

Dear Chloe,

ARE you quite as ignorant as you seem to be?

I.B.

N^o 141. Saturday, March 4. 1709.

Sbear-Lane, March 3.

WHILE the Attention of the Town is drawn aside from the reading us Writers of News, we all save our selves against it is at more Leisure. As far my own Part, I shall still let the the labouring Oar be managed by my Correspondents, and fill my Paper with their Sentiments, rather than my own, till I find my Readers more disengaged than they are at present. When I came Home this Evening, I found several Letters and Petitions, which I shall insert with no other Order, than as I accidentally opened them, as follows:

SIR,

March 1. 1709-10.

HAVING a Daughter about Nine Years of Age, I would endeavour she might have Education; I mean such as may be useful, as working well, and a good Deportment. In order to it, I am perswaded to place her at some Boarding-s-kool, situate in a good Air. My Wife opposes it, and gives for her greatest Reason, That she is too much a Woman, and understands the Formalities of visiting, and a Tea-Table so very nicely, that none, tho' much older, can exceed her; and with all these Perfections, the Girl can scarce thread a Needle: But however, after several Arguments, we have agreed to be decided by your Judgment; and knowing your Abilities, shall manage our Daughter exactly as you shall please to direct. I am serious in my Request, and hope you will be so in your Answer, which will lay a deep Obligation upon,

SIR,

Your humbleS servant,

T. T.

SIR, pray answer it in your Tatler, that it may be serviceable to the Publick.

I am as serious on this Subject as my Correspondent can be, and am of Opinion, That the great Happiness or Misfortune of Mankind depends upon the Manner of educating and treating that Sex. I have lately said, I design to turn my Thoughts more particularly to them and their Service: I beg therefore a little Time to give my Opinion on so important a Subject, and desire the young Lady may fill Tea one Week longer, till I have considered whether she shall be removed or not.

Mr. Bickerstaff,

Chancery-Lane, Febr. 27. 1709

YOUR Notice in the Advertisement in your Tatler of Saturday last about Whetters in and about the Royal Exchange, is mightily taken Notice of by Gentlemen who use the Coffee-Houses near the Chancery Office in Chancery-Lane; and there being a particular certain Set of both young and old Gentleman that belong to and near adjoining to the Chancery-Office, both in Chancery-Lane, and Bell-yard that are not only Whetters all the Morning long, but very musically given about Twelve at Night, the same Days, and mightily taken with the Union of the Dulcimer, Violin, and Song; at which Recreation they Rejoice together with perfect Harmony, however their Parents disagree: You are kindly desired by several Gentlemen to give some Regulation concerning them; in which you will contribute to the Repose of us, who are

Your very humble Servant,

L. T. N. E. T. W.

THESE Whetters are a People I have considered with much Pains, and find them to differ from a Sect I have heretofore spoken of, called Snuff-Takers, only in the Expedition they take in destroying their Brains: The Whetter is obliged to refresh himself every Moment with a Liquor, as the Snuff-Taker with a Powder. As for their Harmony in the Evening, I have nothing to object, provided they remove to Wapping, or the Bridge-Foot, where it is not to be supposed that their Vociferations will annoy the Studious, the Busy, or the Contemplative. I once had Lodgings in Gray's Inn, where we had Two hard Students, who learned to play upon the Hautboy; and I had a Couple of Chamber-Fellows over my Head not less diligent in the Practice of

Back

Back-Sword and Single Rapier. I remember these Gentlemen were assigned by the Benchers the Two Houses at the End of the Terras-Walk, as the only Places fit for their Meditations. Such Students as will let none improve but themselves, ought indeed to have their proper Distances from Societies.

THE Gentlemen of loud Mirth above-mentioned I take to be, in the Quality of their Crime, the same as Eyes-Droppers; for they who will be in your Company whether you will or no; are to be great a Degree Offenders, as they who hearken to what passes, without being of your Company at all. The ancient Punishment for the latter, when I first came to this Town, was the Blanket, which I humbly conceive may be as justly applied to him that bawls, as to him that listens. It is therefore provided for the Future, That (except in the long Vacation) no Ringers to the Law, with Dulcimer, Violin, or any other instrument, in any Tavern, within a Furlong of an Inn of Court, shall sing any Tune, or pretended Tune whatsoever, upon Pain of the Blanket, to be administered according to the Discretion of all such peaceable People as shall be within the Annoyance. And it is further directed, That all Clerks who shall offend in this Kind shall forfeit their Indentures, and be turned over as Assistants to the Clerks of Parishes within the Bills of Mortality, who are hereby empowered to demand them accordingly.

I am not to omit the Receipt of the following Letter, with a Night-cap from my Valentine; which Night-cap, I find, was finished in that Year 1588. and is too finely wrought to be of any modern Stitching. Its Antiquity will better appear by my Valentine's own Words.

G 5.12.18. (continued) SIR,

SIR, I have receiv'd a small Box of Presents sent me by a Gentleman in London, and among them was a Night-cap from your Valentine; I have sent you one, which I do assure you has been very much esteemed of in our Family; for my Great Grandmother's Daughter who worked it, was Maid of Honour to Queen Elizabeth, and had the Misfortune to lose her Life by pricking her Finger in the Making of it, of which she bled to Death, as her Tomb now at Westminister will shew. For which Reason, my self no none of my Family, have loved Work ever since; otherwise you should have had one as you desired, made by the Hands of, your Obedient Servt on

SIR,

Your Affectionate Valentine.

To the Right Worshipful Isaac Bickerstaff, Esq; Censor of Great Britain, and Governor of the Hospital erected, or to be erected, in Moorfields. To shew what you will have in the Hospital to do with the said Hospital.

The Petition of the Inhabitants of the Parish of Goostham in the County of Middlesex.

Mumbly sheweth,

THAT whereas 'tis the undoubted Right of your said Petitioners to repair on every Lord's Day to a Chapel of Ease in the said Parish, where to be instructed in their Duties in the known or vulgar Tongue; yet so it is, (may it please your Worship) that the Preacher of the said Chapel has of late given himself wholly up to Matters of Controversy, in no wise tending to the Edification of your said Petitioners; and in bandying (as he calls it) the same, has used divers hard and crabbed Words; such as, among many others, are Orthodox and Heterodox, which are in no sort understood by your said Petitioners; and 'tis with Grief of Heart, that your Petitioners beg Leave to represent to you, that in mentioning the aforesaid Words or Names, the latter of which, as we have Reason to believe, is his

41. N^o 141. The TATLER. I³

his deadly Envy) be will fall into Rawings and Foamings, ill-becoming the Meekness of his Office, and tending to give Offence and Scandal to all good People.

YOUR Petitioners further say, That they are ready to prove the aforesaid Allegations; and therefore humbly hope, that from a true Sense of their Condition, you will please to receive the said Preacher into the Hospital, till he shall recover a right Use of his Senses.

And your Petitioners, &c.

N^o 142. Tuesday, March 7. 1709.

Sheer-Lane, March 6.

ALL Persons who employ themselves in Publick, are still interrupted in the Course of their Affairs: And it seems, the admired Cavalier Nicolini himself is commanded by the Ladies, who at present employ their Time with great Assiduity in the Care of the Nation, to put off his Day till he shall receive their Commands, and Notice that they are at Leisure for Diversions. In the mean Time it is not to be expressed, how many cold Chickens the Fair Ones have eaten since this Day Seven-night for the Good of their Country. This great Occasion has given Birth to many Discoveries of high Moment for the Conduct of Life. There is a Toast of my Acquaintance told me, She had now found out, that it was Day before Nine in the Morning; and I am very confident, if the Affair holds many Days longer, the ancient Hours of Eating will be revived among us, many having by it been made acquainted with the Luxury of Hunger and Thirst.

THE R E appears, methinks, something very venerable in all Assemblies: And I must confess, I envied all who had Youth and Health enough to make their Appearances there, that they

they had the Happiness of being a whole Day in the best Company in the World. During the Adjournments of that awful Court, a Neighbour of mine was telling me, That it gave him a Nation of the ancient Grandeur of the English Hospitality, to see Westminster-Hall a Dining-Room. There is a Chearfulness at such Repasts, which is very delightful to Tempers which are so happy as to be clear of Spleen and Vapour; for to the Jovial to see others pleased, is the greatest of all Pleasures.

BUT since Age and Infirmities forbid my Appearance at such publick Places, the next Happiness is to make the best Use of Privacy, and acquit my self of the Demands of my Correspondents. The following Letter is what has given me no small Inquietude, it being an Accusation of Partiality, and Disregard to Men, in the Person of a Vertuoso, who is the most eloquent of all Men upon small Occasions, and is the more to be admired for his prodigious Fertility of Invention, which never appears but upon Subjects which others would have thought barren. But in Consideration of his uncommon Talents, I am contented to let him be the Hero of my next Two Days, by inserting his Friend's Recommendation of him at large.

Dear Cousin, Nando's Febr. 28. 1709.

I AM just come out of the Country, and upon perusing your late Lucubrations, I find Charles Lillie to be the Darling of your Affections, that you have given him a Place, and taken no small Pains to establish him in the World; and at the same Time have passed by his Name-sake at this End of the Town, as if he was a Citizen defunct, and one of no Use in a Commonwealth. I must own, his Circumstances are so good, and so well known, that he does not stand in Need of having his Fame published to the World; but being of an ambitious Spirit, and aspiring Soul, he would be rather proud of the Honour, than desirous of the Profit, which might result from your Recommendation. He is a Person of a particular Genius, the first that brought Toys in Fashion, and Baubles to Perfection. He is admirably well-versed in Screws, Springs, and Hinges, and deeply read in Knives, Combs or Scissars, Buttons or Buckles. He is a perfect Master of Words, which uttered with a smooth voluble Tongue, flow into a most persuasive Eloquence; insomuch, that I have known a Gentleman of Distinction find several ingenious Faults with a Toy of his, and shew his utmost Dislike to it, as being either useless, or ill-contrived; but when the Orator, behind the Counter, had harangued upon it for an Hour and a Half, displayed its hidden Beauties, and revealed its secret Perfections, he has wondered how he had been able to spend so great a Part of his Life without so important an Utensil. I won't pretend to furnish out an Inventory of all the valuable Commodities that are to be found at his Shop.

I shall content my self with giving an Account of what I think most curious. Imprimis, His Pocket-Books are very neat, and well contrived, not for keeping Bank-Bills, or Goldsmiths Notes, I confess, but they are admirable for registering the Lodgings of Madona's, and for preserving Letters from Ladies of Quality: His Whips and Spurs are so nice, that they'll make one that buys them ride a Fox-hunting, though before he bared Noise and early Rising, and was afraid of breaking his Neck: His Pens are curiously fancied, and exquisitely well-cut, and of great Use to encourage young Gentlemen to write a good Hand. Ned Puzzle-post had been ill used by his Writing-master, and writ a Sort of a Chinese, or downright Scrawlian: However, upon his buying a Seal of my Friend, he is so much improved by continual Writing, that it is believed in a short Time one may be able to read his Letters, and find out his Meaning, without guessing. His Pistols and Fuses are so very good, that they are fit to be laid up among the finest China. Then his Tweezer-Cases are incomparable: You shall have one not much bigger than your Finger, with Seventeen several Instruments in it, all necessary every Hour of the Day, during ring the whole Course of a Man's Life. But if this Vertuoso excels in one Thing more than another, 'tis in Canes: He has spent his most selett Hours in the Knowledge of them, and is arrived at that Perfection, that he is able to hold forth upon Canes longer than upon any one Subject in the World. Indeed, his Canes are so finely clouded, and so well made up, either with Gold, or Amber-Heads, that I am of the Opinion, 'tis impossible for a Gentleman to walk, talk, sit, or stand, as he should do, without one of them. He knows the Value of a Cane, by knowing the Value of the Buyer's Estate. Sir Timothy Shallow has Two Thousand Pounds per Annum, and Tom Empty one. They both at several Times bought a Cane of Charles: Sir Timothy's cost Ten Guineas, and Tom Empty's Five.

Upon comparing them, they were perfectly alike. Sir Timothy surprised there should be no Difference in the Canes, and so much in the Price, comes to Charles.
Damn it, Charles, says he, you have sold me a Can-kare for Ten Piecas, and the very same to Tom Empty for Five. Lord, Sir Timothy, says Charles, I am concerned that you, whom I took to understand Canu better than any Baronet in Town, should be so overseen:
Why, Sir Timothy, yours is a true Jambee, and 'Squire Empty's only a plain Dragon.

THIS Vertuoso has a Parcel of Jambees now growing in the East-Indies, where he keeps a Man on purpose to look after them, which will be the finest that ever landed in Great Britain, and will be fit to cut about Two Years hence. Any Gentleman may subscribe for as many as he pleases. Subscriptions will be taken in at his Shop at Ten Guineas each Joint. They that subscribe for Six, shall have a Dragon gratis.
This is all I have to say at present concerning Charles's Curiosities; and hope it may be sufficient to prevail with you to take him into your Consideration, which if you comply with, you will oblige

Your humble Servant.

* N. B. WHEREAS there came out last Term, several Gold Snuff-Boxes, and others: This is to give Notice

Notice, That Charles will put out a new Edition on Saturday next, which will be the only one in Fashion till after Easter. The Gentleman that gave Fifty Pounds for the Box set with Diamonds, may show till Sunday Night, provided he goes to Church; but not after that Time, there being one to be published on Monday, which will cost Fourscore Guineas.

N^o 143. Thursday, March 9. 1709.

Sbeer-Lane, March 8.

I WAS this Afternoon surprised with a Visit from my Sister Jenny, after an Absence of some Time. She had, methought, in her Manner and Air, something that was a little below that of the Women of the first Breeding and Quality, but at the same Time above the Simplicity and Familiarity of her usual Deportment. As soon as she was seated, she began to talk to me of the odd Place I lived in, and begged of me to remove out of the Lane where I had been so long acquainted; for (said she) it does so spoil one's Horses, that I must beg your Pardon if you see me much seldomer, when I am to make so great a Journey with a single Pair, and make Visits, and get Home the same Night. I understood her pretty well, but would not; therefore desired her to pay off her Coach, for I had a great deal to talk to her. She very pertly told me, She came in her own Chariot? Why, said I, is your Husband in Town? And has he set up an Equipage? No, answered she, but I have received 300*L* by his Order; and his Letters, which came at the same Time, bade me want for nothing that was necessary. I was heartily concerned at her Folly, whose Affairs render her but just able to bear such an Expence. Nowever, I considered, that according to the British Custom of treating Women, there is no other Method Method to be used in removing any of their Faults and Errors, but conducting their Minds from one Humour to another, with as much Ceremony as we lead their Persons from one Place to another. I therefore dissembled my Concern, and in Compliance with her, as a Lady that was to use her Feet no more, I begged of her, after a short Visit, to let me persuade her not to stay out till it was late, for fear of catching Cold as she went into her Coach in the Dampness of the Evening. The Malapert knew well enough I laughed at her, but was not ill pleased with the Certainty of her Power over her Husband, who, she knew, would support her in any Humour he was able, rather than pass thro' the Torment of an Expostulation, to gainsay any Thing she had a Mind to. As soon as my fine Lady was gone, I writ the following Letter to my Brother.

Dear Brother,

I AM at present under very much Concern at the splendid Appearance I saw my Sister make in an Equipage which she has set up in your Absence. I beg of you not to indulge her in this Vanity; and desire you to consider, that the World is so whimsical, that though it will value you for being happy, it will hate you for appearing so. The Possession of Wisdom and Virtue (the only solid Distinctions of Life) is allowed much more easily than that of Wealth and Quality. Besides which, I must intreat you to weigh with your self, What it is that People aim at in setting themselves out to Show in gay Equipages, and moderate Fortunes? You are not by this Means a better Man than your Neighbour is; but your Horses are better than his are. And will you suffer Care and Inquietude, to have it said as you pass by, Those are very pretty punch Nags? Nay, when you have arrived at this, there are a Hundred worthless Fellows who are still four Horses happier than you are. Remember, dear Brother, there is a certain Modesty in the Enjoyment of moderate Wealth, which to transgress, exposes Men to the utmost Derision; and as there is nothing ing but Meanness of Spirit can move a Man to value himself upon what can be purchased with Money, so he that shews an Ambition that Way, and cannot arrive at it, is more emphatically guilty of that Meanness. I give you only my first Thoughts on this Occasion, but shall, as I am a Censor, entertain you in my next with my Sentiments in general upon the Subject of Equipage; and shew, that tho' there are no sumptuary Laws amongst us, Reason and good Sense are equally binding, and will ever prevail in appointing Approbation or Dislike in all Matters of an indifferent Nature, when they are pursued with Earnestness. I am, SIR, &c.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

To all Gentlemen, Ladies, and others, that delight in soft Lines.

THESE are to give Notice, That the proper Time of the Year for writing Pastorals now drawing near, there is a Stage-Coach settled from the One-Bell in the Strand to Dorchester, which sets out Twice a Week, and passes thro' Basingstoke, Sutton, Stockbridge, Salisbury, Blandford, and so to Dorchester, over the finest Downs in England. As all which Places, there are Accommodations of spreading Beeches, Beds of Flowers, Turf-Seats, and Purling Streams, for happy Swains; and Thunder-struck Oaks, and Left-handed Ravens, to foretel Misfortunes to those that please to be wretched; with all other Necessaries for expensive Passion.

AND for the Conveniency of such whose Affairs will not permit them to leave this Town, at the same Place they may be furnished, during the Season, with opening Buds flowring Thyme, warbling Birds, sporting Lambs, and Fountain Water, right and good, and bottled on the Spot by one sent down on Purpose.

N. B. THE Nymphs and Swains are farther given to understand, that in those happy Climes, they are so far from being troubled with Wolves, that for want of even Foxes, a considerable Pack of Hounds have been lately forced to eat Sheep.

WHEREAS

WHEREAS on the 6th Instant at Midnight, several Persons of light Honour and loose Mirth, having taken upon them in the Shape of Men, but with the Voice of the Players belonging to Mr. Powell's Company, to call up Surgeons at Midnight, and send Physicians to Persons in sound Sleep, and perfect Health: This is to certify, That Mr. Powell had locked up the Leger of all his Company for Fear of Mischief that Night; and that Mr. Powell will not pay for any Damages done by the said Persons. It is also further advised, That there were no Midwives wanted when those Persons called them up in the several Parts of Westminster; but that those Gentlewomen who were in the Company of the said Impostors, may take Care to call such useful Persons as the 6th of December next.

THE Censor having observed, That there are finewrought Ladies Shoes and Slippers put out to View at a great Shoemaker's Shop towards St. James's End of Pall-Mall, which create irregular Thoughts and Distresses in the Youth of this Nation; The said Shopkeeper is required to take in those Egg-fores, or show Cause in next Court-Day why he continues to expose the same; and he is required to be prepared, particularly to answer the Slippers with green Lace and blue Heels.

IT is impossible for me to return the obliging Things Mr. Joshua Barnes has said to me upon the Account of our mutual Friend Homer. He and I have read him now Forty Years with some Understanding, and great Admiration. A Work to be produced by one who has enjoyed so great an Intimacy with an Author, is certainly to be valued more than any Comment made by Persons of Yesterday: Therefore, according to my Friend Joshua's Request, I recommend his * Work;

* Mr. Joshua Barnes's new and accurate Edition of all Homer's Works, &c.

and having used a little Magick in the Cafe, I give this Recommendation by Way of Amulet or charm against the Malignity of envious Backbiters, who speak Evil of Performances whereof themselves were never capable. If I may use my Friend Joshua's own Words, I shall at present say no more, but that we, Homer's oldest Acquaintance now living, know best his Ways; and can inform the World, that they are often mistaken when they think he is in Lethargick Fits, which we know he was never subject to; and shall make appear to be rank Scandal and Envy, that of the Latin Poet, — Aliquando bonus dormitat Homerus.

N° 144. Saturday, March 11. 1709.

Sheen-Lane, March 10.

IN a Nation of Liberty, there is hardly a Person in the whole Mass of the People more absolutely necessary than a Censor. It is allowed, that I have no Authority for assuming this important Appellation, and that I am Censor of these Nations, just as one is chosen King at the Game of Questions and Commands: But if, in the Execution of this fantastical Dignity, I observe upon Things which do not fall within the Cognizance of real Authority, I hope it will be granted, that an idle Man could not be more usefully employed. Among all the Irregularities of which I have taken Notice, I know none so proper to be presented to the World by a Censor, as that of the general Expence and Affectation in Equipage. I have lately hinted, that this Extravagance must necessarily get Footing where we have no sumptuary Laws, and where every Man may be dressed, attended and carried in what Manner he pleases. But my Tenderness derneſſ to my Fellow-Subjects will not permit me to let this Enormity go unobserved.

AS the Matter now stands, every Man takes it in his Head, that he has a Liberty to spend his Money as he pleases. Thus, in Spight of all Order, Justice and Decorum, we, the greatest Number of the Queen's loyal Subjects, for no Reason in the World, but because we want Money, do not share alike in the Division of her Majesty's High-Road. The Horses and Slave of the Rich take up the whole Street, while we Peripateticks are very glad to watch an Opportunity to whisk cross a Passage, very thankful that we are not run over for interrupting the Machine, that carries in it a Person neither more handsome, wise or valiant, than the Meanest of us. For this Reason, were I to propose a Tax, it should certainly be upon Coaches and Chairs. For no Man living can assign a Reason, why one Man should have Half a Street to carry him at his Ease, and perhaps only in Pursuit of Pleasures, when as good a Man as himself wants Room for his own Person to pass upon the most necessary and urgent Occasion. Till such an Acknowledgment is made to the Publick, I shall take upon me to vest certain Rights in the Scavengers of the Cities of London and Westminster, to take the Horses and Servants of all such as do not become or deserve such Distinctions, into their peculiar Custody. The Offenders themselves I shall allow safe Conduct to their Places of Abode in the Carts of the said Scavengers, but their Horses shall be mounted by their Footmen, and sent into the Service abroad. And I take this Opportunity in the first Place to recruit the Regiment of my good old Friend the brave and honest Sylvius, that they be as well taught as they are fed. It is to me most miraculous, so unreasonable an Usurpation as this I am speaking of, should so long have been tolerated. We hang a poor Fellow for taking any trifle from us on the Road, and bear with the rich for robbing us of the Road is self. Such a Tax as this would be of great Satisfaction to us who walk on Foot; and since the Distinction of riving in a Coach is not to be appointed according to a Man's Merit or Service to his Country, or that Liberty given as a Reward for some eminent Virtue, we should be highly contented to see them pay something for the Insult they do us in the State they take upon them while they are drawn by us.

Trifle

TILL they have made us some Reparation of this Kind, we the Peripateticks of Great Britain cannot think our selves well treated, while every one that is able is allowed to set up an Equipage.

AS for my Part, I cannot but admire how Persons, conscious to themselves of no Manner of Superiority above others, can out of mere Pride or Laziness expose themselves at this Rate to publick View, and put us all upon pronoun-cing these three terrible Syllables, Who is That?
When it comes to that Question, our Method is to consider the Mien and Air of the Passenger, and comfort our selves for being dirty to the Ankles, by laughing at his Figure and Appearance who over-looks us. I must confess, were it not for the solid Injustice of the Thing, there is nothing could afford a discerning Eye greater Occasion for Mirth, than this licentious Huddle of Qualities and Characters in the Equipages about this Town. The Overseers of the Highway and Constables have so little Skill or Power to rectify this Matter, that you may often see the Equipage of a Fellow, whom all the Town knows to deserve hanging, make a Stop that shall interrupt the Lord High Chancellor, and all the Judges in their Way to Westminster.

FOR the better Understanding of Things and Persons in this general Confusion, I have given Directions to all the Coach-Makers and Coach-Painters

Painters in Town, to bring me in Lists of their several Customers; and doubt not, but with comparing the Orders of each Man, in the Placing his Arms on the Doors of his Chariot, as well as the Words, Devices and Cyphers to be fixed upon them, to make a Collection which shall let us into the Nature, if not the History of Mankind more usefully than the Curiosities of any Medalist in Europe.

BUT this Evil of Vanity in our Figure, with many others, proceeds from a certain Gaiety of Heart, which has crept into Mens very Thought and Complexions. The Passions and Adventure of Heroes, when they enter the Lists for the Tournament in Romances, are not more easily distinguishable by their Palfreys and their Armour, than the secret Springs and Affections of the several Pretenders to Show amongst us are known by their Equipages in ordinary Life. The young Bridegroom with his gilded Cupids, and winged Angels, has some Excuse in the Joy of his Heart to launch out into something that may be significant of his present Happiness: But to see Men, for no Reason upon Earth but that they are rich, ascend Triumphant Chariots, and ride through the People, has, at the Bottom, nothing else in it but an insolent Transport, arising only from the Distinction of Fortune.

IT is therefore high Time that I call in such Coaches as are in their Embellishments improper for the Character of their Owners. But if I find I am not obeyed herein, and that I cannot pull down the Equipages already erected, I shall take upon me to prevent the Growth of this Evil for the future, by enquiring into the Pretensions of the Persons who shall hereafter attempt to make publick Entries with Ornaments and Decorations of their own Appointment. If a Man, who believed he had the handsomest Leg in this Kingdom, should take a Fancy to adorn so deserving a Limb with a Blue Garter, he would

they would justly be punished for offending against the Most Noble Order: And, I think, the general Prostitution of Equipage and Retinue is as destructive to all Distinction, as the Impertinence of one Man, if permitted, would certainly be to that illustrious Fraternity.

ADVERTISMENT.

THE Censor having lately received Intelligence, that the ancient Simplicity in the Dress and Manners of that Part of this Island, called Scotland, begins to decay; and that there are at this Time in the good Town of Edinburgh, Beaus, Fops and Coxcombs:
His late Correspondent from that Place is desired to send up their Names and Characters with all Expedition, that they may be proceeded against accordingly, and proper Officers named to take in their Canes, Snuff-Boxes, and all other useless Necessaries commonly worn by such Offenders.

It is to be observed, that the following Article is written in a style of great elegance and beauty, and is to be considered as a specimen of the author's genius.

Nescio quis teneros oculus mibi fascinat agnos. Virg.

N^o 145. Tuesday, March 14. 1709.

White's Chocolate-house, March 13.

THIS Evening was allotted for taking into Consideration a late Request of two indulgent Parents, touching the Care of a young Daughter, whom they design to send to a Boarding-School, or keep at Home, according to my Determination; but I am diverted from that Subject by Letters which I have received from several Ladies, complaining of a certain Sect of professed Enemies to the Repose of the Fair Sex, called Ogliers. These are, it seems, Gentlemen who look with deep Attention on one Object at
the

the Play-houses, and are ever staring all round them in Churches. It is urged by my Correspondents, that they do all that is possible to keep their Eyes off these Insinuators; but that, by whose Power they know not, both their Diversions and Devotions are interrupted by them in such a Manner, as that they cannot attend either, without stealing Looks at the Persons whose Eyes are fixed upon them. By this Means, my Petitioners say, they find themselves grow insensibly less offended, and in Time enamoured, of these their Enemies. What is required of me on this Occasion, is, That as I love and study to preserve the better Part of Mankind, the Females, I would give them some Account of this dangerous Way of Assault, against which there is so little Defence that it lays Ambush for the Sight it self, and makes them seemingly, knowingly, willingly and forcibly go on to their own Captivity.

THIS Representation of the present State of Affairs between the two Sexes gave me very much Alarm; and I had no more to do, but to recollect what I had seen at any one Assembly for some Years last past, to be convinced of the Truth and Justice of this Remonstrance. If there be not a Stop put to this evil Art, all the Modes of Address, and the elegant Embellishments of Life which arise out of the noble Passion of Love, will of Necessity decay. Who would be at the Trouble of Rhetorick, or study the Bon Mien, when his Introduction is so much easier obtained, by a sudden Reverence in a downcast Look at the Meeting the Eye of a Fair Lady, and beginning again to ogle her as soon as she glances another Way? I remember very well, when I was last at an Opera, I could perceive the Eyes of the whole Audience cast into particular cross Angles, one upon another, without any Manner of REGARD to the Stage, though King Latinus was himself present when I made that Observation. It was then very pleasant to look into the Hearts of the

the whole Company; for the Balls of Sight are so form'd, that one Man's Eyes are Spectacles to another to read his Heart with. The most ordinary Beholder can take Notice of any violent Agitation in the Mind, any pleasing Transport, or any inward Grief, in the Person he looks at; but one of these Oglers can see a studied Indifference, a concealed Love, or a smothered Resentment, in the very Glances that are made to hide those Dispositions of Thought. The Naturalists tell us, That the Rattle-Snake will fix himself under a Tree where he sees a Squirrel playing; and when he has once got the Exchange of a Glance from the pretty Wanton, will give it such a sudden Stroke on its Imagination, that tho' it may play from Bough to Bough, and strive to avert its Eyes from it for some Time, yet it comes nearer and nearer by little Intervals of looking another Way, 'till it drops into the Jaws of the Animal, which it knew gazed at it for no other Reason but to ruin it. I did not believe this Piece of Philosophy 'till that Night I was just now speaking of; but I then saw the same Thing pass between an Ogler and a Coquet. Mirtillo, the most learned of the former, had for some time discontinued to visit Flavia, no less eminent among the latter. They industriously avoided all Places where they might probably meet, but Chance brought them together to the Play-house, and seated them in a direct Line over against each other, she in a Front-Box, he in the Pit next the Stage. As soon as Flavia had received the Looks of the whole Crowd below her with that Air of Insensibility, which is necessary at the first Entrance, she began to look round her and saw the Vagabond Mirtillo, who had so long absented himself from her Circle; and when she first discovered him, she looked upon him with that Glance, which in the Language of Oglers, is call'd the Scornful, but immediately turned her Observation another Way, and returned upon him with the Indifferent. This gave Mirtillo no small Resentment, but he used her accordingly. He took Care to be ready for her next Glance. She found his Eyes full in the Indolent, with his Lips crumpled up, in the Posture of one whistling. Her Anger at this Usage immediately appeared in every Muscle of her Face; and after many Emotions, which glistened in her Eyes, she cast them round the whole House, and gave 'em Softnesses in the Face of every Man she had ever seen before. After she thought she had reduced all she saw to her Obedience, the Play began and ended their Dialogue. As soon as the first Act was over, she stood up with a Visage full of dissembled Alacrity and Pleasure, with which she overlooked the Audience, and at last came to him; he was then placed in a Side-way, with his Hat flouncing over his Eyes, and gazing at a Wench in the Side-Box, as talking of that Gipsy to the Gentleman who sat by him. But as he was fixed upon her, he turned suddenly with a full Face upon her, and with all the Respect imaginable, made her the most obsequious Bow in the Presence of the whole Theatre. This gave her a Pleasure not to be concealed, and she made him the Recovering or Second Courtesy, with a Smile that spoke a perfect Reconciliation. Between the ensuing Acts, they talked to each other with Gestures and Glances so significant, that they ridiculed the whole House in this silent Speech, and made an Appointment that Mirtillo should lead her to her Coach.

THE peculiar Language of one Eye, as it differs from another, as much as the Tone of one Voice from another, and the Fascination or Enchantment which is lodged in the Optick Nerve of the Persons concerned in these Dialogues, is I must confess, too nice a Subject for one who is not an Adept in these Speculations; but I shall, for the Good and Safety of the Fair Sex, call in my learned Friend Sir William Read to my Assistance.

and, by the Help of his Observations on this Organ, acquaint them when the Eye is to be believed, and when distrusted. On the contrary, I shall conceal the true Meaning of the Looks of Ladies, and indulge in them all the Art they can acquire in the Management of their Glances: All which is but too little against Creatures who triumph in Falshood, and begin to forswear with their Eyes, when their Tongues can be no longer believ'd.

ADVERTISEMENT.

A very clean, well behav'd young Gentleman, who is in a very good Way in Cornhil, has writ to me the following Lines, and seems in some Passages of his Letter (which I omit) to lay it very much to Heart, That I have not spoken of a supernatural Beauty whom he sighs for, and complains to in most elaborate Language. Alas! What can a Monitor do? All Mankind live in Romance.

Mr. Bickerstaff, Royal Exchange, March 11.

SOME Time since you were pleased to mention the Beauties in the New Exchange and Westminster-Hall, and in my Judgment were not very impartial; for if you were pleased to allow there was one Goddess in the New-Exchange, and two SheperdesSES in Westminster-Hall, you very well might say, there was and is at present one Angel in the Royal Exchange: And I humbly beg the Favour of you to let Justice be done her, by the inserting this in your next Tatler; which will make her my good Angel, and me your most humble Servant,

A. B.

Permitte, ipsis expendere numinibus, quid
Conveniat nobis, robusque sit utile nostris, Nam pro jucundis aptissima queque dabunt Dii:
Obnox est illis homo, quam sibi Nos animorum
Impulsi Et caca magnaq; cupidine ducti
Conjugium petimus, partumq; uxoris; at illa Notum, qui pueri, qualisq; futura sit uxor. Juv.

No 146. Thursday March 16. 1709.

From my own Apartment, March 15.

AMONG the various Sets of Correspondents who apply to me for Advice, and send up their Cases from all Parts of Great Britain, there are none who are more importunate with me, and whom I am more inclined to answer, than the Complainers. One of them dates his Letter to me from the Banks of a purling Stream, where he used to ruminate in Solitude upon the Divine Clarissa, and where he is now looking about for a convenient Leap, which he tells me he is resolved to take, unless I support him under the Loss of that charming perjured Woman. Poor Lavinia preffes as much for Consolation on the other Side, and is reduced to such an Extremity of Despair by the Inconstancy of Philander, that she tells me she writes her Letter with her Pen in one Hand, and her Garter in the other. A Gentleman of an ancient Family in Norfolk is almost out of his Wits upon Account of a Greyhound, that after having been his inseparable Companion for ten Years, is at last run mad. Another (who I believe is serious) complains to me in a very moving Manner, of the Loss of a Wife, and another in Terms still more moving, of a Purse of Money that was taken from him on Bagsbot Heath, and which,

which, he tells me, would not have troubled him if he had given it to the Poor. In short, there is scarce a Calamity in humane Life that has not produced me a Letter.

IT is indeed wonderful to consider, how Men are able to raise Affliction to themselves out of every Thing. Lands and Houses, Sheep and Oxen, can convey Happiness and Misery into the Hearts of reasonable Creatures. Nay, I have known a Muff, a Scarf, or a Tippet, become a solid Blessing or Misfortune. A Lap-Dog has broke the Hearts of Thousands. Flavia, who had buried five Children, and two Husbands, was never able to get over the Loss of her Parrat. How often has a Divine Creature been thrown into a Fit by a Neglect at a Ball or an Assembly? Mopza has kept her Chamber ever since the last Masquerade, and is in greater Danger of her Life upon being left out of it, than Clarinda from the violent Cold which she caught at it. Not are these dear Creatures the only Sufferers by such imaginary Calamities: Many an Author has been dejected at the Censure of one whom he ever looked upon as an Idiot; and many an Hero cast into a Fit of Melancholy, because the Rabble have not hooted at him as he passed through the Streets. Theron places all his Happiness in a running Horse, Suffenus in a gilded Chariot, Fulcios in a blue String, and Florio in a Tulip-Root. It would be endless to enumerate the many fantastical Afflictions that disturb Mankind; but as a Misery is not to be measured from the Nature of the Evil, but from the Temper of the Sufferer, I shall present my Readers, who are unhappy either in Reality or Imagination, with an Allegory, for which I am indebted to the great Father and Prince of Poets.

AS I was sitting after Dinner in my Elbow-Chair, I took up Homer, and dipped into that famous Speech of Achilles to Priam, in which he tells him, that Jupiter has by him two great Vesselfs, the one filled with Blessings, the other with Misfortunes; out of which he minglea a Composition for every Man that comes into the World. This Passage so exceedingly pleased me, that as I fell insensibly into my Afternoon's Slumber, it wrought my Imagination into the following Dream.

WHEN Jupiter took into his Hands the Government of the World, the several Parts of Nature, with the presiding Deities, did Homage to him. One presented him with a Mountain of Winds, another with a Magazine of Hail, and a third with a Pile of Thunder-bolts. The Stars offered up their Influences; the Ocean gave in his Trident, the Earth her Fruits, and the Sun his Seasons. Among the several Deities who came to make their Court on this Occasion, the Destinies advanced with two great Tuns carried before them, one of which they fixed at the Right Hand of Jupiter, as he sat upon his Throne, and the other on his Left. The first was filled with all the Blessings, and the other with all the Calamities of humane Life. Jupiter in the Beginning of his Reign, finding the World much more innocent than it is in this Iron Age, poured very plentifully out of the Tun that stood at his Right Hand; but as Mankind degenerated, and became unworthy of his Blessings, he set abroad the other Vessel, that filled the World with Pain and Poverty, Barrels and Distempers, Jealousy and Falshood, intoxicating Pleasures and untimely Deaths.

HE was at length so very much incensed at the great Depravation of humane Nature, and the repeated Provocations which he received from all Parts of the Earth, that having resolved to destroy the whole Species, except Deucalion and Pyrrha, he commanded the Destinies to gather up the Blessings which he had thrown away upon the Sons of Men, and lay them up till the World should should be inhabited by a more virtuous and deserving Race of Mortals.

THE three Sisters immediately repaired to the Earth, in Search of the several Blessings that had been scattered on it; but found the Task which was enjoined them, to be much more difficult than they had imagined. The first Places they resorted to, as the most likely to succeed in, were Cities, Palaces and Courts; but instead of meeting with what they looked for here, they found nothing but Envy, Repining, Uneasiness, and the like bitter Ingredients, of the Left Hand Vessel. Whereas to their great Surprize, they discovered Content, Chearfulness, Health, Innocence, and other the most substantial Blessings of Life, in Cottages, Shades and Solitudes.

THERE was another Circumstance no less unexpected than the former, and which gave them very great Perplexity in the Discharge of the Trust which Jupiter had committed to them. They observed, that several Blessings had degenerated into Calamities, and that several Calamities had improved into Blessings, according as they fell into the Possession of wise or foolish Men. They often found Power, with so much Insolence and Impatience cleaving to it, that it became a Misfortune to the Person on whom it was conferred. Youth had often Distempers growing about it, worse than the Infirmities of old Age; Wealth was often united to such a sordid Avarice, as made it the most uncomfortable and painful Kind of Poverty. On the contrary, they often found Pain made glorious by Fortitude, Poverty lost in Content, Deformity beautified with Virtue. In a Word, the Blessings were often like good Fruits planted in a bad Soil, that by Degrees fall off from their natural Relish, into Tastes altogether insipid or unwholesome; and the Calamities, like harsh Fruits, cultivated in a good Soil, and enriched by proper Grafts and Inoculations, till they swell with generous and delightful Juices.

THERE was still a third Circumstance that occasioned as great a Surprize to the three Sisters as either of the foregoing, when they discovered several Blessings and Calamities which had never been in either of the Tuns that stood by the Throne of Jupiter, and were nevertheless as great Occasions of Happiness or Misery as any there. These were that spurious Crop of Blessings and Calamities which were never sown by the Hand of the Deity, but grow of themselves out of the Fancies and Dispositions of humane Creatures. Such are Dress, Titles, Place, Equipment, false Shame and groundless Fear, with the like vain Imaginations that shoot up in trifling, weak and irresolute Minds.

THE Destinies finding themselves in so great a Perplexity, concluded, that it would be impossible for them to execute the Commands that had been given them according to their first Intention; for which Reason they agreed to throw all the Blessings and Calamities together into one large Vessel, and in that Manner offer them up at the Feet of Jupiter.

THIS was performed accordingly, the eldest Sister presenting herself before the Vessel, and introducing it with an Apology for what they had done.

O Jupiter! (says she) we have gathered together all the Good and Evil, the Comforts and Distresses of humane Life, which we thus present before thee in one promiscuous Heap. We beseech thee that thou thy self wilt sort them out for the future, as in thy Wisdom thou shalt think fit. For we acknowledge, that there is none besides thee that can judge what will occasion Grief or Joy in the Heart of a humane Creature, and what will prove a Blessing or a Calamity to the Person on whom it is bestowed.

— Up

—Ut ameris amabilis es. Ovid.

Nº 147. Saturday March 18. 1709.

From my own Apartment, March 17. 1709.

READING is to the Mind, what Exercise is to the Body. As by the one, Health is preserved, strengthened and invigorated; by the other, Virtue (which is the Health of the Mind) is kept alive, cherished and confirmed. But as Exercise becomes tedious and painful when we make Use of it only as the Means of Health, so Reading is apt to grow uneasy and burthensome, when we apply our selves to it only for our Improvement in Virtue. For this Reason, the Virtue which we gather from a Fable, or an Allegory, is like the Health we get by Hunting; as we are engaged in an agreeable Pursuit that draws us on with Pleasure, and makes us insensible of the Fatigues that accompany it.

AFTER this Preface, I shall set down a very beautiful Allegorical Fable of the great Poet whom I mentioned in my last Paper, and whom it is very difficult to lay aside when one is engaged, in the reading of him. And this I particularly design for the Use of several of my fair Correspondents, who in their Letters have complained to me, that they have lost the Affections of their Husbands, and desire my Advice how to recover them.

JUNO, says Homer, seeing her Jupiter seated on the Top of Mount Ida, and knowing that he had conceived an Aversion to her, began to study how she should regain his Affections, and make herself amiable to him. With this Thought she immediately retired into her Chamber, where She bathed herself in Ambrosia, which gave her Person all its Beauty, and diffused so divine an Odour, as refresh'd all Nature, and sweetened both Heaven and Earth. She let her immortal Tresses flow in the most graceful Manner, and took a particular Care to dress herself in several Ornaments, which the Poet describes at length, and which the Goddess chose out as the most proper to set off her Person to the best Advantage. In the next Place, she made a Visit to Venus, the Deity who presides over Love, and begged of her, as a Particular Favour, that she would lend her for a while those Charms with which she subdued the Hearts both of Gods and Men. For says the Goddess, I would make use of them to reconcile the two Deities, who took Care of me in my Infancy, and who at present are at so great a Variance, that they are estranged from each other's Bed. Venus was proud of an Opportunity of obliging so great a Goddess, and therefore made her a present of the Cestus which she used to wear about her own Waist, with Advice to hide it in her Bosom till she had accomplished her Intention. Tis Cestus was a fine Party-coloured Girdle, which, as Homer tells us, had all the Attractions of the Sex wrought into it. The four principal Figures in the Embroidery were Love, Desire, Fondness of Speech, and Conversation, filled with that Sweetness and Complacency, which, says the Poet, insensibly steal away the Hearts of the wisest Men.

JUNO, after having made these necessary Preparations, came as by Accident into the Presence of Jupiter, who is said to have been much inflamed with her Beauty, as when he first stole to her Embraces without the Consent of their Parents. Juno, to cover her real Thoughts told him as she had told Venus, that she was going to make a Visit to Oceanus and Tethys. He prevailed upon her to stay with him, protesting to her, that she appeared more amiable in his Eye, than ever any Mortal, Goddess, or even herself, had appeared to him till that Day. The Poet then represents him in so great an Ardour, that (without going up to the House which had been built by the Hands of Vulcan according to Juno's Direction) he threw a golden Cloud over their Heads as they sat upon the Top of Mount Ida, while the Earth beneath them sprung up in Lotus's, Saffrons, Hyacinths, and a Bed of the softest Flowers for their Repose.

THIS close Translation of one of the finest Passages in Homer, may suggest Abundance of Instruction to a Woman who has a Mind to preserve or recall the Affection of her Husband. The Care of the Person, and the Dress, with the particular Blandishments woven in the Cestus, are so plainly recommended by this Fable, and so indispensably necessary in every Female who desires to please, that they need no further Explanation. The Discretion likewise in covering all Matrimonial Quarrels from the Knowledge of others, is taught in the pretended Visit to Tethys, in the Speech where Juno addresses herself to Venus; as the chaste and prudent Management of a Wife's Charms is intimated by the same Pretence for her appearing before Jupiter, and by the Concealment of the Cestus in her Bosom.

I shall leave this Tale to the Consideration of such good Housewives who are never well dress'd but when they are abroad, and think it necessary to appear more agreeable to all Men living than their Husbands: As also to those prudent Ladies, who to avoid the Appearance of being over-fond, entertain their Husbands with Indifference, Aversion, sullen Silence, or exasperating Language.

Sheer Lane, March 17.

UPON my coming Home last Night, I found a very handsome Present of Wine left for me, as a Taste, of 216 Hogsheads which are to be put to Sale at 20l. a Hogshead, at Garraway's Coffee-house in Exchange-Alley, on the 22d Instant at three in the Afternoon, and to be raffed in Major Long's Vaults from the 20th Instant till the Time of Sale. This having been sent to me with a Desire that I would give my Judgment upon it, I immediately impanelled a Jury of Men of nice Palates and strong Heads, who being all of them very scrupulous, and unwilling to proceed rashly in a Matter of so great Importance, refused to bring in their Verdict till three in the Morning; at which Time the Foreman pronounced, as well as he was able, Extra-ordinary French Claret. For my own Part, as I love to consult my Pillow in all Points of Moment, I slept upon it before I would give my Sentence, and this Morning confirmed the Verdict.

at

HAVING mentioned this Tribute of Wine, I must give Notice to my Correspondents for the future, who shall apply to me on this Occasion, That as I shall decide nothing unadvisedly in Matters of this Nature, I cannot pretend to give Judgment of a right good Liquor, without examining at least three Dozen Bottles of it. I must at the same Time do my self the Justice to let the World know, that I have resisted great Temptations in this Kind; as it is well known to a Butcher in Clare-Market, who endeavoured to corrupt me with a Dozen and half of Marrow-Bones. I had likewise a Bribe sent me by a Fishmonger, consisting of a Collar of Brawn, and a Joll of Salmon; but not finding them excellent in their Kinds, I had the Integrity to eat them both up, without speaking one Word of them. However, for the future, I shall have an Eye to the Diet of this great City, and will recommend the best and most wholesome Food to them, if I receive these proper and respectful Notices from the Seller, that it may not be said hereafter, my Readers were better taught than fed.

Gullus

— Gustus elementa per omnia quarum,
Nunquam animo pretiis obstantibus. — Juv.

Nº 148. Tuesday, March 21. 1709.

From my own Apartment, March 20.

HAVING intimated in my last Paper, that I design to take under my Inspection the Diet of this great City, I shall begin with a very earnest and serious Exhortation to all my well-disposed Readers, that they would return to the Food of their Forefathers, and reconcile themselves to Beef and Mutton. This was the Diet which bred that hardy Race of Mortals who won the Fields of Crissy and Agincourt. I need not go up so high as the History of Guy Earl of Warwick, who is well known to have eaten up a Dun Cow of his own killing. The renowned King Arthur is generally looked upon as the first who ever sate down to a whole roasted Ox, (which was certainly the best Way to preserve the Gravy) and it is further added, that he and his Knights sate about it at his round Table, and usually consumed it to the very Bones before they would enter upon any Debate of Moment. The Black Prince was a professed Lover of the Brisket; not to mention the History of the Sirloin, or the Institution of the Order of Beef Eaters, which are all so many evident and undeniable Marks of the great Respect which our warlike Predecessors have paid to this excellent Food. The Tables of the ancient Gentry of this Nation were covered thrice a Day with hot Roast-Beef; and I am credibly informed, by an Antiquary who has searched the Registers, in which the Bills of Fare of the Court are recorded, that instead of

Tea

Tea and Bread and Butter, which have prevail'd of late Years, the Maids of Honour in Queen Elizabeth's Time were allowed Three Rumps of Beef for their Breakfast. Mutton has likewise been in great Repute among our valiant Countrymen, but was formerly observed to be the Food rather of Men of nice and delicate Appetites, than those of strong and robust Constitutions. For which Reason, even to this Day, we use the Word Sheep-Biter as a Term of Reproach, as we do Beef-Eater in a respectful and honourable Sense. As for the Flesh of Lamb, Veal, Chicken, and other Animals under Age, they were the Invention of sickly and degenerate Palates, according to that wholesome Remark of Daniel the Historian, who takes Notice, That in all Taxes upon Provisions, during the Reigns of several of our Kings, there is nothing mentioned besides the Flesh of such Fowl and Cattle as were arrived at their full Growth, and were mature for Slaughter. The common People of this Kingdom do still keep up the Taste of their Ancestors; and it is to this that we in a great Measure owe the unparallel'd Victories that have been gained in this Reign: For I would desire my Reader to consider, what Work our Countrymen would have made at Blenheim and Ramillies, if they had been fed with Fricacies and Ragouts.

FOR this Reason, we at present see the florid Complexion, the strong Limb, and the hale Constitution are to be found chiefly among the meanner Sort of People, or in the wild Gentry, who have been educated among the Woods or Mountains. Whereas many great Families are insensibly fallen off from the Athletick Constitution of their Progenitors, and are dwindled away into a pale, sickly, spindle legged Generation of Valetudinarians.

I may perhaps be thought extravagant in my Notion; but I must confess, I am apt to im-48. avail-Queen ps of ewise Coun-

the appe-tutie use ach, nour-Yeal, they e Park of at in as of oned e as mathis An-Mea-have desire oun-Ra-
and orid Con-canwhe ounsen-tion into Vain im-pute

pute the Dishonours that sometimes happen in great Families to the inflaming Kind of Diet which is so much in Fashion. Many Dishes can excite Desire without giving Strength, and heat the Body without nourishing it; as Physicians, observe, That the poorest and most dispirited Blood is most subjects to Fevers. I look upon a French Ragout to be as pernicious to the Stomach as a Glass of Spirits; and when I have seen a young Lady swallow all the Instigations of high Soups, seasoned Sauces, and forced Meats, I have wondered at the Despair or tedious Sighing of her Lovers.

THE Rules among these false Delicates, are to be as contradictory as they can be to Nature.

WITHOUT expecting the Return of Hunger, they eat for an Appetite, and prepare Dishes not to allay, but to excite it.

THEY admit of nothing at their Tables in its natural Form, or without some Disguise.

THEY are to eat every Thing before it comes in Season, and to leave it off as soon as it is good to be eaten.

THEY are not to approve any Thing that is agreeable to ordinary Palates; and nothing is to gratify their Senses, but what would offend those of their Inferiors.

I remember I was last Summer invited to a Friend's House, who is a great Admirer of the French Cookery, and (as the Phrase is) eats well. At our sitting down, I found the Table covered with a great Variety of unknown Dishes. I was mightily at a Loss to learn what they were, and therefore did not know where to help my self. That which stood before me, I took to be a roast-ed Porcupine, however did not care for asking Questions; and have since been informed, that it was only a larded Turkey. I afterwards pased my Eye over several Hashes, which I do not know the Names of to this Day; and hearing that they were Delicacies, did not think fit to meddle with them.

AMONG other Dainties, I saw something like a Pheasant, and therefore desired to be helped to a Wing of it; but to my great Surprise, my Friend told me it was a Rabbet, which is a Sort of Meat I never cared for. At last I discovered, with some Joy, a Pig at the lower End of the Table, and begged a Gentleman that was near it to cut me a Piece of it. Upon which the Gentleman of the House said, with great Civility, I am sure you will like the Pig, for it was whipped to Death. I must confess, I heard him with Horror, and could not eat of an Animal that had died so tragical a Death. I was now in great Hunger and Confusion, when, methought, I smelted the agreeable Savour of Roast-Beef, but could not tell from which Dish it arose, tho' I did not question but it lay disguised in one of them. Upon turning my Head, I saw a notable Sirloin on the Side-Table smoaking in the most delicious Manner. I had Recourse to it more than once, and could not see, without some Indignation, that substantial English Dish banished in so ignominious a Manner, to make Way for French Kickshaws.

THE Desert was brought up at last, which in Truth was as extraordinary as any Thing that had come before it. The whole, when ranged in its proper Order, looked like a very beautiful Winter-piece. There were several Pyramids of candid Sweetmeats, that hung like Icicles, with Fruits scattered up and down, and hid in an artificial Kind of Frost. At the same Time there were great Quantities of Cream beaten up into Snow, and near them little Plates of Sugar-Plums, disposed like so many Heaps of Hailstones, with a Multitude of Congelations in Jellies of various Colours. I was indeed so pleased with the several Objects which lay before me, that I did not care for displacing any of them, and was half angry with the rest of the Company, that for the Sake of a Piece of Lemon-peel, a Sugar-Plumb, would spoil so pleasing a Picture. Indeed, I could not but smile to see several of them cooling their Mouths with Lumps of Ice, which they had just before been burning with Salts and Peppers.

AS soon as this Show was over, I took my leave, that I might finish my Dinner at my own house: For as I in every Thing love what is simple and natural, so particularly in my Food; two plain Dishes, with two or three good natured, cheerful, ingenious Friends, would make me more pleased and vain, than all that Pomp and Luxury can bestow. For it is my Maxim, that he keeps the greatest Table, who has the most valuable Company at it.

No 149. Thursday, March 23. 1709.

From my own Apartment, March 22.

IT has often been a solid Grief to me, when I have reflected on this glorious Nation, which the Scene of publick Happiness and Liberty, that there are still Crowds of private Tyrants, against whom there neither is any Law now in being, nor can there be invented any by the wit of Man. These cruel Men are ill-natured husbands. The Commerce in the conjugal State so delicate, that it is impossible to prescribe Rules for the Conduct of it, so as to fit Ten Thousand nameless Pleasures and Disquietudes which arise to People in that Condition. But it is in this as in some other nice Cases, where touching upon the Malady tenderly, is half Way to the Cure; and there are some Faults which need only to be observed to be amended. I am put into this Way of thinking by a late Conversation which I am going to give an Account of. I

I made a Visit the other Day to a Family for which I have a great Honour, and found the Father, the Mother, and Two or Three of the younger Children drop off designedly to leave me alone with the eldest Daughter, who was but a Visitant there as well as my self, and is the Wife of a Gentleman of a very fair Character in the World. As soon as we were alone, I saw her Eyes full of Tears, and methought she had much to say to me, for which she wanted Encouragement. Madam, said I, you know I will you all as well as any Friend you have: Speak freely what I see you are oppressed with, and you may be sure, if I cannot relieve your Distress, you may at least reap so much present Advantage, as safely to give your self the Ease of uttering it. She immediately assumed the more becoming Composure of Countenance, and spoke as follows: ' It is an Aggravation of Affliction in a married Life, that there is a Sort of Guilt in communicating it: For which Reason it is that a Lady of your and my Acquaintance, instead of speaking to you herself, desired me the next Time I saw you, as you are a professed Friend to our Sex, to turn your Thoughts upon the reciprocal Complaisance which is the Duty of a married State.

' MY Friend was neither in Birth, Fortune, or Education, below the Gentleman whom she has married. Her Person, her Age, and her Character, are also such as he can make no Exception to. But so it is, that from the Moment the Marriage-Ceremony was over, the Obscuousness of a Lover was turned into the Haughtiness of a Master. All the kind Endeavours which she uses to please him, are at best but so many Instances of her Duty. This Indolence takes away that secret Satisfaction which does not only excite to Virtue, but also rewards it. It abates the Fire of a free and generous Love, and imbibers all the Pleasure of a social Life'. The young Lady spoke all this with such an Air of Resentment, as discovered how nearly she was concerned in the Distress.

WHEN I observed she had done speaking, Madam, said I, the Affliction you mention is the greatest that can happen in humane Life, and I know but one Consolation in it, if that be a Consolation, that the Calamity is a pretty general one. There is nothing so common as for Men to enter into Marriage, without so much as expecting to be happy in it. They seem to propose to themselves a few Holidays in the Beginning of it; after which they are to return at-best to the usual Course of their Life; and for ought they know, to constant Misery and Uneasiness. From this false Sense of the State they are going into, proceeds the immediate Coldness and Indifference, or Hatred and Aversion, which attend ordinary Marriages, or rather Bargains to cohabit. Our Conversation was here interrupted by Company which came in upon us.

THE Humour of affecting a superior Carriage, generally rises from a false Notion of the Weakness of a Female Understanding in general, or an over-weaning Opinion that we have of our own: For when it proceeds from a natural Ruggedness and Brutality of Temper, it is altogether incorrigible, and not to be amended by Admonition. Sir Francis Bacon, as I remember, lays it down as a Maxim, That no Marriage can be happy in which the Wife has no Opinion of her Husband's Wisdom; but without Offence to so great an Authority, I may venture to say, That a sullen wise Man is as bad as a good-natured Fool. Knowledge softened with Complacency, and good Breeding, will make a Man equally beloved and respected; but when joined with a severe, distant and unsociable Temper, it creates rather Fear than Love. I who am a Bachelor, have no other Notion of conjugal Tenderness, but what I learn from Books, and shall therefore produce Three Letters of Pliny, who was not only one of the greatest, but the most learned Men in the whole Roman Empire. At the same Time I am very much ashamed, that on such Occasions I am obliged to have Recourse to Heathen Authors, and shall appeal to my Readers, if they would not think it a Mark of a narrow Education in a Man of Quality to write such passionate Letters to any Woman but a Mistress. They were all Three written at a Time when she was at a Distance from him: The first of them put me in Mind of a married Friend of mine, who said, Sickness it self is pleasant to a Man that is attended in it by one whom he dearly loves.

but

Pliny to Calphurnia.

I NEVER was so much offended at Business, as when it hindered me from going with you into the Country, or following you thither: For I more particularly wish to be with you at present, that I might be sensible of the Progress you make in the Recovery of your Strength and Health; as also of the Entertainment and Diversions you can meet with in your Retirement. Believe me, it is an anxious State of Mind to live in Ignorance of what happens to those whom we passionately love. I am not only in Pain for your Absence, but also for your Indisposition. I am afraid of every Thing, fancy every Thing, and, as it is the Nature of Men in Fear, I fancy those Things most, which I am most afraid of. Let me therefore earnestly desire you to Favour me under these my Apprehensions with one Letter every Day, or (if possible) with Two; for I shall be a little at Ease while I am reading your Letters, and grow anxious again as soon as I have read them.

Second LETTER.

YOU tell me, That you are very much afflicted at my Absence, and that you have no Satisfac-

on in any Thing but my Writings, which you often lay by you upon my Pillow. You oblige me very much by wishing to see me, and making me your Comforter in my Absence. In Return, I must let you know, I am no less pleased with the Letters which you writ to me, and read them over a Thousand Times with new Pleasure. If your Letters are capable of giving me so much Pleasure, what would your Conversation do? Let me beg of you to write to me often; tho' at the same time I must confess your Letters give me Anguish whilst they give me Pleasure.

Third LETTER.

T is impossible to conceive how much I languish for you in your Absence; the tender Love I bear you, is the chief Cause of this my Uneasiness, which is still more insupportable, because Absence is wholly a new thing to us. I lie awake most Part of the Night in thinking of you, and several Times of the Day go as naturally to your Apartment, as if you were there to receive me; but when I miss you, I come away dejected, out of Humour, and like a Man that has suffered a Repulse. There is but one Part of the Day in which I am relieved from this Anxiety, and that is when I am engaged in publick Affairs.

YOU may guess at the uneasy Condition of one who has no Rest but in Business, no Consolation but in Trouble.

I shall conclude this Paper with a beautiful Passage out of Milton, and leave it as a Lecture to those of my own Sex, who have a Mind to make their Conversation agreeable as well as instructive, to the fair Partners who are fallen into their Care. Eve having observed, That Adam was entering into some deep Disquisitions with the Angel, who was sent to visit him, is described as retiring from their Company, with a Design of learning what should pass there from her Husband.

So spake our Sire, and by his Count' nance seem'd Entring on studious Thoughts abstruse, which Eve
 Perceiving wheres she sate retir'd in Sight,
 With Lowliness Majestick from her Seat
 Rose, and went forth among her Fruits and Flow'rs Yet went she not, as not with such Discourse Delighted, or not capable her Ear
 Of what was high: Such Pleasure she reserv'd,
 Adam relating, she sole Auditress;
 Her Husband the Relater she preferr'd
 Before the Angel, and of him to ask Chose rather: He, she knew, would intermix Graceful Digressions, and solve high Dispute
 With conjugal Caresses, from his Lip Not Words alone pleas'd her. O! When meet we Such Pairs, in Love and mutual Honour join'd?

Hec sunt jucundi causa cibusque mali.

Ovid.

No 150. Saturday, March 25. 1710.

From my own Apartment, March 24.

I HAVE received the following Letter upon the Subject of my last Paper. The Writer of it tells me, I there spoke of Marriage as one that knows it only by Speculation, and for that Reason he sends me his Sense of it, as drawn from Experience.

Mr. Bickerstaff,

I HAVE received your Paper this Day, and think you have done the Nuptial State a great deal of Justice in the Authority you give us of Pliny, whose Letters to his Wife you have there translated: But give me Leave to tell you, That it is impossible for you, that are a Bachelor, to have so just a Notion of this Way ife, as to touch the Affections of your Readers in a particular, wherein every Man's own Heart suggests more than the nicest Observer can form to himself without Experience. I therefore, who am an old married Man, have sat down to give you an Account of the latter from my own Knowledge, and the Observations which I have made upon the Conduct of others in that soft agreeable or wretched Condition.

Life

IT is very commonly observed, That the most smart Rangings which we meet with, are in the Beginning of Wedlock, which proceed from Ignorance of each other's Humour, and want of Prudence to make Allowances for a Change from the most careful Respect, to the soft unbounded Familiarity. Hence it arises, That Trifles are commonly Occasions of the greatest Anxiety; for Contradiction being a Thing wholly unusual between a new-married Couple, the smallest Instance of it is taken for the biggest Injury; and it very seldom happens, that the Man is slow enough in assuming the Character of a Husband, or the Woman quick enough in condescending to that of a Wife. It immediately follows, that they think they have all the Time of their Courtship been talking in Masks to each other, and therefore begin to act like disappointed People. Philander finds Delia ill-natured and impertinent; and Delia, Philander surly and inconstant.

I have known a fond Couple quarrel in the very Honey-moon about cutting up a Tart: Nay, I could name Two, who after having had Seven Children, fell out and parted Beds upon the boiling of a Leg of Mutton. My very next Neighbours have not spoke to one another these Three Days, because they differed in their Opinions, whether the Clock should stand by the Window, or over the Chimney. It may seem strange to you, who are not a married Man, when I tell you, how the least Trifle can strike a Woman dumb for a Week together. But if you ever enter into this State, you will find that the soft Sex as often express their Anger by an obstinate Silence, as by an ungovernable Glamour.

THOSE indeed who begin this Course of Life without Fears at their setting out, arrive within few Months at a Pitch of Benevolence and Affection, in which the most perfect Friendship is but a faint resemblance. As in the unfortunate Marriage, the most minute and indifferent Things are Objects of the sharpest Resentment; so in an happy one, they are Objects of the most exquisite Satisfaction. For what is not oblige in one we love? What does not offend in one we dislike? For these Reasons I take it for a Rule, That in Marriage, the chief Business is to require Prepossession in Favour of each other. They should consider one another's Words and Actions with a secret indulgence: There should be always an inward Fondue pleading for each other, such as may add new Beauty to every Thing that is excellent, give Charms to what is indifferent, and cover every Thing that is defective. For want of this kind Propensity and Bias of Mind, the married Pair often take Things ill of each other, which no one else would take Notice of in either of them.

BUT the most unhappy Circumstance of all is, where each Party is always laying up Fuel for Dissension, and gathering together a Magazine of Provocations to exasperate each other with when they are out of Humour. These People in common Discourse make no Scruple to let those who are by, know they are quarrelling with one another, and think they are discerning enough, if they conceal from the Company the Matter which they are hinting at. About a Week ago, I was entertained for a whole Dinner with a mysterious Conversation of this Nature; out of which I could learn no more, than that the Husband and Wife were angry at one another. We had no sooner sat down, but says the Gentleman of the House, in order to raise Discourse, I thought Margarita sung extremely well last Night. Upon this, says the Lady, looking as pale as Ashes, I suppose she had Cherry-coloured Ribands on. No, answered the Husband, with a Flush in his Face, but she had laced Shoes. I look upon it, that for each a Stander by on such Occasions has as much Reason to be out of Countenance as either of the Combatants.

To turn off my Confusion, and seem regardless of what had passed, I desired the Servant who attended to give me the Vinegar, which unluckily created a new Dialogue of Hints; for as far as I could gather by the subsequent Discourse, they had dissented the Day before bout the Preference of Elder to Wine-Vinegar. In the midst of their Discourse, there appeared a Dish of Chickens and Sparagras, when the Husband seemed disposed to lay aside all Disputes; and looking upon her with a great deal of good Nature, said, Pray, my Dear, will you help my Friend to a Wing of the Fowl that lies next you, for I think it looks extreamly well. The Lady, instead of answering him, addressing herself to me, Pray, Sir, said she, do you in Surrey reckon the white or the black-legged Fowls the best? I found the Husband changed Colour at the Question; and before I could answer, asked me, Whether we did not all Hops Broom in our Country? I quickly found, they did not ask Questions so much out of Curiosity as Answer: For which Reason I thought fit to keep my Opinion to my self, and, as an honest Man ought, (when he sees Two Friends in Warmth with each other) I took the first Opportunity I could to leave them by themselves.

YOU see, Sir, I have laid before you only small incidents, which are seemingly frivolous; but take it from a Man very well experienced in this State, they are principally Evils of this Nature which make Marriages unhappy. At the same Time, that I may do Justice to this excellent Institution, I must own to you, there are unspeakable Pleasures which are as little regarded in the Computation of the Advantages of Marriage, as the others are in the usual Survey that is made of its Misfortunes.

LOVE MORE and his Wife live together in the happy Possession of each other's Hearts, and by that means have no indifferent Moments, but their whole life is one continued Scene of Delight. Their Passion for each other communicates a certain Satisfaction, like that which they themselves are in, to all that approach them. When she enters the Place where he is, you see a Pleasure which he cannot conceal, nor be or any one else describe. In so consummate an Affection, the presence of the Person beloved, has the Effect of an almost agreeable Conversation, Whether they have Matter to talk of or not, they enjoy the Pleasures of Society, and at the same Time the Freedom of Solitude. The ordinary Life is to be preferred to the happiest Moments of other Lovers. In a Word, they have each of them great Merit, live in the Esteem of all who know them, and seem but to comply with the Opinions of their Friends, in the just Value they have for each other.

Ni vis boni

In ipsa inepta forma; nec formam extinguerent. Ter.

N^o 151. Tuesday, March 28. 1710.

From my own Apartment, March 27.

WHEN Artists would expose their Diamonds to an Advantage, they usually set them to Show in little Cases of black Velvet. By this Means Jewels appear in their true and genuine Lustre, while there is no Colour that can infect their Brightness, or give a false Cast to the Water. When I was at the Opera the other Night, the Assembly of Ladies in Mourning made me consider them in the same Kind of View. A Dress wherein there is so little Variety, shews the Face in all its natural Charms, and makes on differ from another only as it is more or less beautiful. Painters are ever careful of offending against a Rule which is so essential in all just Representations. The chief Figure must have the strongest Point of Light, and not be injured by any gay Colourings that may draw away the Attention to any less considerable Part of the Picture. The present Fashion obliges every Body to be dressed with Propriety, and make the Ladies Faces the principal Objects of Sight. Every beautiful Person shines out in all the Excellence with which Nature has adorned her: Gawdy Ribands and glaring Colours being now out of Use, the Sex has no Opportunity given them to disfigure themselves, which they seldom fail to do whenever it lies in their Power. When a Woman comes to her Glass, she does not employ her Time in making herself look more advantagiously what she really is, but endeavours to be as much another Creature as she possibly can. Whether this happens because they stay so long, and attend their Work so diligently, that they forget the Faces and Persons which they first sat down with, or whatsoever it is, they seldom rise from the Toilet the same Women they appeared when they began to dress. What Jewel can the charming Cleora Place in her Ears, that can please her Beholders so much as her Eyes? The Cluster of Diamonds upon the Breast can add no Beauty to the fair Chest of Ivory which supports it. It may indeed tempt a Man to steal a Woman, but never to love her. Let Thalestris change herself into a motly, party-coloured Animal: The Pearl Necklace, the flowered Stomacher, the artificial Nosegay, and shaded Fur below, may be of Use to attract the Eye of the Beholder, and turn it from the Imperfections of her Features and Shape. But if Ladies will take my Word for it, (and as they dress to please men, they ought to consult our Fancy rather than their own in this Particular) I can assure them, there is nothing touches our Imagination so much as a beautiful Woman in a plain Dress. There might be more agreeable Ornaments found in our own Manufacture, than any that rise out of the Looms of Persepolis.

THIS, I know, is a very harsh Doctrine to Woman-kind, who are carried away with every thing that is showy, and with what Delights the eye, more than any other Species of living Creatures whatsoever. Were the Minds of the Sex laid open, we should find the chief Idea in one to be a Tippet, in another a Muff, in the Third a Fan, and in a Fourth a Fardingal. The Memory of an old visiting Lady is so filled with Gloves, Silks and Ribands, that I can look upon it as nothing else but a Toy-shop. A Matron of my Acquaintance complaining of her Daughter's Vanity, was observing, that she had all of a sudden held up her Head higher than ordinary, and taken an Air that shewed a secret Satisfaction in herself, mixed with a Scorn of others. I did not know, says my Friend, what to make of the Carriage of this fantastical Girl, till I was informed by her elder Sister, that she had a Pair of striped Garters on. This odd Turn of Mind often makes the Sex unhappy, and disposes them to be struck with every Thing that makes a Show, however trifling and superficial.

MANY a Lady has fetched a Sigh at the Toss of a Wig, and been ruined by the tapping of a Snuff-Box. It is impossible to describe the Execution that was done by the Shoulder-Knot while that Fashion prevailed, or to reckon up all the Virgins that have fallen a Sacrifice to a Pair of fringed Gloves. A sincere Heart has not made half so many Conquests as an open Wastcoat; and I should be glad to see an able Head make so good a Figure in a Woman's Company as a Pair of red Heels. A Grecian Hero when he was asked whether he could play upon the Lute, thought he had made a very good Reply, when he answered, No, but I can make a great City of a little one. Notwithstanding his boasted Wisdom, I appeal to the Heart of any Toast in Town, whether she would not think the Lutanist preferable to the Statesman. I do not speak this out of any Aversion that I have to the Sex: On the contrary, I have always had a Tenderness for them; but I must confess it trouble me very much, to see the Generality of them place their Affections on improper Objects, and give up all the Pleasures of Life for Gugaws and Trifles.

Mrs. Margery Bickerstaff, my great Aunt, had Thousand Pounds to her Portion, which our Family was desirous of keeping among themselves, and therefore used all possible Means to turn off her Thoughts from Marriage. The Method they took, was, in any Time of Danger, to throw new Gown or Petticoat in her Way. When she was about Twenty-five Years of Age, she fell in Love with a Man of an agreeable Temper, and equal Fortune, and would certainly have married him, had not my Grandfather, Sir Job, dressed her up in a Suit of flower'd Sattin; upon which she set so immoderate a Value upon herself, that the Lover was contemned and discarded. In the Fortieth Year of her Age, she was again smitten, but very luckily transferred her Passion to a Tippet, which was presented to her by another Relation who was in the Plot. This, with a white Sarsenet Hood, kept her safe in the Family till Fifty. About Sixty, which generally produces a Kind of latter Spring in amorous Constitutions, my Aunt Margery had again Colt's Tooth in her Head, and would certainly have eloped from the Mansion-house, had not her Brother Simon, who was a wise Man, and a Scholar, advised to dress her in Cherry-colour'd Ribands, which was the only Expedient that could have been found out by the Wit of Man to preserve the Thousand Pounds in our Family, part of which I enjoy at this Time.

THIS Discourse puts me in Mind of an Humorist mentioned by Horace, called Extrapelus, who, when he designed to do a Man a Mischief, made him a Present of a gay Suit; and brings to my Memory another Passage of the same Author, when he describes the most ornamental Dress that a Woman can appear in with Two Words, Simplex

Munditis, which I have quoted for the Benefit my Female Readers.

Dili, quibus imperium est animarum, umbraq; silentia
Et Chaos, & Pblegethon, loca nocte silentia late,
Sit mihi fas audita loqui, sit numine vestro
Pandere res alta terra & caliginne mersas. Virg.

No 152. Thursday, March 30. 1710.

From my own Apartment, March 29.

A MAN who confines his Speculations to the Time present, has but a very narrow Province to employ his Thoughts in. For this Reason, Persons of studious and contemplative Natures often entertain themselves with the History of past Ages, or raise Schemes and Conjectures upon Futurity. For my own Part, I love to range thro' that Half of Eternity, which is still to come, rather than look on that which is already run out; because I know I have a real Share and Interest in the one, whereas all that was transacted in the other, can be only Matter of Curiosity to me.

UPON this Account, I have been always very much delighted with meditating on the Soul's Immortality, and in reading the several Notions which the wisest of Men, both ancient and modern, have entertained on that Subject. What the Opinions of the greatest Philosophers have been, I have several Times hinted at, and shall give an Account of them from Time to Time as Occasion requires. It may likewise be worth while to consider, what Men of the most exalted Genius, and elevated Imagination, have thought of this Matter. Among these, Homer stands up as a Prodigy of Mankind, that looks own upon the rest of Humane Creatures as ~~a~~ species beneath him. Since he is the most ancient Heathen Author, we may guess from his Relation, what were the common Opinions in his Time concerning the State of the Soul after Death.

ULYSSES, he tells us, made a Voyage to the Regions of the Dead, in order to consult Tiresias how he should return to his own Country, and recommend himself to the Favour of the Gods. The Poet scarce introduces a single Person, who doth not suggest some useful Precept to his Reader, and designs his Description of the Dead for the Amendment of the Living.

ULYSSES, after having made a very plentious Sacrifice, lade him down by the Pool of Holy Blood, which attracted a prodigious Assembly of Ghosts of all Ages and Conditions, that hovered about the Hero, and feasted upon the Streams of his Oblation. The first he knew, was the Shade of Elpenor, who, to shew the Activity of a Spirit above that of Body, is represented as arrived there long before Ulysses, notwithstanding the Winds and Seas had contributed all their Force to hasten his Voyage thither. This Elpenor, to inspire the Reader with a Detestation of Drunkenness, and at the same Time, with a Religious Care of doing proper Honours to the Dead, describes himself as having broken his Neck in a Debauch of Wine; and begs Ulysses, that for the Repose of his Soul, he would build a Monument over him, and perform Funeral Rites to his Memory. Ulysses, with great Sorrow of Heart, promises to fulfil his Request, and is immediately diverted to an Object much more moving than the Former. The Ghost of his own Mother Anticlea, whom he still thought living, appears to him among the Multitude of Shades that surrounded him, and sits down at a small Distance from him by the Lake of Blood without speaking to him, or knowing who he was. Ulysses was exceedingly troubled at the Sight, and could not forbear weeping as he looked upon her: But being all along set forth as a Pattern of consummate Wisdom, he makes his Affection give Way to Prudence; and therefore, upon his seeing Tiresias, does not reveal himself to his Mother, till he had consulted that great Prophet, who was the Occasion of this his Descent into the Empire of the Dead. Tiresias having cautioned him to keep himself, and his Companions, free from the Guilt of Sacrilege, and to pay his Devotions to all the Gods, promises him a safe Return to his Kingdom and Family, and a happy old Age in the Enjoyment of them.

THE Poet having thus, with great Art, kept the Curiosity of his Reader in Suspense, represents his wise Man, after the Dispatch of his Business with Tiresias, as yielding himself up to the Calls of natural Affection, and making himself known to his Mother. Her Eyes are no sooner opened, but she cries out in Tears, Oh my Son! and enquires into the Occasions that brought him thither, and the Fortune that attended him.

ULYSSES, on the other Hand, desires to know what the Sickness was that had sent her into those Regions, and the Condition in which she had left his Father, his Son, and more particularly his Wife. She tells him, they were all Three inconsolable for his Absence; and as for myself, says she, that was the Sickness of which I died. My Impatience for your Return, my Anxiety for your Welfare, and my Fondness for my Dear Ulysses, were the only Distempers that preyed upon my Life, and separated my Soul from my Body. Ulysses was melted with these Expressions of Tenderness, and thrice endeavoured to catch the Apparition in his Arms, that he might hold his Mother in his Bosom and weep over her.

THIS gives the Poet Occasion to describe the Notion the Heathens at that Time had of an unbodied Soul, in the Excuse which the Mother makes makes for seeming to withdraw her self from her Son's Embraces. The Soul says she, is composed neither of Bones, Flesh, nor Sinews, but leaves behind her all these Incumbrances of Mortality to be consumed on the Funeral Pile. As soon as she has thus cast her Burthen, she makes her Escape, and flies away from it like a Dream.

WHEN this melancholy Conversation is at an End, the Poet draws up to View as charming a Vision as could enter into Man's Imagination. He describes the next who appeared to Ulysses, to have been the Shades of the finest Women that had ever lived upon the Earth, and who had either been the Daughters of Kings, the Mistresses of Gods, or Mothers of Heroes, such as Antiope, Alcmena, Leda, Ariadne, Iphimedia, Eriphyle, and several others, of whom he gives a Catalogue, with a short History of their Adventures. The beautiful Assembly of Apparitions were all gathered together about the Blood: Each of them, says Ulysses, (as a gentle Satire upon Female Vanity) giving me an Account of her Birth and Family. This Scene of extraordinary Women, seems to have been designed by the Poet as a Lecture of Mortality to the whole Sex, and to put them in Mind of what they must expect, notwithstanding the greatest Perfections, and highest Honours, they can arrive at.

THE Circle of Beauties at length disappeared, and was succeeded by the Shades of several Grecian Heroes who had been engaged with Ulysses in the Siege of Troy. The first that approached, was Agamemnon, the Generalissimo of that great Expedition, who at the Appearance of his old Friend wept very bitterly, and without saying any Thing to him, endeavoured to grasp him by the Hand. Ulysses, who was much moved at the Sight, poured out a Flood of Tears, and ask'd him the Occasion of his Death, which Agamemnon related to him in all its tragical Circumstances; how he was murdered at a Banquet by the Contrivance of his own Wife, in Conferacy with her Adulterer: From whence he takes Occasion to reproach the whole Sex, after Manner which would be inexcusable in a Man who had not been so great a Sufferer by them.

My Wife, says he, has disgraced all the Women that shall ever be born into the World, even those who hereafter shall be innocent: Take Care how you grow to fond of your Wife. Never tell her all you know. If you reveal some Things to her, be sure you keep others concealed from her. You indeed have nothing to fear from your Penelope, she will not use you as my Wife has treated me; however, take Care how you trust a Woman. The Poet, in this and other Instances, according to the System of many Heathen as well as Christian Philosophers, shews, how Anger, Revenge, and other Habits which the Soul had contracted in the Body, subsist, and grow in it under its State of Separation.

I am extremely pleased with the Companions which the Poet in the next Description assigns to Achilles. Achilles (says the Hero) came in ~~to~~ me with Patroclus and Antilochus. By which we may see that it was Homer's Opinion, and probably that of the Age he lived in, that the Friendships which are made among the Living, will likewise continue among the Dead. Achilles enquires after the Welfare of his Son, and of his Father, with a Fierceness of the same Character that Homer has every where expressed in the Actions of his Life. The Passage relating to his Son, is so extremely beautiful, that I must not omit it. Ulysses, after having described him as wise in Council, and active in War, and mentioned the Foes whom he had slain in the Battel, adds an Observation that lie himself had made of his Behaviour whilst he lay in the wooden Horse. Most of the Generals, says he, that were wish us, either wept or trembled: As for your Son, I neither saw him wipe a Tear from his Cheeks, or change his Countenance; on the contrary, he would often lay his Hand upon his Sword, or grasp his Spear, as impatient to employ them against the Trojans. He then informs his Father of the great Honour and Rewards which he had purchased before Troy, and of his Return from it without a Wound. The Shade of Achilles, says the Poet, was so pleased with the Account he received of his Son, that he enquired no further, but stalked away with more than ordinary Majesty over the green Meadow that lay before them.

THIS last Circumstance of a deceased Father's Rejoicing in the Behaviour of his Son, is very finely contrived by Homer, as an Incentive to Virtue, and made use of by none that I know besides himself.

THE Description of Ajax, which follows, and his Refusing to speak to Ulysses, who had won the Armour of Achilles from him, and by that Means occasioned his Death, is admired by every one that reads it. When Ulysses relates the Sullenness of his Deportment, and considers the Greatness of the Hero, he expresses himself with generous and noble Sentiments. Ob! that I had never gained a Prize which cost the Life of so brave a Man as Ajax: who, for the Beauty of his Person, and Greatness of his Actions, was inferior to none but the Divine Achilles. The same noble Condescension, which never dwells but in truly great Minds, and such as Homer would represent that of Ulysses to have been, discovers it self likewise in the Speech which he made to the Ghost of Ajax on that Occasion. Ob Ajax! (says he) Will you keep your Resentments even after Death? What Destructions hath this fatal Armour brought upon the Greeks, by robbing them of you, who were their Bulwark and Defence? Achilles is not more bitterly lamented among us than you. Impute not then your Death to any one but Jupiter, who out of his Anger to the Greeks, took you away from among them: Let me intreat you to approach me; restrain the Fierceness of your Wrath, and the Greatness of your Soul, and bear what I have to say to you. Ajax, without making a Reply, turned his Back upon him, and retired into a Crowd of Ghosts.

ULYSSES, after all these Visions, took a View of those impious Wretches who lay in Tortures for the Crimes they had committed upon the Earth, whom he describes under all the Varieties of Pain, as so many Marks of Divine Vengeance, to deter others from following their Example. He then tells us, That notwithstanding he had a great Curiosity to see the Heroes that lived in the Ages before him, the Ghosts began to gather about him in such prodigious Multitudes, and with such a Confusion of Voices, that his Heart trembled as he saw himself amidst so great a Scene of Horrors. He adds, That he was afraid lest some hideous Spectre should appear to him, that might terrify him to Distraction; and therefore withdrew in Time.

I Question not but my Reader will be pleased with this Description of a future State, represented by such a noble and fruitful Imagination, that had nothing to direct it besides the Light of Nature, and the Opinions of a dark and ignorant Age.

Bamballo, clangor, stridor, taratantara, murmur.

Farn. Rhet.

N^o 153 Saturday, April 1. 1710.

From my own Apartment, March 31.

I HAVE heard of a very valuable Picture, wherein all the Painters of the Age, in which it was drawn, are represented sitting together in a Circle, and joining in a Consort of Musick. Each of them plays upon such a particular Instrument strument as is the most suitable to his Character, and expresses that Style and Manner of Painting which is peculiar to him. The famous Cupola-Painter of those Times, to shew the Grandeur and Boldness of his Figures, hath a Horn in his Mouth, which he seems to wind with great Strength and Force. On the contrary, an eminent Artist, who wrought up his Pictures with the greatest Accuracy, and gave them all those delicate Touches which are apt to please the nicest Eye, is represented as tuning a Theorbo. The same Kind of Humour runs thro' the whole Piece.

I have often, from this Hint, imagined to my self, that different Talents in Discourse might be shadowed out after the same Manner by different Kinds of Musick; and that the several convervable Parts of Mankind in this great City, might be cast into proper Characters and Divisions, as they resemble several Instruments that are in Use among the Masters of Harmony. Of these therefore in their Order, and first of the Drum.

YOUR Drums are the Blusterers in Conversation, that with a loud Laugh, unnatural Mirth, and a Torrent of Noise, domineer in publick Assemblies, over-bear Men of Sense, stun their Companions, and fill the Place they are in with a rattling Sound, that hath seldom any Wit, Humour, or good Breeding in it. The Drum notwithstanding, by this boisterous Vivacity, is very proper to impose upon the Ignorant; and in Conversation with Ladies, who are not of the finest Taste, often passes for a Man of Mirth and Wit, and for wonderful pleasant Company. I need not observe, that the Emptiness of the Drum very much contributes to its Noise.

THE Lute is a Character directly opposite to the Drum, and sounds very finely by it self, or in a very small Consort. Its Notes are exquisitely sweet, and very low, easily drowned in a Multitude of Instruments, and even lost among a few, unless you give a particular Attention to it. A Lute is seldom heard in a Company of more than Five, whereas a Drum will shew it self to Advantage in an Assembly of Five Hundred. The Lutanists therefore are Men of fine Genius, uncommon Reflection, great Affability, and esteemed chiefly by Persons of a good Taste, who are the only proper Judges of so delightful and soft Melody.

Mul-

THE Trumpet is an Instrument that has in it no Compass of Musick, or Variety of Sound, but is notwithstanding very agreeable, so long as it keeps within its Pitch. It has not above Four or Five Notes, which are however very pleasing, and capable of exquisite Turns and Modulations. The Gentlemen who fall under this Denomination, are your Men of the most fashionable Education, and refined Breeding, who have learned a certain Smoothness of Discourse, and Sprightliness of Air, from the polite Company they have kept; but at the same Time have shallow Parts, weak Judgments, and a short Reach of Understanding. A Play-House, a Drawing-Room, a Ball, a Visiting-Day, or a Ring at Hide-Park, are the few Notes they are Masters of, which they touch upon in all Conversations. The Trumpet however is a necessary Instrument about a Court, and a proper Enlivener of a Consort, though of no great Harmony by it self.

VIOLINS are the lively, forward, impertunate Wits, that distinguish themselves by the Flourishes of Imagination, Sharpness of Repartee, Glances of Satire, and bear away the upper Part in every Consort. I cannot however but observe, That when a Man is not disposed to hear Musick, there is not a more disagreeable Sound in Harmony than that of a Violin.

THERE is another musical Instrument, which is more frequent in this Nation than any other; I mean your Bass-Viol, which grumbles

in

in the Bottom of the Consort, and with a surly-masculine Sound strengthens the Harmony, and tempers the Sweetness of the several Instruments that play along with it. The Bass-Viol is an Instrument of a quite different Nature to the Trumpet, and may signify Men of rough Sense, and unpolished Parts, who do not love to hear themselves talk, but sometimes break out with an agreeable Bluntness, unexpected Wit, and surly Pleasantries, to the no small Diversion of their Friends and Companions. In short, I look upon every sensible true-born Britain to be naturally a Bass-Viol.

As for your rural Wits, who talk with great Eloquence and Alacrity, of Foxes, Hounds, Horses, Quickset-Hedges, and Six Bar-gates, double Ditches, and broken Necks, I am in Doubt, whether I should give them a Place in the conversable World. However, if they will content themselves with being raised to the Dignity of Hunting-Horns, I shall desire for the Future, that they may be known by that Name.

I must not here omit the Bag-pipe Species, that will entertain you from Morning to Night with the Repetition of a few Notes, which are played over and over, with the perpetual Humming of a Drone running underneath them. These are your dull, heavy, tedious Story-Tellers, the Load and Burthen of Conversations, that set up for Men of Importance, by knowing secret History, and giving an Account of Transactions, that whether they ever passed in the World or not, doth not signify an Halfpenny to its Instruction, or its Welfare. Some have observed, That the Northern Parts of this Island are more particularly fruitful in Bag-Pipes.

THESE are so very few Persons who are Masters in every Kind of Conversation, and can talk on all Subjects, that I don't know whether we should make a distinct Species of them: Nevertheless, That my Scheme may not be defective, tive, for the Sake of those few who are endowed with such extraordinary Talents, I shall allow them to be Harpsicords, a Kind of Musick which every one knows is a Consort by it self.

AS for your Passing-Bells, who look upon Mirth as criminal, and talk of nothing but what is melancholy in it self, and mortifying to Humane Nature, I shall not mention them.

I shall likewise pass over in Silence all the Rabble of Mankind, that crowd our Streets, Coffee-houses, Feasts, and publick Tables. I cannot call their Discourse Conversation, but rather something that is practised in Imitation of it. For which Reason, if I would describe them by any Musical Instrument, it should be by those modern Inventions of the Bladder and String Tong and Key, Marrow-Bone and Cleaver.

MY Reader will doubtless observe, That I have only touched here upon Male Instruments, having reserved my Female Consort to another Occasion. If he has a Mind to know where these several Characters are to be met with, I could direct him to a whole Club of Drums; not to mention another of Bag-Pipes, which I have before given some Account of in my Description of our nightly Meetings in Sheer-Lane. The Lutes may be often met with in Couples upon the Banks of a crystal Stream, or in the Retreats of shady Woods, and flowry Meadows; which for different Reasons are likewise the great Resort of your Hunting-Horns. Bass-Viols are frequently to be found over a Glass of stale Beer, and a Pipe of Tobacco; whereas those who set up for Violins, seldom fail to make their Appearance at Witt's once every Evening. You may meet with a Trumpet any where on the other Side of Charing-Cross.

THAT we may draw something for our Advantage in Life out of the foregoing Discourse, I must entreat my Reader to make a narrow Search into his Life and Conversation, and upon

his

is leaving any Company, to examine himself seriously, whether he has behaved himself in it like a Drum or a Trumpet, a Violin or a Bass-viol; and accordingly endeavour to mend his Musick for the Future. For my own Part, I must confess, I was a Drum for many Years; nay, and a very noisy one, till having polished my self a little in good Company, I threw as much of the Trumpet into my Conversation as was possible for a Man of an impetuous Temper, by which Mixture of different Musicks, I look upon myself, during the Course of many Years, to have resembled a Tabor and Pipe. I have since very much endeavoured at the Sweetness of the Lute; but in Spight of all my Resolutions, I must confess with great Confusion, that I find my self daily degenerating into a Bag-pipe; whether it be the Effect of my old Age, or of the Company I keep, I know not. All that I can do, is to keep a Watch over my Conversation, and to silence the Drone as soon as I find it begin to hum in my Discourse, being determined rather to hear the Notes of others, than to play out of Time, and incroach upon their Parts in the Consort by the Noise of so tiresome an Instrument.

I shall conclude this Paper with a Letter which I received last Night from a Friend of mine, who knows very well my Notions upon this Subject, and invites me to pass the Evening at his House, with a select Company of Friends, in the following Words :

Dear Isaac,

I INTEND to have a Consort at my House this Evening, having by great Chance got a Harpsicord, which I am sure will entertain you very agreeably. There will be likewise Two Lutes and a Trumpet: Let me beg you to put your self in Tune, and believe me

Your very faithful Servant,

Nicholas Humdrum.

Ob-

Obscuris vera involvens.

Virg. Æn. L. 6

N^o 154. Tuesday, April 4. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 3.

WE have already examined Homer's Description of a Future State, and the Condition in which he hath placed the Souls of the Deceased. I shall in this Paper make some Observations on the Account which Virgil hath given us of the same Subject, who, besides a Greatness of Genius, had all the Lights of Philosophy and Humane Learning to assist and guide him in his Discoveries.

ÆNEAS is represented as descending into the Empire of Death, with a Prophetess by his Side, who instructs him in the Secrets of those lower Regions.

UPON the Confines of the Dead, and before the very Gates of this infernal World, Virgil describes several Inhabitants, whose Natures are wonderfully suited to the Situation of the Place, as being either the Occasions or Resemblances of Death. Of the first Kind are the Shadows of Sickness, old Age, Fear, Famine and Poverty; (Apparitions very terrible to behold) with several others, as Toil, War, Contention, and Discord, which contribute all of them to people this common Receptacle of humane Souls. As this was likewise a very proper Residence for every Thing that resembles Death, the Poet tells us, That Sleep, whom he represents as a near Relation to Death, has likewise his Habitation in these Quarters, and describes in them a huge gloomy Elm-Tree, which seems a very proper Ornament for or the Place, and is possessed by an innumerable Swarm of Dreams, that hang in Clusters under every Leaf of it. He then gives us a List of imaginary Persons, who very naturally lie within the Shadow of the Dream-Tree, as being of the same Kind of Make in themselves, and the Materials, or (to use Shakespear's Phrase) the Stuff of which Dreams are made. Such are the Shades of the Giant with an Hundred Hands, and of his Brother with Three Bodies; of the double-shap'd Centaur and Scylla; the Gorgon with staky Hair: the Harpy with a Woman's Face and Lion's Tails; the Seven headed Hydra; and the Chimera, which breaths forth a Flame, and is a Compound of Three Animals. These several mixed Natures, the Creatures of Imagination, are not only introduced with great Art after the Dreams; but as they are planted at the very Entrance, and within the very Gates of those Regions, do probably denote the wild Deliriums and Extravagancies of Fancy, which the Soul usually falls into when she is just upon the Verge of Death.

THUS far Aeneas travels in an Allegory. The rest of the Description is drawn with great Exactness, according to the Religion of the Heathens, and the Opinions of the Platonick Philosophy. I shall not trouble my Reader with a common dull Story, that gives an Account why the Heathens first of all supposed a Ferryman in Hell, and his Name to be Charon; but must not pass over in Silence the Point of Doctrine which Virgil hath very much insisted upon in this Book, That the Souls of those who are unburied, are not permitted to go over into their respective Places of Rest, till they have wandered a Hundred Years upon the Banks of Styx. This was probably an Invention of the Heathen Priesthood, to make the People extremely careful of performing proper Rites and Ceremonies to the Memory of the Dead. I shall not however, with the infamous Scribblers of the Age, take an Occasion from such a Circumstance, to run into Declamations against Priestcraft, but rather look upon it even in this Light as a religious Artifice, to raise in the Minds of Men an Esteem for the Memory of their Forefathers, and a Desire to recommend themselves to that of Posterity; as also to excite in them an Ambition of imitating the Virtues of the Deceased, and to keep alive in their Thought the Sense of the Soul's Immortality. In a Word, we may say in Defence of the severe Opinion relating to the Shades of unburied Persons, what hath been said by some of our Divines in regard to the rigid Doctrines concerning the Souls of such who die without being initiated into our Religion, That supposing they should be erroneous, they can do no Hurt to the Dead, and will have a good Effect upon the Living, in making them cautious of neglecting such necessary Solemnities.

CHARON is no sooner appeased, and the Triple-headed Dog laid asleep, but Aeneas makes his Entrance into the Dominions of Pluto. There are Three Kinds of Persons described, as being situated on the Borders; and I can give no Reason for their being stationed there in so particular a Manner, but because they none of them seem to have had a proper Right to a Place among the Dead, as not having run out the whole Thread of their Days, and finished the Term of Life that had been allotted them upon Earth. The first of these are the Souls of Infants, who are snatched away by untimely Ends: The second, are of those who are put to Death wrongfully, and by an unjust Sentence; and the Third, of those who grew weary of their Lives, and laid violent Hands upon themselves. As for the second of these, Virgil adds with great Beauty, That Minos, the Judge of the Dead, is employed in giving them a Rehearing, and assigning them their several Quarters suitable to the Parts they acted in Life. The Poet, after having mentioned ed the Souls of those unhappy Men who destroyed themselves, breaks out into a fine Exclamation; O! how gladly, says he, would they now endure Life with all its Miseries! but the Destinies forbid their Return to Earth, and the Waters of Styx surround them with Nine Streams that are unpassable. It is very remarkable, that Virgil, notwithstanding Self-murder was so frequent among the Heathens, and had been practised by some of the greatest Men in the very Age before him, hath here represented it as so heinous a Crime. But in this particular he was guided by the Doctrines of his great Master Plato, who says on this Subject, That a Man is placed in his Station of Life, like a Soldier in his proper Post, which he is not to quit whatever may happen, until he is called off by his Commander who planted him in it.

THE R E is another Point in the Platonick Philosophy, which Virgil has made the Ground-work of the greatest Part in the Piece we are now examining, having with wonderful Art and Beauty materialized (if I may so call it) a Scheme of abstracted Notions, and cloathed the most nice refined Conceptions of Philosophy in sensible Images, and poetical Representations. The Platonists tell us, That the Soul, during her Residence in the Body, contracts many virtuous and vicious Habits, so as to become a Beneficent, mild, charitable, or an angry, malicious, revengeful Being: A Substance inflamed with Lust, Avarice, and Pride; or, on the contrary, brightened with pure, generous and humble Dispositions: That these and the like Habits of Virtue and Vice growing into the very Essence of the Soul, survive and gather Strength in herafter her Dissolution; That the Torments of a vicious Soul in a future State arise principally from those importunate Passions which are not capable of being gratified without a Body; and that on the contrary, the Happiness of virtuous Minds very much consists in their being employed in sublime

Speculations, innocent Diversions, sociable Affections, and all the Ecstasies of Passion and Raptus which are agreeable to reasonable Natures, and of which they gained a Relish in this Life.

UPON this Foundation, the Poet raises the beautiful Description of the secret Haunts and Walks, which he tells us are inhabited by deceased Lovers.

NOT far from hence, says he, lies a great Waste of Plains, that are called the Fields of Melancholy. In these there grows a Forest of Myrtle, divided into many shady Retirement and covered Walks, and inhabited by the Souls of those who pined away with Love, The Passion, says he, continues with them after Death. He then gives a List of this languishing Tribe, in which his own Dido makes the principal Figure, and is described as living in this soft Romantick Scene, with the Shade of her first Husband Schæus.

THE Poet in the next Place mentions another Plain that was peopled with the Ghosts of Warriors, as still delighting in each other's Company, and pleased with the Exercise of Arms. He there represents the Grecian Generals and common Soldiers who perished in the Siege of Troy as drawn up in Squadrons, and terrified at the Approach of Æneas, which renewed in them those Impressions of Fear they had before received in Battel with the Trojans. He afterwards likewise, upon the same Notion, gives a View of the Trojan Heroes who lived in former Ages, amidst a visionary Scene of Chariots and Arms, flowry Meadows, shining Spears, and generous Steeds, which he tells us were their Pleasures upon Earth, and now make up their Happiness in Elysium. For the same Reason also, he mentions others as singing Pæans, and Songs of Triumph, amidst a beautiful Grove of Laurel. The Chief of the Consort was the Poet Musæus, who stood inclosed with a Circle of Admirers, and rose by the Head and Shoulders above the Throng of Shades that surrounded him. The Habitations of unhappy Spirits, to shew the Duration of their Torments, and the desperate Condition they are in, are represented as guarded by a Fury, moated round with a Lake of Fire, strengthened with Towers of Iron, encompassed with a triple Wall, and fortified with Pillars of Adamant, which all the Gods together are not able to heave from their Foundations. The Noise of Stripes, the Clank of Chains, and the Groans of the Tortured, strike the pious Aeneas with a Kind of Horror. The Poet afterwards divides the Criminals into Two Classes: The first and blackest Catalogue consists of such as were guilty of Outrages against the Gods; and the next, of such who were convicted of Injustice between Man and Man: The greatest Number of whom, says the Poet, are those who followed the Dictates of Avarice.

and

IT was an Opinion of the Platonists. That the Souls of Men having contracted in the Body great Stains and Pollutions of Vice and Ignorance there were several Purgations and Cleansings necessary to be passed thro' both here and hereafter, in order to refine and purify them.

VIRGIL, to give this Thought likewise a Cloathing of Poetry, describes some Spirits as bleaching in the Winds, others as cleansing under great Falls of Waters, and others as purging in Fire, to recover the primitive Beauty and Purity of their Natures.

IT was likewise an Opinion of the same Sect of Philosophers, That the Souls of all Men exist in a separate State, long before their Union with their Bodies; and that upon their Immersion into Flesh, they forget every Thing which passed in the State of Pre-existence; so that what we here call Knowledge, is nothing else but Memory, or the Recovery of those Things which we knew before.

IN Pursuance of this Scheme, Virgil gives a View of several Souls, who to prepare themselves for living upon Earth, flock about the Banks of the River Lethe, and swill themselves with the Waters of Oblivion.

THE same Scheme gives him an Opportunity of making a noble Compliment to his Countrymen, where Archises is represented taking a Survey of the long Train of Heroes that are to descend from him, and giving his Son Eneas an Account of all the Glories of his Race.

I need not mention the Revolution of the Pleasontick Year, which is but just touched upon in the Book; and as I have consulted no Authors' Thoughts in this Explication, shall be very well pleased, if it can make the noblest Piece of the most accomplished Poet more agreeable to my Female Readers, when they think fit to look into Dryden's Translation of it.

— Aliena negotia curat, Excusus propriis. Hor.

N^o 155. Thursday, April 6. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 5.

THERE lived some Years since within my Neighbourhood a very grave Person, an Upholster, who seemed a Man of more than ordinary Application to Business. He was a very early Riser, and was often abroad Two or Three Hours before any of his Neighbours. He had particular Carefulness in the Knitting of his Brows, and a Kind of Impatience in all his Motions, that plainly discovered he was always intent on Matters of Importance. Upon my Enquiry into his Life and Conversation, I found him the greatest Newsmonger in our Quarter; that he role before Day to read the Post-Man; and that he would take two or three Turns to the other End of the Town before his Neighbours were up, to see if there were any Dub-B Mails come in. He had a Wife and several Children, but was much more inquisitive to know what passed in Poland than in his own Family, and was in greater Pain and Anxiety of Mind for King Augustus's Welfare than that of his nearest Relations. He looked extreamly thin in a Dearth of News, and never enjoyed himself in a Westerly Wind. This indefatigable Kind of Life was the Ruin of his Shop; for about the Time that his Favourite Prince left the Crown of Poland, he broke and disappeared.

THIS Man and his Affairs had been long out of my Mind, till about three Days ago, as I was walking in St. James's Park, I heard some body at a Distance hemming after me: And who should it be but my old Neighbour the Upholster? I saw he was reduced to extreme Poverty, by certain shabby Superfluities in his Dress: For notwithstanding that it was a very sultry Day for the Time of the Year, he wore a loose great Coat and a Muff, with a long Campaign-Wig out of Curl; to which he had added the Ornament of a Pair of black Garters buckled under the Knee. Upon his coming up to me, I was going to enquire into his present Circumstances; but was prevented by his asking me, with a whisper, Whether the last Letters brought any accounts that one might rely upon from Bender? I told him, None that I heard of; and asked him, Whether he had yet married his eldest Daughter? he told me, No. But pray, says he, tell me sincerely, What are your Thoughts of the King of Sweden? For tho' his Wife and Children were living, I found his chief Concern at present enquiry as for this great Monarch. I told him, That I looked upon him as one of the first Heroes of the Age. But pray, says he, do you think there is any Thing in the Story of his Wound? And finding me surprized at the Question, Nay, says he, I only propose it to you, I answered, That I thought there was no Reason to doubt of it. But why in the Heel, says he, more than in any other Part of the Body? Because, says I, the Bullet chanced to light there,

THIS extraordinary Dialogue was no sooner ended, but he began to launch out into a long Dissertation upon the Affairs of the North; and after having spent some Time on them, he told me, He was in a great Perplexity how to reconcile the Supplement with the English-Post, and had been just now examining what the other Papen say upon the same Subject. The Daily Courant, says he, has these Words, We have Advices from very good Hands, That a certain Prince has some Matters of great Importance under Consideration. This is very mysterious; but the Post-Boy leaves us more in the Dark, for he tells us, That there are private Intimations of Measures taken by a certain Prince, which Time will bring to Light. Now the Post-Man, says he, who uses to be very clear, refers to the same News in these Words; The late Conduct of a certain Prince affords great Matter of Speculation. This certain Prince, says the Upholster whom they are all so cautious of naming, I take to be—Upon which, though there was no Body near us, he whispered something in my Ear which I did not hear, or think worth my while to make him repeat.

WE were now got to the upper End of the Mall, where were three or four very odd Fellows sitting together upon the Bench. These I found were all of them Politicians, who used to sit themselves in that Place every Day about Dinner Time. Observing them to be Curiosities in their Kind, and my Friend's Acquaintance, sat down among them.

THE chief Politician of the Bench was a great Afferter of Paradoxes. He told us, with a seeming Concern, That by some News he had lately read from Muscovy, it appeared to him that there was a Storm gathering in the Black Sea, which might in Time do Hurt to the Naval Forces of his Nation. To this he added, That for his Part, he could not wish to see the Turk driven out of Europe, which he believed could not but be prejudicial to the Woollen Manufacture. He then told us, That he looked upon those extraordinary Revolutions which had lately happened in these Parts of the World, to have risen chiefly from two Persons who were not much talked of; and those, says he, are Prince Menzikoff, and the Dutchess of Mirandola. He back'd his Assertions with so many broken Hints, and such a Show of Depth and Wisdom, that we gave our selves up to his Opinions.

THE Discourse at length fell upon a Point which seldom escapes a Knot of true-born Englishmen, Whether in Case of a Religious War, the Protestants would not be too strong for the Papists? This we unanimously determined on the Protestant Side. One who sat on my Right-hand, and as I found by his Discourse, had been in the West-Indies, assured us, That it would be a very easy Matter for the Protestants to beat the Pope at Sea; and added, That whenever such a War does break out, it must turn to the Good of the Leeward Islands. Upon this, one who sat at the End of the Bench, and, as I afterwards found, was the Geographer of the Company, said, That in Case the Papists should drive the Protestants from these Parts of Europe, when the worst came to the worst, it would be impossible to beat them out of Norway and Greenland; provided the Northern Crowns hold together, and the Empire of Muscovy stand neuter.

THE further told us for our Comfort, That there were vast Tracts of Land about the Pole, inhabited neither by Protestants nor Papists, and of greater Extent than all the Roman Catholic Dominions in Europe.

WHEN we had fully discussed this Point, my Friend the Upholster began to exert himself upon the present Negotiations of Peace, in which he deposed Princes, settled the Bounds of Kingdoms, and balanced the Power of Europe, with great Justice and Impartiality.

I at length took my Leave of the Company and was going away; but had not gone thirty Yards, before the Upholster hemm'd again after me. Upon his Advanceing towards me, with a Whisper, I expected to hear some secret Piece of News, which he had not thought fit to communicate to the Bench; but instead of that, he desired me in my Ear to lend him Half a Crown. In Compassion to so needy a Statesman, and to dissipate the Confusion I found he was in, I told him, if he pleased, I would give him five Shillings, to receive five Pounds of him when the Great Turk was driven out of Constantinople, which he very readily accepted, but not before he had laid down to me the Impossibility of such an Event, as the Affairs of Europe now stand.

THIS Paper I design for the particular Benefit of those worthy Citizens who live more in a Coffee house than in their Shops, and whose Thoughts are so taken up with the Affairs of the Allies, that they forget their Customers.

—Sequiturq; patrem non passibus equis. Virg.

N° 156. Saturday, April 8. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 7.

WE have already described out of Homer, the Voyage of Ulysses to the infernal Shades, with the several Adventures that attended it. If we look into the beautiful Romance published not many Years since by the Archbi^{shop} of Cambray, we may see the Son of Ulysses bound on the same Expedition, and after the same Manner making his Discoveries among the Regions of the Dead. The Story of Telemachus is formed altogether in the Spirit of Homer, and will give an unlearned Reader a Notion of that great Poet's Manner of Writing, more than any Translation of him can possibly do. As it was written for the Instruction of a young Prince, who may one Day sit upon the Throne of France, the Author took Care to suit the several Parts of his Story, and particularly the Description we are now entering upon, to the Character and Quality of his Pupil. For which Reason, he insists very much on the Misery of bad, and the Happiness of good Kings, in the Account he hath given of Punishments and Rewards in the other World.

WE may however observe, notwithstanding the Endeavours of this great and learned Author, to copy after the Style and Sentiments of Homer, that there is a certain Tincture of Christianity running through the whole Relation. The Prelate in several Places mixes himself with the Poet, so that his future State puts me in Mind of Michael Angelo's last Judgment, when Charon and his Boat are represented as bearing Part in the dreadful Solemnities of that great Day.

TELEMACHUS, after having passed thro the dark Avenues of Death in the Retinue of Mercury, who every Day delivers up a certain Tale of Ghosts to the Ferryman of Styx, is admitted into the infernal Bark. Among the Companions of his Voyage, is the Shade of Nabopharzon, a King of Babylon, and Tyrant of all the East. Among the Ceremonies and Pomps of his Funeral, there were four Slaves sacrificed, according to the Custom of the Country, in order to attend him among the Shades. The Author having described this Tyrant in the most odious Colours of Pride, Insolence and Cruelty, tells us, That his four Slaves, instead of serving him after Death, were perpetually insulting him with Reproaches and Affronts for his past Usage; That they spurned him as he lay upon the Ground, and forced him to shew his Face, which he would fain have covered, as lying under all the Confusions of Guilt and Infamy; and in short, that they kept him bound in Chains, in order to drag him before the Tribunal of the Dead.

TELEMACHUS, upon looking out of the Bark, sees all the Strand covered with an innumerable Multitude of Shades, who, upon his jumping ashore, immediately vanished. He then pursues his Course to the Palace of Pluto, who is described as seated on his Throne in terrible Majesty, with Proserpine by his Side. At the Foot of his Throne was the pale hideous Spectre, who, by the Ghastliness of his Visage, and the Nature of the Apparitions that surrounded him, discovered himself to be Death. His Attendants are, Melancholy, Distrust, Revenge, Hatred, Avarice, Despair, Ambition, Envy, Impiety, with frightful Dreams, and waking Cares, which are all drawn drawn very naturally in proper Actions and Postures. The Author, with great Beauty, places near his frightful Dreams an Assembly of Phantoms, which are often employed to terrify the Living, by appearing in the Shade and Likeness of the Dead.

THE young Hero in the next Place takes a Survey of the different Kinds of Criminals that lay in Torture among Clouds of Sulphur, and Torrents of Fire. The first of these were such as had been guilty of Impieties, which every one hath an Horror for: To which is added, a Catalogue of such Offenders that scarce appear to be faulty in the Eyes of the Vulgar. Among these, says the Author, are malicious Criticks, that have endeavoured to cast a Blemish upon the Perfections of others; with whom he likewise places such as have often hurt the Reputation of the Innocent, by passing a rash Judgment on their Actions, without knowing the Occasion of them. These Crimes, says he, are more severely punished after Death, because they generally meet with Impunity upon Earth.

TELEMACHUS, after having taken a Survey of several other Wretches in the same Circumstances, arrives at that Region of Torments in which wicked Kings are punished. There are very fine Strokes of Imagination in the Description which he gives of this unhappy Multitude. He tells us, that on one Side of them there stood a revengeful Fury, thundering in their Ears incessant Repetitions of all the Crimes they had committed upon Earth, with the Aggravations of Ambition, Vanity, Hardness of Heart, and all those secret Affections of Mind that enter into the Composition of a Tyrant. At the same Time, she holds up to them a large Mirror, in which every one sees himself represented in the natural Horror and Deformity of his Character. On the other Side of them stands another Fury, that with an insulting Derision, repeats to them all the Praises that their Flatterers had bestowed upon them while they sat upon their respective Thrones. She too, says the Author, presents a Mirror before their Eyes, in which every one sees himself adorned with all those Beauties and Perfections in which they had been drawn by the Vanity of their own Hearts, and the Flattery of others. To punish them for the Wantonness of the Cruelty which they formerly exercised, they are now delivered up to be treated according to the Fancy and Caprice of several Slaves, who have here an Opportunity of tyrannizing in their Turns.

THE Author having given us a Description of these ghastly Spectres, who, says he, are always calling upon Death, and are plac'd under the Distillation of that burning Vengeance which falls upon them Drop by Drop, and is never to be exhausted, leads us into a pleasing Scene of Groves, filled with the Melody of Birds, and the Odours of a thousand different Plants. These Groves are represented as rising among a great many flowry Meadows, and watered with Streams that diffuse a perpetual Freshness, in the midst of an eternal Day, and a never-fading Spring. This, says the Author, was the Habitation of those good Princes who were Friends of the Gods, and Parents of the People. Among these, Telemachus converses with the Shade of one of his Ancestors, who makes a most agreeable Relation of the Joys of Elysium, and the Nature of its Inhabitants. The Residence of Sesostris among these happy Shades, with his Character and present Employment, is drawn in a very lively Manner, and with a great Elevation of Thought.

THE Description of that pure and gentle Light which overflows these happy Regions, and cloaths the Spirits of these virtuous Persons, hath something in it of that Enthusiasm which this Author was accused of by his Enemies in the Church of Rome; but however it may look in Religion, Religion, it makes a very beautiful Figure in Poetry.

THE Rays of the Sun, says he, are Darkness in Comparison with this Light, which rather deserves the Name of Glory, than that of Light. It pierces the thickest Bodies, in the same Manner as the Sun-beams pass through Crystal: It strengthens the Sight instead of dazzling it; and nourishes in the most inward Recesses of the Mind a perpetual Serenity that is not to be express'd. It enters and incorporates it self with the very Substance of the Soul: The Spirits of the Blessed feel it in all their Senses, and in all their Perceptions. It produces a certain Source of Peace and Joy that arises in them for ever, running through all the Faculties, and refreshing all the Desires of the Soul. External Pleasures and Delights, with all their Charms and Allurements, are regarded with the utmost Indifference and Neglect by these happy Spirits who have this great Principle of Pleasure within them, drawing the whole Mind to its self, calling off their Attention from the most delightful Objects, and giving them all the Transports of Inebriation, without the Confusion and the Folly of it.

I have here only mentioned some Master-Touches of this admirable Piece, because the Original of it self is understood by the greater Part of my Readers. I must confess, I take a particular Delight in these Prospects of Futurity, whether grounded upon the probable Suggestions of a fine Imagination, or the more severe Conclusions of Philosophy; as a Man loves to hear all the Discoveries or Conjectures relating to a Foreign Country which he is, at some Time, to inhabit. Prospects of this Nature lighten the Burden of any present Evil, and refresh us under the worst and lowest Circumstances of Mortality. They extinguish in us both the Fear and Envy of human Grandeur. Insolence shrinks its Head, Power disappears; Pain, Poverty and Death fly before them. In short, the Mind that is habituated to the lively Sense of an Hereafter, can hope for what is the most terrifying to the Generality of Mankind, and rejoice in what is the most afflicting.

—Facile est inventis addere.—

No 157. Tuesday, April 11. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 10.

I WAS last Night in an Assembly of very fine Women. How I came among them, is of no great Importance to the Reader. I shall only let him know, that I was betrayed into so good Company by the Device of an old Friend, who had promised to give some of his Female Acquaintance a Sight of Mr. Bickerstaff. Upon hearing my Name mentioned, a Lady who sat by me, told me, they had brought together a Female Consort for my Entertainment. You must know, says she that we all of us look upon ourselves to be Musical Instruments, tho' we do not yet know of what Kind, which we hope to learn from you, if you will give us Leave to play before you. This was followed by a general Laugh, which I always look upon as a necessary Flourish in the opening of a Female Consort. They then struck up together, and play'd a whole Hour upon two Grounds, viz. the Theat and the Opera. I could not but observe, that several of their Notes were more soft, and several more sharp than any that ever I heard in a Male Consort; though I must confess, there was not any Regard to Time, nor any of those Rests and Pauses which are frequent in the Harmony of the other Sex.

Besides,

Besides, that the Musick was generally full, and no particular Instrument permitted to play long by its self.

I seemed so very well pleased with what every one said, and smiled with so much Complaisance at all their pretty Fancies, that tho' I did not put one Word into their Discourse, I have the Vanity to think, they looked upon me as very agreeable Company. I then told them, That if I were to draw the Picture of so many charming Musicians, it should be like one I had seen of the Muses, with their several Instruments in their Hands; upon which the Lady Kettle-Drum tossed back her Head, and cry'd, A very pretty Simile! The Consort again revived; in which, with Nods, Smiles and Approbations, I bore the Part rather of one who beats the Time, than of a Performer.

I was no sooner retired to my Lodgings, but I ran over in my Thoughts the several Characters of this fair Assembly, which I shall give some Account of, because they are various in their Kind, and may each of them stand as a Sample of a whole Species.

THE Person who pleased me most was a Flute, an Instrument, that without any great Compaſſ, hath something exquisitely sweet and soft in its Sound: It lulls and sooths the Ear, and fills it with such a gentle Kind of Melody, as keeps the Mind awake without startling it, and raises a most agreeable Passion between Transport and Indolence. In short, the Musick of the Flute is the Conversation of a mild and amiable Woman, that has nothing in it very elevated, or at the same Time any Thing mean or trivial.

I must here observe, that the Hautboy is the most perfect of the Flute-Species, which, with all the Sweetness of the Sound, hath a great Strength and Variety of Notes; though at the same Time I must observe, that the Hautboy in one Sex is as scarce as the Harpsicord in the other.

BY

BY the Side of the Flute there sat a Flageolet, for so I must call a certain young Lady, who fancying herself a Wit, despised the Musick of the Flute as low and insipid, and would be entertaining the Company with tart ill-natured Observations, pert Fancies, and little Turns, which she imagined to be full of Life and Spirit. The Flageolet therefore doth not differ from the Flute so much in the Compass of its Notes, as in the Shrillness and Sharpness of the Sound. We must however take Notice that the Flageolets among their own Sex are more valued and esteemed than the Flutes.

THERE chanced to be a Coquet in the Consort, that with a great many skittish Notes, affected Squeaks, and studied Inconsistencies, distinguished herself from the rest of the Company. She did not speak a Word during the whole Trial; but I thought she would never have done upon the Opera. Once while she would break out upon, That bidious King! Then upon the charming Black moor! Then, O that dear Lion! Then would hum over two or three Notes; then run to the Window to see what Coach was coming. The Coquet therefore I must distinguish by that musical Instrument which is commonly known by the Name of Kit, that is more jiggish than the Fiddle it self, and never sounds but to a Dance.

THE fourth Person who bore a Part in the Conversation was a Prude, who stuck to the Trial, and was silent upon the whole Opera. The Gravity of her Censures, and Composure of her Voice, which were often attended with supercilious Casts of the Eye, and a seeming Contempt for the Lightness of the Conversation, put me in Mind of that ancient serious Matron-like Instrument the Virginal.

I must not pass over in Silence a Lancashire Hornpipe, by which I would signifie a young Country Lady, who with a great deal of Mirth and Innocence diverted the Company very agreeably; and, if I am not mistaken, by that Time the Wildness of her Notes is a little softened, and the Redundancy of her Musick restrained by Conversation and good Company, will be improved into one of the most amiable Flutes about the Town. Your Romps and Boarding School Girls fall likewise under this Denomination.

ON the Right Hand of the Hornpipe sate a Welsh Harp, an Instrument which very much delights in the Tunes of old Historical Ballads, and in celebrating the renowned Actions and Exploits of ancient British Heroes. By this Instrument I therefore would describe a certain Lady, who is one of those Female Historians that upon all Occasions enters into Pedigrees and Descents, and finds herself related, by some Off-shoot or other, to almost every great Family in England: For which Reason she jars and is out of Tune very often in Conversation, for the Company's Want of due Attention and Respect to her.

BUT the most sonorous Part of our Confort, was a She-Drum, or (as the Vulgar call it) a Kettle-Drum, who accompanied her Discourse with Motions of the Body, Tosses of the Head, and Brandishes of the Fan. Her Musick was loud, bold and masculine. Every Thump she gave, alarmed the Company, and very often set some Body or other in it a-blushing.

THE last I shall mention was a certain romantick Instrument called a Dulcimer, who talked of nothing but shady Woods, flowry Meadows, purling Streams, Larks and Nightingales, with all the Beauties of the Spring, and the Pleasures of a Country Life. This Instrument hath a fine melancholy Sweetness in it, and goes very well with the Flute.

I think most of the converable Part of Woman kind may be found under one of the foregoing Divisions; but it must be confessed, that the Generality of that Sex, notwithstanding they have have naturally a great Genius for being talkative, are not Mistresses of more than one Note; with which however, by frequent Repetition, they make a greater Sound than those who are possessed of the whole Gamut, as may be observed in your Larums of Household Scolds, and in your Caltanets or impertinent Title-Tatles, who have no other Variety in their Discourse but that of talking slower or faster.

UPON communicating this Scheme of Music to an old Friend of mine, who was formerly a Man of Gallantry and a Rover, he told me, That he believed he had been in Love with every Instrument in my Consort. The first that smit him, was a Hornpipe, who lived near his Father's House in the Country; but upon his failing to meet her at an Assize, according to Appointment, she cast him off. His next Passion was for a Kettle-Drum, whom he fell in Love with at a Play; but when he became acquainted with her, not finding the Softness of her Sex in her Conversation, he grew cool to her; though at the same Time he could not deny, but that she behaved herself very much like a Gentlewoman. His third Mistress was a Dulcimer, who he found took great Delight in sighing and languishing, but would go no further than the Preface of Matrimony; so that she would never let a Lover have any more of her than her Heart, which, after having won, he was forced to leave her; as despairing of any further Success. I must confess, says my Friend, I have often considered her with a great deal of Admiration; and I find her Pleasure is so much in this first Step of an Amour, that her Life will pass away in Dream, Solitude and Soliloquy, till her Decay of Charms makes her snatch at the worst Man that ever pretended to her. In the next Place, says my Friend, I fell in Love with a Kit, who led me such a Dance through all the Varieties of a familiar, cold, fond and indiferent Behaviour, that that the World began to grow censorious, tho' without any Cause: For which Reason, to recover our Reputations, we parted by Consent. To mend my Hand, says he, I made my next Application to a Virginal, who gave me great Encouragement, after her cautious Manner, till some malicious Companions told her of my long Passion of the Kit, which made her turn me off as a scandalous Fellow. At length, in Despair, (says he) I betook my self to a Welsh Harp, who rejected me with Contempt, after having found that my Great Grand-mother was a Brewer's Daughter. I found by the Sequel of my Friend's Discourse, that he had never aspired to a Hautboy; that he had been exasperated by a Flageolet; and that to this very Day, he pines away for a Flute.

UPON the whole, having thoroughly considered how absolutely necessary it is, that two Instruments, which are to play together for Life, should be exactly tuned, and go in perfect Comfort with each other, I would propose Matches between the Musick of both Sexes, according to the following Table of Marriage.

1. Drum and Kettle-Drum,
2. Lute and Flute.
3. Harpsicord and Hautboy.
4. Violin and Flageolet.
5. Bass-Viol and Kit.
6. Trumpet and Welsh Harp.
7. Hunting-Horn and Hornpipe.
8. Bagpipe and Castenets.
9. Passing-Bell and Virginak.

Mr. Bickerstaff, in Consideration of his ancient Friendship and *Le*quaintance with Mr. Betterton, and great Esteem for his Merit, summons all his Disciples, whether dead or living, mad or tame, Toasts, Smarts, Dappers, Pretty Fellows, Musicians or Scrapers, to make their Appearance at the Play house in the Hay-Market

Market on Thursday next; when there will be a Play acted for the Benefit of the said Betterton.

• •

Faciunt na intelligendo, ut nihil intelligant. Ter.

N° 158. Thursday, April 13. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 12.

TOM FOLIO is a Broker in Learning, employed to get together good Editions, and stock the Libraries of Great Men. There is not a Sale of Books begins till Tom Folio is seen at the Door. There is not an Auction where his Name is not heard, and that too in the very Nick of Time, in the Critical Moment, before the last decisive Stroke of the Hammer. There is not a Subscription goes forward in which Tom is not privy to the first rough Draught of the Proposals; nor a Catalogue printed, that doth not come to him wet from the Pres. He is an universal Scholar, so far as the Title-Page of all Authors, knows the Manuscript in which they were discovered, the Editions through which they have passed, with the Praises or Censures which they have received from the several Members of the learned World. He has a greater Esteem for Aldus and Elzevir, than for Virgil and Horace. If you talk of Herodotus, he breaks out into a Panegyrick upon Harry Stephens. He thinks he gives you an Account of an Author, when he tells you the Subject he treats of, the Name of the Editor, and the Year in which it was printed. Or if you draw him into further Particulars, he cries up the Goodness of the Paper, extols the Diligence of the Corrector, and is transported with the Beauty of the Letter. This he looks upon to be sound Learning and substantial Criticism. As for those who talk of the Fineness of Style, and the Justness of Thought, or describe the Brightness of any particular Passages; nay, though they write themselves in the Genius and Spirit of the Author they admire, Tom looks upon them as Men of superficial Learning, and flashy Parts.

the

I had Yesterday Morning a Visit from this learned Idiot, (for that is the Light in which I consider every Pedant) when I discovered in him some little Touches of the Coxcomb, which I had not before observed. Being very full of the Figure which he makes in the Republick of Letters, and wonderfully satisfied with his great Stock of Knowledge, he gave me broad Intimations, that he did not believe in all Points as his Forefathers had done. He then communicated to me a Thought of a certain Author upon a Passage of Virgil's Account of the Dead, which I made the Subject of a late Paper. This Thought hath taken very much among Men of Tom's Pitch and Understanding, though universally exploded by all that know how to construe Virgil, or have any Relish of Antiquity. Not to trouble my Reader with it, I found upon the whole, that Tom did not believe a future State of Rewards and Punishments, because Aeneas, at his leaving the Empire of the Dead, passed through the Gate of Ivory, and not through that of Horn. Knowing that Tom had not Sense enough to give up an Opinion which he had once received, that he might avoid wrangling, I told him, That Virgil possibly had his Oversight as well as another Author. Ah! Mr. Bickerstaff, says he, you would have another Opinion of him, if you would read him in Daniel Heinsius's Edition. I have perused him my self several Times in that Edition, continued he; and after the strictest and most malicious Examination, could find but two Faults in him: One of them is in the Aeneids, where there are two Comma's instead of a Parenthesis; and another in the third Georgick, where you may find find a Semicolon turned upside-down. Perhaps said I, these were not Virgil's Faults, but those of the Transcriber. I do not design it, says Tom, as a Reflection on Virgil: On the contrary, I know that all the Manuscripts reclaim against such a Punctuation. Oh! Mr. Bickerstaff, says he, what would a Man give to see one Simile of Virgil writ in his own Hand? I asked him which was the Simile he meant; but was answered, any Simile in Virgil. He then told me all the secret History in the Commonwealth of Learning; of modern Pieces that had the Names of ancient Authors annexed to them; of all the Books that were now writing or printing in the several Parts of Europe; of many Amendments which are made and not yet published; and a thousand other Particulars, which I would not have my Memory burthened with for a Vatican.

AT length, being fully perswaded that I thoroughly admired him, and looked upon him as a Prodigy of Learning, he took his Leave. I know several of Tom's Clas who are professed Admirers of Tasso, without understanding a Word of Italian: And one in particular, that carries a Pastor-Fido in his Pocket, in which I am sure he is acquainted with no other Beauty but the Clearness of the Character.

THE R E is another Kind of Pedant, who with all Tom Folio's Impertinencies, hath greater Superstructures and Embellishments of Greek and Latin, and is still more insupportable than the other, in the same Degree as he is more learned. Of this Kind very often are Editors, Commentators Interpreters, Scholiaſts, and Criticks; and in short, all Men of deep Learning without common Sense. These Persons set a greater Value on themselves for having found out the Meaning of a Passage in Greek, than upon the Author for having written it; nay, will allow the Passage it self not to have any Beauty in it, at the Time that they would be considered as the greatest Men of the Age, for having interpreted it. They will look with Contempt upon the most beautiful Poems that have been composed by any of their Contemporaries; but will lock themselves up in their Studies for a Twelve-month together, to correct, publish and expound such Trifles of Antiquity, as a modern Author would be contemn'd for. Men of the strictest Morals, severest Lives, and the gravest Professions, will write Volumes upon an idle Sonnet, that is originally in Greek or Latin; give Editions of the most immoral Authors, and spin out whole Pages upon the various Readings of a lewd Expression. All that can be said in Excuse for them, is, That their Works sufficiently shew they have no Taste of their Authors; and that what they do in this Kind, is out of their great Learning, and not out of any Levity or Lasciviousness of Temper.

A Pedant of this Nature is wonderfully well described in six Lines of Boileau, with which I shall conclude his Character.

Un Pédant envotré de sa vaine science,
Tout berillé de Grec, tout bouffi d'arrogance,
Et qui de mille Auteurs retenus mot pour mot,
Dans sa tête entassez n'a souvent fait qu'un Sot,
Croit qu'un livre fait tout, & que sans Aristote
La raison ne voit goutte, & le bon sens radote.

Nitor in adversum; nec me, qui cetera, vincit Impetus. —— Ovid. Met. Lib. 2.

Nº 159. Saturday, April 15. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 14.

THE Wits of this Island, for above fifty Years past, instead of correcting the Vices
of

of the Age, have done all they could to inflame them. Marriage has been one of the common Topicks of Ridicule that every Stage-Scribbler hath found his Account in; for whenever there is Occasion for a Clap, an impertinent Jest upon Matrimony is sure to raise it. This hath been attended with very pernicious Consequences. Many a Country Squire, upon his sewing up for a Man of the Town, has gone home in the Gaiety of his Heart, and beat his Wife. A kind Husband hath been looked upon as a Clown, and a good Wife as a domestick Animal, unfit for the Company or Conversation of the Beau Monde. In short, separate Beds, silent Tables, and solitary Homes, have been introduced by your Men of Wit and Pleasure of the Age.

AS I shall always make it my Busines to stem the Torrents of Prejudice and Vice, I shall take particular Care to put an honest Father of a Family in Countenance, and endeavour to remove all the Evils out of that State of Life, which is either the most happy or most miserable, that a Man can be placed in. In order to this, let us, if you please, consider the Wits and well-bred Persons of former Times. I have shewn in another Paper, That Pliny, who was a Man of the greatest Genius, as well as of the first Quality of his Age, did not think it below him to be a kind Husband, and to treat his Wife as a Friend, Companion and Counsellor. I shall give the like Instance of another, who in all Respects was a much greater Man than Pliny, and hath written a whole Book of Letters to his Wife. They are not so full of Turns as those translated out of the former Author; who writes very much like a Modern, but are full of that beautiful Simplicity which is altogether natural, and is the distinguishing Character of the best ancient Writers. The Author I am speaking of, is Cicero; who, in the following Passages which I have taken out of his Letters, shews, That he did

159. flame mon boller here
t up-been neco for Gaikind
and t for sonde.
sol-Men.
Is to shall er of o re-Life, sera-er to
and have was a first him fe as shall Re-
and o his rites that ural, best g of, ich I t he did

N^o 159. The TATLER. 213

did not think it inconsistent with the Politeness of his Manners, or the Greatness of his Wisdom, to stand upon Record in his domestick Character.

THESE Letters were written at a Time when he was banished from his Country, by a Faction that then prevailed at Rome.

CICERO to TERENTIA.

L.

LEARN from the Letters of my Friends, as well as from common Report, that you give incredible Proofs of Virtue and Fortitude, and that you are indefatigable in all Kinds of good Office. How unhappy a Man am I, that a Woman of your Virtue, Con-sancy, Honour, and Good Nature, should fall into so great Distresses upon my Account? And that my Dear Tulliola should be so much afflicted for the Sake of a Father, with whom she had once so much Reason to be pleased! How can I mention little Cicero, whose first Knowledge of Things began with the Sense of his own Misery? If all this had happened by the Decrees of Fate, as you would kindly persuade me, I could have born it. But, alas! it is all befallen me by my own Indiscretion, who thought I was beloved by those that envied me, and did not join with them who sought my Friendship. — At present, since my Friends bid me hope, I shall take Care of my Health, that I may enjoy the Benefit of your affectionate Services — Plancius hopes we may some Time or other come together into Italy. If I ever live to see that Day; if I ever return to your dear Embraces; in short, if I ever again recover you and my self, I shall think our conjugal Piety very well rewarded. — As for what you write to me about selling your Estate, consider, (my dear Terentia) consider, alas! what would be the Event of it. If our present Fortune continues to oppress us, what will become of our poor Boy! My Tears flow so fast, that I am not able to write any further; and I would not willingly make you weep with me. — Let us take Care not to undo the Child that is already undone. If we can leave leave him any Thing, a little Virtue will keep him from Want, and a little Fortune raise him in the World. Mind your Health, and let me know frequently what you are doing.—Remember me to Tulliola and Cicerio.

II.

DON'T fancy that I write longer Letters to any one than to your self, unless when I chance to receive a longer Letter from another, which I am indispensably obliged to answer in every Particular. The Truth of it is, I have no Subject for a Letter at present; and as my Affairs now stand, there is nothing more painful to me than Writing. As for you, and our dear Tulliola, I cannot write to you without Abundance of Tears; for I see both of you miserable, whom I always wished to be happy, and whom I ought to have made so.—I must acknowledge, you have done every Thing for me with the utmost Fortitude, and the utmost Affection; nor indeed is it more than I expected from you; though at the same Time it is a great Aggravation of my ill Fortune, that the Afflictions I suffer can be relieved only by those which you undergo for my Sake. For honest Valerius has written me a Letter, which I could not read without weeping very bitterly; wherein he gives me an Account of the publick Prosecution which you have made for me at Rome. Alas! my dearest Life, must then Terentia, the Darling of my Soul, whose Favour and Recommendation have been so often sought by others; must my Terentia droop under the Weight of Sorrow, appear in the Habit of a Mourner, pour out Floods of Tears, and all this for my Sake; for my Sake who have undone my Family, by consulting the Safety of others!—As for what you write about selling your House, I am very much afflicted, that what is laid out upon my Account may any way reduce you to Misery and Want. If we can bring about our Design, we may indeed recover every Thing; but if Fortune persists in persecuting us, how can I think of your sacrificing for me the poor Remainder of your Possessions? No, my dearest Life, let me beg you to let those bear my Expences who are able, and and perhaps willing to do it; and if you would shew your Love to me, do not injure your Health, which is already too much impaired. You present your self before my Eyes Day and Night; I see you labouring amidst innumerable Difficulties; I am afraid lest you should sink under them; but I find in you all the Qualifications that are necessary to support you: Be sure therefore to cherish your Health, that you may compass the End of your Hopes, and your Endeavours.—Farewell, my Terentia, my Heart's Desire, farewell.

III.

A RISTOCRITUS hath delivered to me three of your Letters, which I have almost devoured with my Tears. Oh! my Terentia, I am consumed with Grief, and feel the Weight of your Sufferings more than of my own. I am more miserable than you are, notwithstanding you are very much so; and that for this Reason, because though our Calamity is common, it is my Fault that brought it upon us. I ought to have died rather than have been driven out of the City: I am therefore overwhelmed not only with Grief, but with Shame. I am ashamed that I did not do my utmost for the best of Wives, and the dearest of Children. You are ever present before my Eyes in your Mourning, your Affliction, and your Sickness. Amidst all which, there scarce appears to me the least Glimmering of Hope—However, as long as you hope, I will not despair.—I will do what you advise me. I have returned my Thanks to those Friends whom you mentioned, and have let them know, That you have acquainted me with their good Offices. I am sensible of Piso's extraordinary Zeal and Endeavours to serve me. Oh! would the Gods grant that you and I might live together in the Enjoyment of such a Son-in-Law, and of our dear Children.—As for what you write of your coming to me if I desire it, I would rather you should be where you are, because I know you are my principal Agent at Rome. If you succeed I shall come to you: If not—But I need say no more. Be careful of your Health, and be assured, that nothing is, or ever was, so dear to me as your self. Farewel, my Terentia; I fancy that I see you, and therefore cannot command my Weakness, far as to refrain from Tears.

IV.

I Don't write to you as often as I might, because, notwithstanding I am afflicted at all Times, I am quite overcome with Sorrow while I am writing to you, reading any Letters that I receive from you.— If the Evils are not to be removed, I must desire to see you, my dearest Life, as soon as possible, and to die in your Embraces; since neither the Gods, whom you always religiously worshiped, nor the Men, whose Good I always promoted, have rewarded us according to our Deserts.— What a Distressed Wretch am I? Should I ask a wise Woman, oppressed with Cares and Sickness, to come and live with me, or shall I not ask her? Can I live without you? But I find I must. If there be any Hopes of my Return, help it forward, and promote it as much as you are able. But if all that is over, as I fear it will find out some Way or other of coming to me. This you may be sure of, that I shall not look upon my self as quite undone whilst you are with me. But what will become of Tulliola? You must look to that; I must confess I am entirely at a Loss about her. Whatever happens, we must take Care of the Reputation and Marriage of that dear unfortunate Girl. As for Cicero, he shall lie in my Bosom and in my Arms. I cannot write any further, my Sorrows will not let me.— Support your self, my dear Terentia, as well as you are able. We have lived and flourished together amidst the greatest Honours: It is not our Crimes, but our Virtues, that have distressed us.— Take more than ordinary Care of your Health; I am more afflicted with your Sorrows than my own. Farewel, my Terentia, thou dearest, fairest, and best of Wives.

METHINKS it is a Pleasure to see this great Man in his Family, who makes so different Figure in the Forum, or Senate of Rome. Every one admires the Orator and the Consul; but or my Part, I esteem the Husband and the Father. His private Character, with all the little Weaknesses of Humanity, is as amiable, as the Figure he makes in publick is awful and majestick. But at the same Time that I love to surprize so great an Author in his private Walks, and to survey him in his most familiar Lights, I think it would be barbarous to form to our selves any Idea of Mean-spiritedness from these natural Openings of his Heart, and disburthening of his Thoughts to a Wife. He has written several other Letters to the same Person, but none with so great Passion as these of which I have given the foregoing Extracts.

IT would be ill Nature not to acquaint the English Reader, that his Wife was successful in her Solicitations for this great Man, and saw her Husband return to the Honours of which he had been deprived, with all the Pomp and Acclamation that usually attend the greatest Triumph.

N^o 160. Tuesday, April 18. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 17.

A COMMON Civility to an impertinent Fellow often draws upon one a great many unforeseen Troubles; and if one doth not take particular Care, will be interpreted by him as an Overture of Friendship and Intimacy. This I was very sensible of this Morning. About Two Hours before Day, I heard a great Rapping at my Door, which continued some Time, till my Maid could get her self ready to go down and see what was the Occasion of it. She then brought me up Word, That there was a Gentleman who seemed very much in Haste, and said he must needs speak with me. By the Description she gave me of him, and by his Voice, which I could hear as I lay in my Bed, I fancied him to be my old Acquaintance the Upholsterer whom I met the other Day in St. James's Park. For which Reason, I bid her tell the Gentleman, whoever he was, That I was indisposed, that I could see no Body, and that, if he had any Thing to say to me, I desired he would leave it in Writing. My Maid, after having delivered her Message, told me, That the Gentleman said he would stay at the next Coffee house till I was stirring; and bid her be sure to tell me That the French were driven from the Scarp, and that Douay was invested. He gave her the Name of another Town, which I found she had dropped by the Way.

AS much as I love to be informed of the Success of my brave Countrymen, I do not care for hearing of a Victory before Day, and was therefore very much out of Humour at this unseasonable Visit. I had no sooner recovered my Temper, and was falling asleep, but I was immediately startled by a second Rap; and upon my Maid's opening the Door, heard the same Voice ask her, If her Master was yet up? And at the same Time bid her tell me, That he was come on Purpose to talk with me about a Piece of Home News that every Body in Town will be full of Two Hours hence. I ordered my Maid as soon as she came into the Room, without hearing her Message, to tell the Gentleman, That whatever his News was, I would rather hear it Two Hours hence than now; and that I perfitteth in my Resolution not to speak with any Body that Morning. The Wench delivered my Answer presently, and shut the Door. It was impossible for me to compose my self to Sleep after Two such unexpected Alarms; for which Reason I put on my Clothes in a very peevish Humour. I took several Turns about my Chamber, reflecting with a great deal of Anger and Contempt on these Volunteers in Politicks, that undergo all the Pain, Watchfulness, and Disqui-of a first Minister, without turning it to the Advantage either of themselves or their Country; and yet it is surprising to consider how numerous this Species of Men is. There is nothing more frequent than to find a Taylor breaking his Rest on the Affairs of Europe, and to see a Cluster of Porters sitting upon the Ministry. Our Streets swarm with Politicians, and there is scarce a Shop which is not held by a Statesman. As I was musing after this Manner, I heard the Upholster at the Door delivering a Letter to my Maid, and begging her, in a very great Hurry, to give it to her Master as soon as ever he was awake, which I opened, and found as follows:

Mr. Bickerstaff,

I WAS to wait upon you about a Week ago, to let you know, That the honest Gentlemen whom you conversed with upon the Bench at the End of the Mall, having heard that I had received Five Shillings of you, to give you a Hundred Pounds upon the Great Turk's being driven out of Europe, desired me to acquaint you, That every one of that Company would be willing to receive Five Shillings, to pay a Hundred Pounds on the same Conditions. Our last Advices from Muscovy making this a fairer Bet than it was a Week ago, I do not question but you will accept the Wager.

BUT this is not my present Business. If you remember, I whispered a Word in your Ear as we were walking up the Mall, and you see what has happened since. If I had seen you this Morning, I would have told you in your Ear another Secret. I hope you will be recovered of your Indisposition by to Morrow Morning, when I will wait on you at the same Hour as I did this; my private Circumstances being such, that I cannot well appear in this Quarter of the Town after it is Day.

I have been so taken up with the late good News from Holland, and Expectation of further Particulars, as well as with other Transactions, of which

I will tell you more to Morrow Morning, that I have not slept a Wink these Three Nights.

I have Reason to believe, That Picardy will soon follow the Example of Artois, in case the Enemy continue in their present Resolution of flying away from us. I think I told you last Time we were together my Opinion about the Deuille.

THE honest Gentlemen upon the Bench bid me tell you, they would be glad to see you often among them. We shall be there all the warm Hours of the Day, during the present Posture of Affairs.

THIS happy Opening of the Campaign will, I hope, give us a very joyful Summer; and I propose to take many a pleasant Walk with you, if you will sometime come into the Park; for that is the only Place in which I can be free from the Malice of my Enemies. Farewell till Three a-Clock to Morrow Morning. I am,

Your most humble Servant, &c.

P.S. The King of Sweden is still at Bender.

I should have fretted my self to Death at this Promise of a second Visit, if I had not found in his Letter an Intimation of the good News which I have since heard at large. I have however ordered my Maid to tie up the Knocker of my Door in such a Manner as she would do if I was really indisposed. By which Means I hope to escape breaking my Morning's Rest.

SINCE I have given this Letter to the Publick, I shall communicate one or two more, which I have lately received from others of my Correspondents. The following is from a Coquet, who is very angry at my having disposed of her in Marriage to a Bass-Viol.

Mr. Bickerstaff,

I THOUGHT you would never have descended from the Censor of Great Britain, to become Match Maker. But pray, Why so severe upon the Kit

Ha

Had I been a Jews-Harp, that is nothing but Tongue, you could not have used me worse. Of all Things, a Bass-Viol is my Aversion. Had you married me to a Bagpipe, or a Passing-Bell, I should have been better pleased. Dear Father Isaac, either chuse me a better Husband, or I will live and die a Dulcimer. In Hopes of receiving Satisfaction from you, I am yours, whilst Isabella Kit.

THE Pertness which this Fair Lady hath hewn in this Letter, was one Occasion of my oyning her to the Bass-Voil, which is an Instrument that wants to be quickened by these little Vivacities; as the Sprightliness of the Kit ought to be checked and curbed by the Gravity of the Bass-Voil.

MY next Letter is from Tom Folio, who it seems makes it amiss that I have published a Character of him so much to his Disadvantage.

SIR,
I SUPPOSE you meant Tom Fool, when you called me Tom Folio in a late trifling Paper of yours: for I find, 'tis your Design to run down all useful and solid Learning. The Tobacco-Paper on which your own Writings are usually printed, as well as the Incorrectness of the Press, and the scurvy Letter, sufficiently bew the Extent of your Knowledge. I question not but you look upon John Morphew to be as great a Man as Elzevir, and Aldus to be such another as Bernard Lintott. If you would give me my Revenge, I would only desire of you to let me publish an Account of your Library, which I dare say would furnish out an extraordinary Catalogue.

Tom Folio.

IT hath always been my Way to baffle Reproof with Silence, tho' I cannot but observe the disingenuous Proceedings of this Gentleman, who is not content to asperse my Writings, but bath wounded through my Sides, those eminent and worthy Citizens, Mr. John Morpheus, and Mr. Bernard Lintott.

— Nunquam Libertas gratiō exstat Quam sub Rego pio. —

N^o 161. Thursday, April 20. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 19.

I WAS walking Two or Three Days ago in a very pleasing Retirement, and amusing myself with the Reading of that ancient and beautiful Allegory, called, The Table of Cebes. I was at last so tired with my Walk, that I sate down to rest my self upon a Bench that stood in the Midst of an agreeable Shade. The Musick of the Birds, that filled all the Trees about me, lulled me asleep before I was aware of it; which was followed by a Dream, that I impute in some Measure to the foregoing Author, who had made an Impression upon my Imagination, and put me into his own Way of Thinking.

I fancied my self among the Alpes, and, as is natural in a Dream, seemed every Moment to bound from one Summit to another, till at last, after having made this airy Progress over the Tops of several Mountains, I arrived at the very Centre of those broken Rocks and Precipices. I here, methought, saw a prodigious Circuit of Hills, that reached above the Clouds and encompassed a large Space of Ground, which I had a great Curiosity to look into. I thereupon continued my former Way of travelling through a great Variety of Winter-Scenes, till I had gained the Top of these white Mountains which seemed another Alpes of Snow. I looked down from hence into a spacious Plain, which was surrounded on all Sides by this Mound of Hills, and which presented me with the most agreeable Prospe&t I had ever seen. There was a greater Variety of Colours in the Embroidery of the Meadows, a more lively Green in the Leaves and Grass, a brighter Crystal in the Streams, than what I ever met with in any other Region. The Light itself had something more shining and glorious in it than that of which the Day is made in other Places. I was wonderfully astonished at the Discovery of such a Paradise amidst the Wildness of those cold, hoary Lanskips which lay about it; but found at Length, that this happy Region was inhabited by the Goddess of Liberty; whose Presence soothed the Rigours of the Climate, enriched the Barrenness of the Soil, and more than supplyed the Absence of the Sun. The Place was covered with a wonderful Profusion of Flowers, that without being disposed into regular Borders and Parterres, grew promiscuously, and had a greater Beauty in their natural Luxuriancy and Disorder, than they could have received from the Checks and Restraints of Art. There was a River that arose out of the South-Side of the Mountain, that by an infinite Number of Turns and Windings, seemed to visit every Plant, and cherish the several Beauties of the Spring, with which the Fields abounded. After having run to and fro in a wonderful Variety of Meanders, as unwilling to leave so charming a Place, it at last throws it self into the Hollow of a Mountain, from whence it passes under a long Range of Rocks, and at Length rises in that Part of the Alpes where the Inhabitants think it the first Source of the Rhone. This River, after having made its Progress thro' those free Nations, stagnates in a huge Lake at the leaving of them, and no sooner enters into the Regions of Slavery, but runs thro' them with an incredible Rapidity, and takes its shortest Way to the Sea.

I descended into the happy Fields that lay beneath me, and in the Midst of them, beheld the Goddess sitting upon a Throne. She had nothing to enclose her but the Bounds of her own Domains, and nothing over her Head but the Heavens. Every Glance of her Eye cast a Track of Light where it fell, that revived the Spring, and made all Things smile about her. My Heart grew cheerful at the Sight of her, and as she looked upon me, I found a certain Confidence growing in me, and such an inward Resolution as I never felt before that Time.

ON the Left Hand of the Goddess sate the Genius of a Commonwealth, with the Cap of Liberty on her Head, and in her Hand a Wand like that with which a Roman Citizen used to give his Slaves their Freedom. There was something mean and vulgar, but at the same Time exceeding bold and daring, in her Air; her Eyes were full of Fire, but had in them such Carts of Fierceness and Cruelty, as made her appear to me rather dreadful than amiable. On her Shoulders she wore a Mantle, on which there was wrought a great Confusion of Figures. As it flew in the Wind, I could not discern the particular Design of them, but saw Wounds in the Bodies of some, and Agonies in the Faces of others; and over one Part of it could read in Letters of Blood, The Ides of March.

ON the Right Hand of the Goddess was the Genius of Monarchy. She was cloathed in the whitest Ermin, and wore a Crown of the purest Gold upon her Head. In her Hand she held a Sceptre like that which is born by the British Monarchs. A Couple of tame Lions lay crouching at her Feet: Her Countenance had in it a very great Majesty without any Mixture of Terror: Her Voice was like the Voice of an Angel, filled with so much Sweetness, and accompanied with such an Air of Condescension, as tempered the Awfulness of her Appearance, and equally inspired spired Love and Veneration into the Hearts of all that beheld her.

IN the Train of the Goddess of Liberty were the several Arts and Sciences, who all of them flourished underneath her Eye. One of them in particular made a greater Figure than any of the rest, who held a Thunderbolt in her Hand, which had the Power of melting, piercing, or breaking every Thing that stood in its Way. The Name of this Goddess was Eloquence.

THE R E were Two other dependent Goddesses, who made a very conspicuous Figure in this blissful Region. The first of them was seated upon an Hill, that had every Plant growing out of it, which the Soil was in its own Nature capable of producing. The other was seated in a little Island, that was covered with Groves of Spices, Olives, and Orange-trees; and in a Word, with the Products of every Foreign Clime. The Name of the first was Plenty, of the Second, Commerce. The first leaned her Right Arm upon a Plough, and under her Left held a huge Horn, out of which she poured a whole Autumn of Fruits. The other wore a rostral Crown upon her Head, and kept her Eyes fixed upon a Compass.

I was wonderfully pleased in ranging through this delightful Place, and the more so, because it was not incumbered with Fences and Enclosures; till at length, methoughts, I sprung from the Ground, and pitched upon the Top of an Hill, that presented several Objects to my Sight which I had not before taken Notice of. The Winds that passed over this flow'ry Plain, and through the Tops of the Trees which were full of Blossoms, blew upon me in such a continued Breeze of Sweets, that I was wonderfully charmed with my Situation. I here saw all the inner Declivities of that great Circuit of Mountains, whose Outside was covered with Snow, overgrown with huge Forests of Fir-Trees, which indeed are very frequently found in other Parts of the Alpes. These Trees were inhabited by Storks, that came thither in great Flights from very distant Quarters of the World. Methought, I was pleased in my Dream to see what became of these Birds, when, upon leaving the Places to which they make an annual Visit, they rise in great Flocks so high till they are out of Sight; and for that Reason have been thought by some modern Philosophers to take a Flight to the Moon. But my Eyes were soon diverted from this Prospect, when I observed Two great Gaps that led through this Circuit of Mountains, where Guards and Watches were posted Day and Night. Upon Examination I found, that there were Two formidable Enemies encamped before each of these Avenues, who kept the Place in a perpetual Alarm, and watched all Opportunities of invading it.

TTRANNY was at the Head of one of these Armies, dressed in an Eastern Habit, and grasping in her Hand an Iron Sceptre. Behind her was Barbary, with the Garb and Complexion of an Athiopian; Ignorance, with a Turbant on her Head; and Persecution holding up a bloody Flag, embroidered with Flower-de-Luces. These were followed by Oppression, Poverty, Famine, Torture, and a dreadful Train of Appearances, that made me tremble to behold them. Among the Baggage of this Army, I could discover Racks, Wheels, Chains, and Gibbets, with all the Instruments Art could invent to make humane Nature miserable.

BEFORE the other Avenge I saw Licentiousness, dressed in a Garment not unlike the Polish Cassock, and leading up a whole Army of Monsters, such as Clamour, with a hoarse Voice, and a Hundred Tongues; Confusion, with a misshapen Body, and a Thousand Heads; Insolence, with a Forehead of Brass; and Rapine, with Hands of Iron. The Tumult, Noise, and Uproar in this Quarter,

Part ed by from ughts, became Places
y rise ight;
some o the from Gaps
tains, y and there before a per-ties of these raspd her on of her Flag, were rture, made Bag-acks, instruature tious-Polis-Mon-
and apenwith a s of this rter,
S. 162.

Quarter, were so very great, that they disturbed my Imagination more than is consistent with Sleep, and by that Means awaked me.

Tertius è cælo cecidit Cato.

Juv. Sat. 2.

N° 162. Saturday, April 22. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 21.

IN my younger Years I used many Endeavours to get a Place at Court, and indeed continued my Pursuits till I arrived at my Grand Climacterick: But at length altogether despairing of Success, whether it were for want of Capacity, Friends, or due Application, I at last resolved to erect a new Office, and for my Encouragement, to place my self in it. For this Reason I took upon me the Title and Dignity of Censor of Great Britain, reserving my self all such Perquisites, Profits, and Emoluments, as should arise out of the Discharge of the said Office. These in Truth have not been inconsiderable; for, besides, those weekly Contributions which I receive from John Morpheus, and those annual Subscriptions which I propose to my self from the most elegant Part of this great Island, I daily live in a very comfortable Affluence of Wine, stale Beer, Hungary-Water, Beef, Books, and Marrow-Bones, which I receive from many well disposed Citizens; not to mention the Forfeitures which accrue to me from the several Offenders that appear before me on Court-Days.

HAVING now enjoyed this Office for the Space of a Twelvemonth, I shall do what all good Officers ought to do, take a Survey of my Behaviour, and consider carefully, whether I have discharged my Duty, and acted up to the Character

Character with which I am invested. For my Direction in this Particular, I have made a narrow Search into the Nature of the old Roman Censors, whom I must always regard, not only as my Predecessors, but as my Patterns in this great Employment; and have several Times asked my own Heart with great Impartiality. Whether Cato will not bear a more venerable Figure among Posterity than Bickerstaff?

I find the Duty of the Roman Censor was Twofold. The first Part of it consisted in making frequent Reviews of the People, in casting up their Numbers, ranging them under their several Tribes, disposing them into proper Classes, and subdividing them into their respective Centuries.

IN Compliance with this Part of the Office, I have taken many curious Surveys of this great City, I have collected into particular Bodies the Dappers and the Smarts, the Natural and Affected Rakes, the Pretty Fellows, and the very Pretty Fellows. I have likewise drawn out in several distinct Parties your Pedants and Men of Fire, your Gamesters and Politicians. I have separated Cits from Citizens, Free-Thinkers from Philosophers, Wits from Snuff-Takers, and Duellists from Men of Honour. I have likewise made a Calculation of Equires, not only considering the several distinct Swarms of them that are settled in the different Parts of this Town, but also that more rugged Species that inhabit the Fields and Woods, and are often found in Pot-Houses, and upon Hay-corks.

I shall pass the Soft Sex over in Silence, having not yet reduced them into any tolerable Order; as likewise the softer Tribe of Lovers, which will cost me a great deal of Time, before I shall be able to cast them into their several Centuries and Subdivisions.

THE second Part of the Roman Censor's Office was to look into the Manners of the People, and to check check any growing Luxury, whether in Diet, Dress, or Building. This Duty likewise I have endeavoured to discharge, by those wholesome Precepts which I have given my Countrymen in regard to Beef and Mutton, and the severe Censures which I have passed upon Ragouts and Friccacies. There is not, as I am informed, a Pair of red Heels to be seen within Ten Miles of London, which I may likewise ascribe, without Vanity, to the becoming Zeal which I expressed in that Particular. I must own, my Success with the Petticoat is not so great: But as I have not yet done with it, I hope I shall in a little Time put an effectual Stop to that growing Evil. As for the Article of Building, I intend hereafter to enlarge upon it, having lately observed several Ware-houses, nay private Shops, that stand upon Corinthian Pillars, and whole Rows of Tin-Pots shewing themselves, in order to their Sale, thro' a Sash-Window.

I have likewise followed the Example of the Roman Censors, in punishing Offences according to the Quality of the Offender. It was usual for them to expel a Senator, who had been guilty of great Immoralities, out of the Senate-House, by omitting his Name when they called over the List of his Brethren. In the same Manner, to remove effectually several worthless Men who stand possessed of great Honours, I have made frequent Draughts of dead Men out of the vicious Part of the Nobility, and given them up to the new Society of Upholders, with the necessary Orders for their Judgment. As the Roman Censors used to punish the Knights or Gentlemen of Rome, by taking away their Horses from them, I have seized the Canes of many Criminals of Figure, whom I had just Reason to animadvert upon. As for the Offenders among the common People of Rome, they were generally chastised, by being thrown out of a higher Tribe, and placed in one which was not ho-honourable. My Reader cannot but think I have had an Eye to this Punishment, when I have degraded one Species of Men into Bombs, Squibs, and Crackers, and another into Drums, Bass-Viols, and Bagpipes; not to mention whole Packs of Delinquents whom I have shut up in Kennels, and the new Hospital which I am at present erecting, for the Reception of those my Countrymen who give but little Hopes of their Amendment, on the Borders of Moor Fields. I shall only observe upon this last Particular, That since some late Surveys I have taken of this Island, I shall think it necessary to enlarge the Plan of the Buildings which I design in this Quarter.

WHEN my great Predecessor, Cato the Elder, stood for the Censorship of Rome, there were several other Competitors who offered themselves; and to get an Interest amongst the People, gave them great Promises of the mild and gentle Treatment, which they would use towards them in that Office. Cato on the contrary told them, he presented himself as a Candidate, because he knew the Age was sunk in Immorality and Corruption; and that if they would give him their Votes, he would promise them to make use of such a Strictness and Severity of Discipline as should recover them out of it. The Roman Historians, upon this Occasion, very much celebrated the publick Spiritednes of that People, who chose Cato for their Censor, notwithstanding his Method of recommending himself. I may in some Measure extol my own Countrymen upon the same Account, who, without any Respect to Party, or any Application from my self, have made such generous Subscriptions for the Censor of Great Britain, as will give a Magnificence to my old Age, and which I esteem more than I would any Post in Europe of an Hundred Times the Value. I shall only add, That upon looking into my Catalogue of Subscribers, which I intend ink hen ombs, rums, whole up in am at se my their

162
s. I ular, of this re the this Elder,
e selves; gave reatin in , he Corheir se of e as Hiele-ple, ding may up per-ave asor e to n I nes ing end
to

to print Alphabetically in the Front of my Lucubrations, I find the Names of the greatest Beauties and Wits in the whole Island of Great Britain, which I only mention for the Benefit of any of them who have not yet subscribed, it being my Design to close the Subscription in a very short Time.

Idem inficerat infestior rure
Simul poemata attigit; neque idem unquam
Æque est beatus, ac poema cum scribitur;
Tam gaudet in se, tamque se ipse miratur.
Nimirum idem omnes fallimur; neque est quisquam
Quem non in aliqua re videre Suffenum Puffus— Catul. de Suffeno.

N^o 163. Tuesday, April 25. 1710.

Will's Coffee-House, April 24.

YESTERDAY came hither about Two Hours before the Company generally make their Appearance, with a Design to read over all the News-Papers; but upon my sitting down, I was accosted by Ned Soothly, who saw me from a Corner in the other End of the Room, where I found he had been Writing something. Mr. Bickstaff, says he, I observe by a late Paper of yours, that you and I are just of a Humour; for you must know, of all Imperficiencies, there is nothing which I so much hate as News. I never read a Gazette in my Life; and never trouble my Head about our Armies, whether they win or lose, or in what Part of the World they lie encamped. Without giving me Time to reply, he drew a Paper of Verses out of his Pocket, telling me, That he had something which would entertain me more agreeably, and that he would desire desire my Judgment upon every Line, for that we had Time enough before us till the Company came in.

NED SOFTLY is a very pretty Poet, and a great Admirer of easy Lines. Waller is his Favourite: And as that admirable Writer has the best and worst Verses of any among our great English Poets, Ned Softly has got all the bad Ones without Book, which he repeats upon Occasion, to shew his Reading, and garnish his Conversation. Ned is indeed a true English Reader, incapable of relishing the great and masterly Strokes of this Art; but wonderfully pleased with the little Gothick Ornaments of Epigrammatical Conceits, Turns, Points, and Quibbles, which are so frequent in the most admired of our English Poets, and practised by those who want Genius and Strength to represent, after the Manner of the Ancients, Simplicity in its natural Beauty and Perfection.

FINDING my self unavoidably engaged in such a Conversation, I was resolved to turn my Pain into a Pleasure, and to divert my self as well as I could with so very odd a Fellow. You must understand, says Ned, that the Sonnet I am going to read to you was written upon a Lady, who shewed me some Verses of her own making, and is perhaps the best Poet of our Age. But you shall hear it. Upon which he began to read as follows:

To Mira, on her incomparable Poems.

When dress'd in Laurel Wreaths you shine,
And tune your soft melodious Notes,
You seem a Sister of the Nine,
Or Phœbus self in Petticoats.

2.

I fancy, when your Song you sing,
(Your Song you sing with so much Art)
Your Pen was pluck'd from Cupid's Wing ;
For ah ! it wounds me like his Dart.

WHY, says I, this is a little Nosegay of Conceits, a very Lump of Salt : Every Verse hath something in it that piques ; and then the Dart in the last Line is certainly as pretty a Sting in the Tail of an Epigram (for so I think your Criticks call it) as ever entered into the Thought of a Poet. Dear Mr. Bickerstaff, says he, shaking me by the Hand, every Body knows you to be a Judge of these Things ; and to tell you truly, I read over Roscommon's Translation of Horace's Art of Poetry Three several Times, before I sat down to write the Sonnet which I have shewn you. But you shall hear it again, and pray observe every Line of it, for not one of them shall pass without your Approbation.

When dress'd in Laurel Wreaths you shine,

THAT is, says he, when you have your Garland on ; when you are writing Verses. To which I replied, I know your Meaning : A Metaphor ! The same, said he, and went on.

And tune your soft melodious Notes,

PRAY observe the Gliding of that Verse ; there is scarce a Consonant in it : I took Care to make it run upon Liquids. Give me your Opinion of it. Truly, said I, I think it as good as the former. I am very glad to hear you say so, says he ; but mind the next.

You seem a Sister of the Nine,
THAT

THAT is, says he, you seem a Sister of the Muses; and if you look into ancient Authors, you will find it was their Opinion, that there were Nine of them. I remember it very well, said I, but pray proceed.

Or Phœbus self in Petticoats.

PHOEBUS, says he, was the God of Poetry. These little Instances, Mr. Bickerstaff, shew a Gentleman's Reading. Then to take off from the Air of Learning, which Phœbus, and the Muses have given to this first Stanza, you may observe, how it falls all of a sudden into the Familiar; in Petticoats!

Or Phœbus self in Petticoats.

LET us now, says I, enter upon the second Stanza. I find the first Line is still a Continuation of the Metaphor.

I fancy, when your Song you sing,

IT is very right, says he; but pray observe the Turn of Words in those Two Lines. I was a whole Hour in adjusting of them, and have still a Doubt upon me, Whether in the second Line it should be Your Song you sing; or, You sing your Song? You shall hear them both:

I fancy, when your Song, you sing,

(Your Song you sing with so much Art.)

O R,

I fancy, when your Song you sing,

You sing your Song with so much Art.

TRULY, said I, the Turn is so natural either Way, that you have made me almost giddy with it. Dear, Sir, said he, grasping me by the Hand, you have a great deal of Patience; but pray what do you think of the next Verse?

Your Pen was pluck'd from Cupid's Wing,

THINK: Says I, I think you have made Cupid look like a little Goose. That was my Meaning, says he; I think the Ridicule is well enough hit off. But we now come to the last, which sums up the whole Matter?

For ab! it wounds me like his Dart.

PRAY how do you like that Ab! Doth it not make a pretty Figure in that Place? Ab! It looks as if I felt the Dart, and cried out at being prick'd with it.

For Ab! it wounds me like his Dart.

MY Friend 'Dick Easy, continued he, assured me, he would rather have written that Ab! than to have been the Author of the Aeneid. He indeed objected, that I made Mira's Pen like a Quill in one of the Lines, and like a Dart in the other. But as to that—Oh! as to that, says I, it is but supposing Cupid to be like a Porcupine, and his Quills and Darts will be the same Thing. He was going to embrace me for the Hint; but half a Dozen Criticks coming into the Room, whose Faces he did not like, he conveyed the Sonnet into his Pocket, and whispered me in the Ear, he would shew it me again as soon as his Man had written it over fair.

Qui sibi promittit cives, urbem, sibi cure
 Imperium fore, & Italiam, & delubra Deorum,
 Quo patre sit natus, num ignota matre inbonefus, Omnes mortales curare & querere cogit. Hor.

N^o 164. Thursday, April 27. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 26.

I HAVE lately been looking over the many Packets of Letters which I have received from all Quarters of Great Britain, as well as from Foreign Countries, since my entring upon the Office of Censor, and indeed am very much surprized to see so great a Number of them, and pleased to think that I have so far encreased the Revenue of the Post-Office. As this Collection will grow daily, I have digested it into severall Bundles, and made proper Endorsements on each particular Letter, it being my Design, when I lay down the Work that I am now engaged in, to erect a Paper-Office, and give it to the Publick.

I could not but make several Observations upon reading over the Letters of my Correspondents: As first of all, on the different Tastes that reign in the different Parts of this City. I find, by the Approbations which are given me, That I am seldom famous on the same Days on both Sides of Temple-Bar; and that when I am in the greatest Repute within the Liberties, I dwindle at the Court-End of the Town. Sometimes I sink in both these Places at the same Time; but for my Comfort, my Name hath then been up in the Districts of Wapping and Rotherhithe.
 Some of my Correspondents desire me to be always serious, and others to be always merry.
 Some of them entreat me to go to Bed and fall into

into a Dream, and like me better when I am asleep than when I am awake: Others advise me to sit all Night upon the Stars, and be more frequent in my Astrological Observations; for that Vision is not properly a Lucubration. Some of my Readers thank me for filling my Paper with the Flowers of Antiquity, others desire News from Flanders. Some approve my Criticisms on the Dead, and others my Censures on the Living. For this Reason, I once resolved in the new Edition of my Works, to range my several Papers under distinct Heads, according as their principal Design was to benefit and instruct the different Capacities of my Readers; and to follow the Example of some very great Authors, by writing at the Head of each Discourse, Ad Aulam, Ad Academiam, Ad Populum, Ad Clerum.

THE E R E is no Particular in which my Correspondents of all Ages, Conditions, Sexes and Complexions universally agree, except only in their Thirst after Scandal. It is impossible to conceive how many have recommended their Neighbours to me upon this Account, or how unmercifully I have been abused by several unknown Hands, for not publishing the secret Histories of Cuckoldom that I have received from almost every Street in Town.

IT would indeed be very dangerous for me to read over the many Praises and Eulogiums which come Post to me from all the Corners of the Nation, were they not mixed with many Checks, Reprimands, Scurrilities and Reproaches, which several of my good-natured Countrymen cannot forbear sending me, though it often costs them Two-pence or a Groat before they can convey them to my Hands: So that sometimes when I am put into the best Humour in the World, after having read a Panegyrick upon my Performances, and looked upon my self as a Benefactor to the British Nation, the next Letter perhaps I open begins with, You old doting Scoundrel — Are not you a sad Dog — Sirrah, you deserve to have your Nose slit; and the like ingenious Conceits. These little Mortifications are necessary to suppress that Pride and Vanity which naturally arise in the Mind of a received Author, and enable me to bear the Reputation which my courteous Readers bestow upon me, without becoming a Coxcomb by it. It was for the same Reason, that when a Roman General entered the City in the Pomp of a Triumph, the Commonwealth allowed of several little Drawbacks to his Reputation, by conning at such of the Rabble as repeated Libels and Lampoons upon him within his Hearing, and by that Means engaged his Thoughts upon his Weakness and Imperfections, as well as on the Merits that advanced him to so great Honour. The Conqueror however was not the less esteemed for being a Man in some Particulars, because he appeared as a God in others.

THERE is another Circumstance in which my Countrymen have dealt very perversely with me; and that is, in searching not only into my own Life, but also into the Lives of my Ancestors. If there has been a Blot in my Family for these ten Generations, it hath been discovered by some or other of my Correspondents. In short, I find the ancient Family of the Bickerstaffs has suffered very much through the Malice and Prejudice of my Enemies. Some of them twit me in the Teeth with the Conduct of my Aunt Margery: Nay, there are some who have been so disingenuous, as to throw Maud the Milk-Maid into my Dish, notwithstanding I my self was the first who discovered that Alliance. I reap however many Benefits from the Malice of these Enemies, as they let me see my own Faults, and give me a View of my self in the worst Light; as they hinder me from being blown up by Flattery and Self-Conceit; as they make me keep a watchful Eye over my own Actions, and at the same Time make me cautious how I talk of others, and particularly of my Friends.

Friends and Relations, or value my self upon the Antiquity of my Family.

BUT the most formidable Part of my Correspondents are those whose Letters are filled with Threats and Menaces. I have been treated so often after this Manner, that not thinking it sufficient to fence well, in which I am now arrived at the utmost Perfection, and carry Pistols about me, which I have always tuck'd within my Girdle ; I several Months since made my Will, settled my Estate, and took Leave of my Friends, looking upon my self as no better than a dead Man. Nay, I went so far as to write a long Letter to the most intimate Acquaintance I have in the World, under the Character of a departed Person, giving him an Account of what brought me to that untimely End, and of the Fortitude with which I met it. This Letter being too long for the present Paper, I intend to print it by it self very suddenly ; and at the same Time I must confess, I took my Hint of it from the Behaviour of an old Soldier in the civil Wars, who was Corporal of a Company in a Regiment of Foot, about the same Time that I my self was a Cadet in the King's Army.

THIS Gentleman was taken by the Enemy ; and the two Parties were upon such Terms at that Time, that we did not treat each other as Prisoners of War, but as Traitors and Rebels. The poor Corporal being condemned to die, wrote a Letter to his Wife when under Sentence of Execution. He writ on the Thursday, and was to be executed on the Friday : But considering that the Letter would not come to his Wife's Hands till Saturday, the Day after Execution, and being at that Time more scrupulous than ordinary in speaking exact Truth, he formed his Letter rather according to the Posture of his Affairs when she should read it, than as they stood when he sent it : Though it must be confessed, there is a certain Perplexity in the Style of it, which which the Reader will easily pardon, considering his Circumstances.

Dear Wife,

HOPING you are in good Health, as I am this present Writing, This is to let you know that Yesterday, between the Hours of Eleven and Twelve, I was hanged, drawn and quartered. I die very penitently, and every Body thought my Case very hard. Remember me kindly to my poor fatherless Children.

Yours till Death,

W. B.

IT so happened, that this honest Fellow was relieved by a Party of his Friends, and had the Satisfaction to see all the Rebels hang'd who had been his Enemies. I must not omit a Circumstance which exposed him to Raillery his whole Life after. Before the Arrival of the next Post that would have set all Things clear, his Wife was married to a second Husband, who lived in the peaceable Possession of her; and the Corporal, who was a Man of plain Understanding, did not care to stir in the Matter, as knowing that she had the News of his Death under his own Hand, which she might have produced upon Occasion.

No 165. Saturday, April 29. 1710.

From my own Apartment, April 28.

IT has always been my Endeavour to distinguish between Realities and Appearances, and to separate true Merit from the Pretence to it.

As it shall ever be my Study to make Discoveries of this Nature in humane Life, and to settle the proper Distinctions between the Virtues and Perfections of Mankind; and those false Colours and Resemblances of them that shine alike in the Eyes of the Vulgar; so I shall be more particularly careful to search into the various Merits and Pretences of the Learned World. This is the more necessary, because there seems to be a general Combination among the Pedants to extol one another's Labour, and cry up one another's Parts; while Men of Sense, either through that Modesty which is natural to them, or the Scorn they have for such trifling Commendations, enjoy their Stock of Knowledge like a hidden Treasure, with Satisfaction and Silence. Pedantry indeed in Learning, is like Hypocrify in Religion, a Form of Knowledge without the Power of it, that attracts the Eyes of the common People, breaks out in Noise and Show, and finds it's Reward not from any inward Pleasure that attends it, but from the Praises and Appropriations which it receives from Men.

OF this shallow Species there is not a more unfortunate, empty and conceited Animal, than that which is generally known by the Name of a Critick. This, in the common Acceptation of the Word, is one that, without entering into the Sense and Soul of an Author, has a few general Rules, which, like mechanical Instruments, he applies to the Works of every Writer, and as they quadrate with them, pronounces the Author perfect or defective. He is Master of a certain Set of Words, as Unity, Style, Fire, Flegm, Easy, Natural, Turn, Sentiment, and the like; which he varies, compounds, divides and throws together, in every Part of his Discourse, without any Thought or Meaning. The Marks you may know him by are, an elevated Eye, and dogmatical Brow, a positive Voice, and a Contempt for every Thing that comes out, whether he has read it or not. He dwells altogether in Generalities. He praises or dispraises in the Lump. He thinks his Head very frequently at the Pedantry of Universities, and bursts into Laughter when you mention an Author that is not known at Will. He hath formed his Judgment upon Hom, Horace, and Virgil, not from their own Works, but from those of Rapin and Bossu. He knows his own Strength so well, that he never dares praise any Thing in which he has not a French Author for his Voucher.

WITH these extraordinary Talents and Accomplishments, Sir Timothy Title puts Men in Vogue, or condemns them to Obscurity, and sits as Judge of Life and Death upon every Author that appears in Publick. It is impossible to represent the Pangs, Agonies and Convulsions which Sir Timothy expresses in every Feature of his Face, and Muscle of his Body, upon the Reading of a bad Poet.

ABOUT a Week ago I was engaged at our Friend's House of mine in an agreeable Conversation with his Wife and Daughters, when in the Height of our Mirth, Sir Timothy, who makes Love to my Friend's eldest Daughter, came amongst us puffing and blowing as if he had been very much out of Breath. He immediately called for a Chair, and desired Leave to sit down without any further Ceremony. I asked him Where he had been? Whether he was out of Order? He only replied, That he was quite spent, and fell a cursing in Soliloquy. I could hear him cry, A wicked Rogue — An execrable Wretch — Was there ever such a Monster — The young Ladies upon this began to be affrighted and asked, Whether any one had hurt him? He answered nothing, but still talked to himself To lay the first Scene, says he, in St. James's Park and the last in Northamptonshire? Is that all, sa I? Then I suppose you have been at the Rehearsal of a Play this Morning. Been! says he, which Per

I have been at Northampton, in the Park, in a Lady's Bed-Chamber, in a Diping-Room, every where; the Rogue has led me such a Dance — To I could scarce forbear laughing at his Discourse, I told him, I was glad it was no worse, and that he was only metaphorically weary. In short, Sir, says he, the Author has not observed a single Unity in his whole Play; the Scene shifts in every Dialogue; the Villain has hurried me up and down at such a Rate, that I am tired of my Legs. I could not but observe with some Pleasure, that the young Lady whom he made Love to, conceived a very just Aversion towards him, upon seeing him so very passionate in Trifles. And as she had that natural Sense which makes her a better Judge than a thousand Cri-ticks, she began to rally him upon this foolish Humour. For my Part, says she, I never knew a Play take that was written up to your Rules, or you call them. How Madam! says he, Is that your Opinion? I am sure you have a better Rate. It is a pretty Kind of Magick, says she, in the Poets have, to transport an Audience from one Place to Place without the Help of a Coach and Horses. I could travel round the World at such Rate. 'Tis such an Entertainment as an Enchanted Chantress finds when she fancies herself in a Wood, upon a Mountain, at a Feast on a Solemny;
though at the same Time she has never stirred out of her Cottage. Your Simile, Madam, says Timothy, is by no Means just. Pray, says
I could, let my Similes pass without a Criticism. I confess, continued she, (for I found she was resolved to exasperate him) I laughed very earnestly at the last new Comedy which you found much Fault with. But, Madam, says he, you ought not to have laughed; and I defy any one to shew me a single Rule that you could laugh all, says he. Ought not to laugh! says she, Pray who would hinder me. Madam, says he, there are such People in the World as Rapin, Dodier, and several

several others, that ought to have spoiled your Mirth. I have heard, says the young Lady, That your great Criticks are always very bad Poets: I fancy there is as much Difference between the Works of one and the other, as there is between the Carriage of a Dancing Master and a Gentleman. I must confess, continued she, I would not be troubled with so fine a Judgment as yours is; for I find you feel more Vexation in a bad Comedy, than I do in a deep Tragedy. Madam, says Sir Timothy, That is not my Fault, they should learn the Art of Writing. For my Part, says the young Lady, I should think the greatest Art in your Writers of Comedies is to please. To please! says Sir Timothy, and immediately fell a laughing. Truly, says she, that is my Opinion. Upon this, he composed his Countenance, looked upon his Watch, and took his Leave.

I hear that Sir Timothy has not been at my Friend's House since this notable Conference, to the great Satisfaction of the young Lady, who by this Means has got rid of a very impertinent Fop.

I must confess, I could not but observe, with a great Deal of Surprize, how this Gentleman, by his ill Nature, Folly and Affectation, had made himself capable of suffering so many imaginary Pains, and looking with such a sensible Severity upon the common Diversions of Life.

—Dicenda, Tacenda, Ioguntus. Hor.

N^o 166. Tuesday, May 2. 1710.

White's Chocolate-house, May 1.

THE World is so overgrown with Singularities in Behaviour, and Method of Living, that I have no sooner laid before Mankind the Absurdity of one Species of Men, but there starts up to my View some Set of Impertinents that had before escaped Notice. This Afternoon, as I was talking with fine Mrs. Sprightly's Porter, had desiring Admittance upon an extraordinary Occasion, it was my Fate to be spy'd by Tom. Modely riding by in his Chariot: He did me the Honour to stop, and asked, What I did there of a Monday? I answered, That I had Business of Importance, which I wanted to communicate to the Lady of the House. Tom is one of those Fools who look upon Knowledge of the Fashion to be the only liberal Science; and was so rough as to tell me, That a well-bred Man would as soon call upon a Lady (who keeps a Day) at Midnight, as on any Day but that on which she professes being at Home. There are Rules and Decorums which are never to be transgressed by those who understand the World; and he who offends in that Kind, ought not to take it ill if he is turned away, even when he sees the Person look out at her Window whom he enquires for. Nay, said he, my Lady Dimple is so positive in this Rule, that she takes it for a Piece of good Breeding and Distinction to deny herself with her own Mouth. Mrs. Comma, the great Scholar, insists upon it; and I my self have heard her assert, That a Lord's Porter, or a Lady's Woman, cannot be said to lie in that Case, because they act by Instruction; and their Words are no more their own, than those of a Puppet.

HE was going on with his Ribaldry, when on a sudden he looked on his Watch, and said, he had twenty Visits to make, and drove away without further Ceremony. I was then at Leisure to reflect upon the tasteless Manner of Life, which a Set of idle Fellows lead in this Town, and spend Youth it self with less Spirit, than other Men do their old Age. These Expletives in humane Society, tho' they are in themselves wholly insignificant, nsificant, become of some Consideration when they are mixed with others. I am very much at a Loss how to define, or under what Character, Dissension or Denomination, to place them, except you give me Leave to call them the Order of the Insipids. This Order is in its Extent like that of the Jesuits, and you see of them in every Walk of Life, and in every Profession. Tom Modely has long appeared to me at the Head of this Species. By being habitually in the best Company, he knows perfectly well when a Coat is well cut, or a Periwig well mounted. As soon as you enter the Place where he is, he tells the next Man to him, who is your Taylour, and judges of you more from the Choice of your Periwig-maker than of your Friend. His Business in this World is to be well dressed; and the greatest Circumstance that is to be recorded in his Annals is, That he wears twenty Shirts a Week. Thus, without ever speaking Reason among the Men, or Passion among the Women, he is every where well received, and without any one Man's Esteem, he has every Man's Indulgence.

THIS Order has produced great Numbers of tolerable Copiers in Painting, good Rhimers in Poetry, and harmless Projectors in Politicks. You may see them at first Sight grow acquainted by Sympathy, insomuch that one who had not studied Nature, and did not know the true Cause of their sudden Familiarities, would think that they had some secret Intimation of each other, like the Free Masons. The other Day at Will's I heard Modely and a Critick of the same Order shew their equal Talents with great Delight. The learned Insipid was commending Racine's Turns; the genteel Insipid, Deville's Curls.

THESE Creatures, when they are not forced into any particular Employment, for want of Ideas in their own Imaginations, are the constant Plague of all they meet with by Enquiries for News and Scandal, which makes them the Heroes of Visiting-Days, where they help the Design of the Meeting, which is to pass away that odious Thing called Time, in Discourses too trivial to raise any Reflections which may put well-bred Persons to the Trouble of Thinking.

From my own Apartment, May 1.

I was looking out of my Parlour-Window this Morning; and receiving the Honours which Mary, the Milk-Maid to our Lane, was doing me, by dancing before my Door with the Plate of half her Customers on her Head, when Mr. Clayton, the Author of Arsinoe, made me a Visit, and desired me to insert the following Advertisement in my ensuing Paper.

THE Pastoral Masque compos'd by Mr. Clayton, Author of Arsinoe, will be performed on Wednesday the 3d Instant, in the Great Room at York-Buildings. Tickets are to be had at White's Chocolate house, St. James's, or Young-Man's Coffee-house.

NOTE, The Tickets delivered out for the 17th of April, will be taken then.

WHEN I granted his Request, I made one d not to him, which was, That the Performers should Cause out their Instruments in Tune before the Audi-ence came in; for that I thought the Resent-ment of the Eastern Prince, who, according to the old Story, took Tuning for Playing, to be very Order, just and natural. He was so civil, as not only to promise that Favour, but also to assure me, that he would order the Heels of the Performers to be muffled in Cotton, that the Artists in so polite an Age as ours, may not intermix with their Custom of Harmony a Custom which so nearly resembles the stamping Dances of the West-Indians or H-t-
-es for mutes.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

A Bass-Viol of Mr. Bickerstaff's Acquaintance whose Mind and Fortune do not very exactly agree, proposes to set himself to Sale by Way of Lottery. Ten thousand Pounds is the Sum to be raised, at three Pounds a Ticket, in Consideration that there are more Women who are willing to be married than that can spare a greater Sum. He has already made over his Person to Trustees for the said Money to be forth-coming, and ready to take to Wife the fortunate Woman that wins him.

N. B. Tickets are given out by Mr. Charles Lillie and Mr. John Morphew. Each Adventurer must be a Virgin, and subscribe her Name to her Ticket.

WHEREAS the several Churchwardens of most of the Parishes within the Bills of Mortality, have in an earnest Manner applied themselves by Way of Petition, and have also made a Presentment, of the vain and loose Deportment during Divine Service, of Persons of too great Figure in all their said Parishes, for their Reproof. And whereas it is therein set forth, That Salutations given each other, Hints, Shrugs, Ogle playing of Fans, and fooling with Canes at the Mouths, and other wanton Gesticulations, their whole Congregation appears rather a Theatrical Audience than an House of Devotion. It is hereby ordered, That all Canes, Cravats, Bosom-Laces, Muffs, Fans, Smooch Boxes, and all other Instruments made Use of to give Persons unbecoming Airs, shall be immediately forfeited and sold; and of the Sum arising from the Sale thereof, a ninth Part shall be paid to the Poor, and the rest to the Overseers.

Segnius irritant animos dimissa per amus,
Quam que sunt oculis submissa fidelibus. — Hor.

N^o 167. Thursday, May 4. 1710.

From my own Apartment, May 21.

HAVING received Notice, That the famous Actor Mr. Betterton was to be interr'd this Evening in the Cloysters near Westminster-Abbey, I was resolved to walk thither, and see the last Office done to a Man whom I had always very much admired, and from whose Action I had received more strong Impressions of what is great and noble in humane Nature, than from the Arguments of the most solid Philosophers, or the Descriptions of the most charming Poets I had ever read. As the rude and untaught Multitude are no Way wrought upon more effectually than by seeing publick Punishments and Executions; so Men of Letters and Education feel their Humanity most forcibly exercised, when they attend the Obsequies of Men who had arrived at any Perfection in liberal Accomplishments. Theatrical Action is to be esteemed as such, except it be objected, that we cannot call that an Art which cannot be attained by Art. Voice, Stature, Motion, and other Gifts, must be very bountifully bestowed by Nature, or Labour and Industry will but push the unhappy Endeavourer, is that Way, the further off his Wishes.

SUCH an Actor as Mr. Betterton ought to be recorded with the same Respect as Roscius among the Romans. The greatest Orator has thought fit to quote his Judgment, and celebrate his Life. Roscius was the Example to all that would form themselves into proper and winning Behaviour:

His Action was so well adapted to the Sentiments he expressed, that the Youth of Rome thought they wanted only to be virtuous to be as graceful in their Appearance as Rostini. The Imagination took a lovely Impression of what was great and good; and they who never thought of setting up for the Art of Imitation, became themselves imitable Characters.

THERE are no humane Inventions so aptly calculated for the Forming a free-born People as that of a Theatre. Tully reports, That the celebrated Player of whom I am speaking used frequently to say, The Perfection of an Actor is only to become what he is doing. Young Men, who are too unattentive to receive Lectures, are irresistibly taken with Performances. Hence it is, that I extreamly lament the little Relish the Gentry of this Nation have at present for the just and noble Representations in some of our Tragedies. The Opera's, which are of late introduc'd, can leave no Trace behind them that can be of Service beyond the present Moment. To sing and to dance, are Accomplishments very few have any Thoughts of practising; but to speak justly and move gracefully, is what every Man thinks he does perform, or wishes he did.

I have hardly a Notion, that any Performer of Antiquity could surpass the Action of Mr. Betterton in any of the Occasions in which he has appeared on our Stage. The wonderful Agony which he appeared in, when he examined the Circumstance of the Handkerchief in Othello; the Mixture of Love that intruded upon his Mind upon the innocent Answers Desdemona makes, betrayed in his Gesture such a Variety and Vicissitude of Passions, as would admonish a Man to be afraid of his own Heart, and perfectly convince him, that it is to stab it, to admit that worst of Daggers, Jealousy. Whoever reads in his Closet this admirable Scene, will find that he cannot, except he has as warm an Imagination as Shakespear himself, find any but dry, incoherent and broken Sentences: But a Reader that has seen Betterton act it, observes, there could not be a Word added; that longer Speeches had been unnatural, nay impossible, in Othello's Circumstances. The charming Passage in the same Tragedy, where he tells the Manner of winning the Affection of his Mistress, was urged with so moving and graceful an Energy, that while I walked in the Cloysters, I thought of him with the same Concern as if I waited for the Remains of a Person who had in real Life done all that I had seen him represent. The Gleam of the Place, and faint Lights before the Ceremony appeared, contributed to the melancholy Disposition I was in; and I began to be extreamly afflicted, that Brutus and Cassius had any Difference; that Hotspur's Gallantry was so unfortunate; and that the Mirth and good Humour of Falstaff could not exempt him from the Grave. Nay, this Occasion in me, who look upon the Distinctions amongst Men to be meerly scenical, raised Reflections upon the Emptiness of all humane Perfection and Greatness in general; and I could not but regret, that the sacred Heads which lie buried in the Neighbourhood of this little Portion of Earth in which my poor old Friend is deposited, are returned to Dust as well as he, and that there is no Difference in the Graye between the imaginary and the real Monarch. This made me say of humane Life it self with Macbeth:

To Morrow, to Morrow, and to Morrow,
Creeps in a stealing Pace from Day to Day,
To the last Moment of recorded Time!
And all our Yesterdays have lighted Fools
To their eternal Night! Out, out short Candle!
Life's but a walking Shadow, a poor Player
That struts and frets his Hour upon the Stage,
And then is heard no more:

THE Mention I have here made of Mr. Betterton, for I had, as long as I have known any Thing, a very great Esteem and Gratitude for the Pleasure he gave me, can do him no Good; but it may possibly be of Service to the unhappy Woman he has left behind him, to have it known, that this great Tragedian was never in a Scene half so moving, as the Circumstances of his Affairs created at his Departure. His Wife, after the Cohabitation of forty Years in the strictest Amity, has long pined away with a Sense of his Decay, as well in his Person as his little Fortune; and in Proportion to that, she has herself decayed both in her Health and Reason. Her Husband's Death, added to her Age and Infirmities, would certainly have determined her Life, but that the Greatness of her Distress has been her Relief, by a present Deprivation of her Senses. This Absence of Reason is her best Defence against Age, Sorrow, Poverty and Sickness. I dwell upon this Account so distinctly, in Obedience to a certain great Spirit, who hides her Name, and has by Letter applied to me to recommend to her some Object of Compassion, from whom she may be concealed.

THIS, I think, is a proper Occasion for exerting such Heroick Generosity; and as there is an ingenuous Shame in those who have known better Fortune to be reduced to receive Obligations, as well as a becoming Pain in the truly Generous to receive Thanks; in this Case both those Delicacies are preserved; for the Person obliged is as incapable of knowing her Benefactress, as her Benefactress is unwilling to be known by her.

ADVERTISEMENT.

WHEREAS it has been signified to the Censor, That under the Pretence that he has encouraged the Moving Picture, and particularly admired the Walking Statue, some Persons within the Liberties of Westminster.

minster have vended walking Pictures, insomuch that the said Pictures have within few Days after Sales by Auction returned to the Habitation of their first Proprietors; that Matter has been narrowly looked into, and Orders are given to Pacolet to take Notice of all who are concerned in such Frauds, with Directions to draw their Pictures, that they may be banged in Effigie, in Terrorem to all Auctions for the future.

Nº 168. Saturday, May 6. 1710.

From my own Apartment, May 5.

NEVER was Man so much teased, or suffered half the Uneasiness, as I have done this Evening, between a Couple of Fellows with whom I was unfortunately engaged to sup, where there were also several others in Company. One of them is the most invincibly impudent, and the other as incorrigibly absurd. Upon hearing my Name, the Man of Audacity, as he calls himself, began to assume an awkward Way of Reserve by Way of Ridicule upon me as a Censor, and said, He must have a Care of his Behaviour, for there would Notes be writ upon all that should pass. The Man of Freedom and Ease (for such the other thinks himself) asked me, Whether my Sister Jenny was breeding or not? After they had done with me, they were impudent to a very smart, but well bred Man, who stood his Ground very well, and let the Company see they ought, but could not be out of Countenance. I look upon such a Defence as a real good Action; for while he received their Fire, there was a modest and worthy young Gentleman safe secure by him, and a Lady of the Family at the same Time, guarded against the nauseous Familiarity of the one, and the more painful Mirth of the other. This Conversation, where there were a thousand thousand Things said not worth repeating, made me consider with my self, how 'tis that Men of these disagreeable Characters often go greater Lengths in the World, and seldom fail of outstripping Men of Merit; nay, succeed so well, that with a Load of Imperfections on their Heads, they go on in Opposition to general Disesteem, while they who are every Way their Superiors, languish away their Days, though possessed of the Approbation and Good-will of all who know them.

IF we would examine into the secret Spring of Action in the Impudent and the Absurd, we shall find, though they bear a great Resemblance in their Behaviour, that they move upon very different Principles. The Impudent are professing, though they know they are disagreeable; the Absurd are importunate, because they think they are acceptable: Impudence is a Vice, and Absurdity a Folly. Sir Francis Bacon talks very agreeably upon the Subject of Impudence. He takes Notice, That the Orator being asked, What was the first, second and third Requisite to make a fine Speaker? Still answered, Action. This, said he, is the very outward Form of Speaking, and yet it is what with the Generality has more Force than the most consummate Abilities. Impudence is to the rest of Mankind of the same Use which Action is to Orators.

THE Truth is, the Goods of Men are governed more by Appearances than Realities, and the impudent Man in his Air and Behaviour undertakes for himself that he has Ability and Merit, while the Modest or Diffident gives himself up as one who is possessed of neither. For this Reason, Men of Front carry Things before them with little Opposition, and make so skilful an Use of their Talent, that they can grow out of Humour like Men of Consequence, and be sour, and make their Dissatisfaction do them the same Service as Desert. This Way of Thinking making has often furnished me with an Apology for Men of great Men who confer Favours on the Impudent, great in carrying on the Government of Mankind, of out-they are not to consider what Men they themselves approve in their Closets and private Conversations, but what Men will extend themselves furthest, and more generally pass upon the World for such as their Patrons want in such and such Stations, and consequently take so much Work off the Hands of those who employ them.

FAR be it that I should attempt to lessen the Acceptance which Men of this Character meet with in the World; but I humbly propose only, that they who have Merit of a different Kind, would accomplish themselves in some Degree with this Quality of which I am now treating. Nay, I allow these Gentlemen to press as forward as they please in the Advancements of their Interests and Fortunes, but not to intrude upon others in Conversation also: Let them do what they can with the Rich and Great, as far as they are suffered, but let them not interrupt the Easy and Agreeable. They may be useful as Servants in Ambition, but never as Associates in Pleasure. However, as I would still drive at something instructive in every Lucubration, I must recommend it to all Men who feel in themselves an Impulse towards attempting laudable Actions, to acquire such a Degree of Assurance, as never to lose the Possession of themselves in publick or private, so far as to be incapable of acting with a due Decorum on any Occasion they are called to. It is a mean Want of Fortitude in a good Man, not to be able to do a virtuous Action with as much Confidence as an impudent Fellow does an ill one. There is no Way of mending such false Modesty, but by laying it down for a Rule, That there is nothing shameful but what is criminal.

THE Jesuits, an Order whose Institution is perfectly calculated for making a Progress in the World, take Care to accomplish their Disciples for it, by breaking them of all impertinent Basefulness, and accustoming them to a ready Performance of all indifferent Things. I remember in my Travels, when I was once at a publick Exercise in one of their Schools, a young Man made a most admirable Speech, with all the Beauty of Action, Cadence of Voice, and Force of Argument imaginable, in Defence of the Love of Glory. We were all enamoured with the Grace of the Youth, as he came down from the Desk, where he spoke, to present a Copy of his Speech to the Head of the Society. The Principal received it in a very obliging Manner, and bid him go to the Market-Place and fetch a Joint of Meat, for he should dine with him. He bowed, and in a Trice the Orator returned, full of the Sense of Glory in this Obedience, and with the best Shoulder of Mutton in the Market.

THIS Treatment capacitates them for every Scene of Life. I therefore recommend it to the Consideration of all who have the Instruction of Youth, which of the two is the more inexcusable he who does every Thing by the meer Force of his Impudence, or who performs nothing thro' the Oppression of his Modesty? In a Word, 'tis a Weakness not to be able to attempt what a Man thinks he ought, and there is no Modesty but in Self-Denial.

P. S. UPON my coming Home, I received the following Petition and Letter:

The humble Petition of Sarah Lately,

Sheeweth,

THAT your Petitioner has been one of those Ladies who have had fine Things constantly spoken to her in general Terms, and lived, during her most blooming Years, in daily Expectation of Declarations of Marriage, but never had one made to her.

THAT she is now in her Grand Climacterick; which being above the Space of four Virginities, accounting at fifteen Years each;

Your Petitioner most humbly prays, that in the Lottery for the Bass-Viol she may have four Tickets, in Consideration that her single Life has been occasioned by the Inconstancy of her Lovers, and not through the Cruelty or Frowardness of your Petitioner.

And your Petitioner shall, &c.

Mr. Bickerstaff,

May 3. 1710.

ACCORDING to my Fancy, you took a much better Way to dispose of a Bass-Viol in Yesterday's Paper than you did in your Table of Marriages. I desire the Benefit of a Lottery for my self too—The Manner of it I leave to your own Discretion: Only if you can—allow the Tickets at above five Farthings a-piece. Pray accept of one Ticket for your Trouble, and I wish you may be the fortunate Man that wins

Your very humble Servant till then,

Isabella Kit.

I must own the Request of the aged Petitioner to be founded upon a very undeserved Distress; and since she might, had she had Justice done her, been Mother of many Pretenders to this Prize, instead of being one herself, I do readily grant her Demand; but as for the Proposal of Mrs. Isabella Kit, I cannot project a Lottery for her, 'till I have Security she will surrender herself to the Winner.

Q. Rus.!!

O Rus! Quando ego te aspiciam, quandaque licabit
Nunc veterum libris, nunc soanno, & inertibus horis, Duero sollicita jucunda oblia vita? Hor.

N° 169. Tuesday, May 9th 1710.

From my own Apartment, May 8.

THE Summer-Season now approaching, several of our Family have invited me to pass away a Month or two in the Country, and indeed nothing could be more agreeable to me than such a Recess, did I not consider that I am by two Quarts a worse Companion than when I was last among my Relations: And I am admonished by some of our Club, who have lately visited Staffordshire, that they drink at a greater Rate than they did at that Time. As every Soil does not produce every Fruit or Tree, so every Vice is not the Growth of every Kind of Life; and I have, ever since I could think, been astonished, that Drinking should be the Vice of the Country. If it were possible to add to all our Senses, as we do to that of Sight, by Perspectives, we should methinks more particularly labour to improve them in the midst of the Variety of beauteous Objects which Nature has produced to entertain us in the Country; and do we in that Place destroy the Use of what Organs we have? As for my Part, I cannot but lament the Destruction that has been made of the wild Beasts of the Field, when I see large Tracts of Earth possessed by Men who take no Advantage of their being rational, but lead meer Animal Lives, making it their whole Endeavour to kill in themselves all they have above Beasts; to wit, the Use of Reason, and Taste of Society. It is fro-

frequently boasted in the Writings of Orators and Poets, That it is to Eloquence and Poetry we owe that we are drawn out of Woods and Solitudes into Towns and Cities, and from a wild and savage Being become acquainted with the Laws of Humanity and Civility. If we are obliged to these Arts for so great Service, I could wish they were employed to give us a second Turn; that as they have brought us to dwell in Society, (a Blessing which no other Creatures know) so they would persuade us, now they have settled us, to lay out all our Thoughts in surpassing each other in those Faculties in which only we excel other Creatures. But it is present so far otherwise, that the Contention seems to be, who shall be most eminent in Performances wherein Beasts enjoy greater Abilities than we have. I'll undertake, were the Butler and Swineherd, at any true Esquire's in Great Britain, to keep and compare Accounts of what Wash is drank up in so many Hours in the Parlour and the Pigsty, it would appear, the Gentleman of the House gives much more to his Friends than his Hogs.

THIS, with many other Evils, arises from the Error in Mens Judgment, and not making true Distinctions between Persons and Things. It is usually thought, That a few Sheets of Parchment, made before a Male and Female of wealthy Houses come together, give the Heirs and Descendants of that Marriage, Possession of Lands and Tenements; but the Truth is, there is no Man who can be said to be Proprietor of an Estate, but he who knows how to enjoy it. Nay, it shall never be allowed, that the Land is not a Waste, when the Master is uncultivated. Therefore, to avoid Confusion, it is to be noted, that a Peasant with a great Estate is but an Incumbent, and that he must be a Gentleman to be a Landlord. A Landlord enjoys what he has with his Heart, an Incumbent with his Stomach.

Gut-

Gluttony, Drunkenness and Riot are the Entertainments of an Incumbent; Benevolence, Civility, social and humane Virtues, the Accomplishments of a Landlord. Who, that has any Passion for his native Country, does not think it worse than conquered, when so large Dimensions of it are in the Hands of Salvages, that know no Use of Property but to be Tyrants; or Liberty, but to be unmannerly? A Gentleman in a Country-Life enjoys Paradise with a Temper fit for it; a Clown is cursed in it with all the cutting and unruly Passions Man could be tormented with when he was expelled from it.

THESE is no Character more deservedly esteemed than that of a Country Gentleman, who understands the Station in which Heaven and Nature have placed him. He is Father to his Tenants, and Patron to his Neighbours, and is more superior to those of lower Fortune by his Benevolence than his Possessions. He justly divides his Time between Solitude and Company, so as to use the one for the other. His Life is spent in the good Offices of an Advocate, a Referee, a Companion, a Mediator, and a Friend. His Counsel and Knowledge are a Guard to the Simplicity and Innocence of those of lower Talents, and the Entertainment and Happiness of those of equal. When a Man in a Country-Life has this Turn, as it is to be hoped Thousands have, he lives in a more happy Condition than any is described in the Pastoral Descriptions of Poets, or the vain-glorious Solitudes recorded by Philosophers.

TO a thinking Man it would seem prodigious that the very Situation in a Country Life does not incline Men to a Scorn of the mean Gratiifications some take in it. To stand by a Stream naturally lulls the Mind into Composure and Reverence; to walk in Shades, diversifies that Pleasure; and a bright Sunshine makes a Man consider all Nature in Gladness, and himself the happiest Being in it, as he is the most conscious of her Gifts and Enjoyments. It would be the most impertinent Piece of Pedantry imaginable to form our Pleasures by Imitation of others. I will not therefore mention Sipio and Lelius, who are generally produced on this Subject as Authorities for the Charms of a Rural Life. He that does not feel the Force of agreeable Views and Situations in his own Mind, will hardly arrive at the Satisfaction they bring from the Reflections of others. However, they who have a Taste that Way, are more particularly inflamed with Desire when they see others in the Enjoyment of it, especially when Men carry into the Country a Knowledge of the World as well as of Nature. The Leisure of such Persons is endeared and refined by Reflexion upon Cares and Inquietudes. The Absence of past Labours doubles present Pleasures, which is still augmented, if the Person of Solitude has the Happiness of being addicted to Letters. My Cousin Frank Bickerstaff gives me a very good Notion of this Sort of Felicity in the following Letter.

SIR,

I WRITE this to communicate to you the Happiness I have in the Neighbourhood and Conversation of the noble Lord, whose Health you enquired after in your last. I have bought that little Hovel which borders upon his Royalty, but am so far from being oppressed by his Greatness, that I who know no Envy, and he who is above Pride, mutually recommend ourselves to each other by the Difference of our Fortunes. He esteems me for being so well pleased with a little, and I admire him for enjoying so handsomely a great Deal. He has not the little Taste for observing the Colour of a Tulip, or the Edging of a Leaf of Box, but rejoices in open Views, the Regularity of this Plantation and the Wildness of another, as well as the Fall of a River, the Rising of a Promontory, and all other Objects fit to entertain a Mind like his, that has been long versed in great and publick Amusements. The Make of the Soul is as much seen in Leisure as in Business. He has long lived in Cousis, and been admis'd in Asssemblies, so that he has add'd to Experience a most charming Eloquence, by which he communicates to me the Ideas of my own Mind upon the Objects we meet with, so agreeably, that with his Company in the Fields, I at once enjoy the Country, and a Landship of it. He is now altering the Course of Canals and Rivulets, in which he has an Eye to his Neighbour's Satisfaction, as well as his own. He often makes me Presents by turning the Water into my Grounds, and sends me Fish by their own Streams. To avoid my Thanks, he makes Nature the Instrument of his Bounty, and does all good Offices so much with the Air of a Companion, that his Frankness bides his own Condescension, as well as my Gratitude. Leave the World to it self, and come see us, if not at hand. I long to see your affectionate Cousin, Francis Bickerstaff.

*Fortuna s'vo leta negotio,
Et ludum insolentem ludere pertinax,
Transmutat incertos honores,
Nunc mehi, nunc alio, benigna.*

Hor.

N° 170.

Thursday, May 11. 1730.

From my own Apartment, May 10.

HAVING this Morning spent some Time in reading on the Subject of the Vicissitude of humane Life, I laid aside my Book, and began to ruminate on the Discourse which raised in me those Reflections. I believed it a very good Office to the World, to sit down and shew others the Road in which I am experienced by my Wandrings and Errors. This is Seneca's Way of Think-

Thinking, and he had half convinced me, how dangerous it is to our true Happiness and Tranquillity to fix our Minds upon any Thing which is in the Power of Fortune. It is excusable only in Animals who have not the Use of Reason, to be catched by Hooks and Baits. Wealth, Glory and Power, which the ordinary People look up at with Admiration, the Learned and Wise know to be only so many Snares laid to enslave them. There is nothing farther to be sought for with Earnestness, than what will cloath and feed us. If we pamper our selves in our Diet, or give our Imaginations a Loose in our Desires, the Body will no longer obey the Mind. Let us think no further than to defend our selves against Hunger, Thirst and Cold. We are to remember, that every Thing else is despicable, and not worth our Care. To want little, is true Grandeur, and very few Things are great to a great Mind. Those who form their Thoughts in this Manner, and abstract themselves from the World, are out of the Way of Fortune, and can look with Contempt both on her Favours and her Frowns. At the same Time, they who separate themselves from the immediate Commerce with the busy Part of Mankind, are still beneficial to them, while by their Studies and Writings they recommend to them the small Value which ought to be put upon what they pursue with so much Labour and Disquiet. Whilst such Men are thought the most Idle, they are the most usefully employed. They have all Things, both humane and divine, under Consideration. To be perfectly free from the Insults of Fortune, we should arm our selves with their Reflections. We should learn, That none but intellectual Possessions are what we can properly call our own. All Things from without are but borrowed. What Fortune gives us, is not ours ; and whatever she gives, she can take away.

IT is a common Imputation to Seneca, that though he declaimed with so much Strength of Reason, and a Stoical Contempt of Riches and Power, he was at the same Time one of the richest and most powerful Men in Rome. I know no Instance of his being insolent in that Fortune, and can therefore read his Thoughts on those Subjects with the more Deference. I will not give Philosophy so poor a Look, as to say it can not live in Courts; but I am of Opinion, that it is there in the greatest Eminence, when amidst the Affluence of All the World can bestow, and the Addresses of a Crowd who follow him for that Reason, a Man can think both of himself and those about him abstracted from these Circumstances. Such a Philosopher is as much above an Anchorite, as a wise Matron, who passes thro' the World with Innocence, is preferable to the Nun who locks herself up from it.

FULL of these Thoughts I left my Lodgings, and took a Walk to the Court-end of the Town; and the Hurry and busy Faces I met with about Whitehall, made me form to my self Ideas of the different Prospects of all I saw, from the Turn and Cast of their Countenances. All, methought, had the same Thing in View, but prosecuted their Hopes with a different Air: Some shewed an unbecoming Eagerness, some a surly Impatience, some a winning Deference, but the Generality a servile Complaisance.

I could not but observe, as I roved about the Offices, That all who were still but in Expectation, murmured at Fortune; and all who had obtained their Wishes, immediately began to say, there was no such Being. Each believed it an Act of blind Chance that any other Man was preferred, but owed only to Service and Merit what he had obtained himself. It is the Fault of studious Men to appear in publick with too contemplative a Carriage; and I began to observe, that my Figure, Age and Dress, made me particular: For which Reason, I thought it better to remove a studious Countenance from among busy ones, and take a Turn with a Friend in the Privy-Garden.

WHEN my Friend was alone with me there, Isaac, said he, I know you came aboard only to moralize and make Observations, and I will carry you hard by, where you shall see all that you have your self considered or read in Authors, or collected from Experience, concerning blind Fortune and irresistible Destiny, illustrated in real Persons and proper Mechanisms. The Graces, the Muses, the Fates, all the Beings which have a good or ill Influence upon humane Life, are, you'll say, very justly figured in the Persons of Women; and where I am carrying you, you'll see enough of that Sex together in an Employement which will have so important an Effect upon those who are to receive their Manufacture, as will make them be respectively called Deities or Furies, as their Labour shall prove disadvantageous or successful to their Ventures. Without waiting for my Answer, he carried me to an Apartment contiguous to the Banqueting-House, where there were placed at Two long Tables a large Company of young Women, in decent and agreeable Habits, making up Tickets for the Lottery appointed by the Government. There walked between the Tables a Person who presided over the Work. This Gentlewoman seemed an Emblem of Fortune; she commanded as if unconcerned in their Business, and though every Thing was performed by her Direction, she did not visibly interpose in Particulars. She seemed in Pain at our near Approach to her, and most to approve us, when we made her no Advances. Her Height, her Mien, her Gesture, her Shape, and her Countenance, had something that spoke both Familiarity and Dignity. She therefore appeared to me not only a Picture of Fortune, but of Fortune as I liked her;

her; which made me break out in the following Words:

MADAM,

I AM very glad to see the Fate of the many who now languish in Expectation of what will be the Event of your Labours, in the Hands of one who can act with so impartial an Indifference. Pardon me, that have often seen you before, and have lost you for Want of the Respect due to you. Let me beg of you, who have both the furnishing and turning of that Wheel of Lots, to be unlike the rest of your Sex, repulse the Forward, and the Bold, and favour the Modest and the Humble, I know you fly the Importunate, but smile no more on the Careless. Add not to the Coffers of the Usurer, but give the Power of Bestowing to the Generous. Continue his Wants who cannot enjoy or communicate Plenty; but turn away his Poverty, who can bear it with more Ease than he can see it in another.

ADVERTISEMENT.

WHEREAS Philander signified to Clarinda by Letter bearing Date Thursday Twelve a Clock, That he had lost his Heart by a Shot from her Eyes, and desired she would condescend to meet him the same Day at Eight in the Evening at Rosamond's Pond, faithfully protesting, that in case she would not do him that Honour, she might see the Body of the said Philander the next Day floating on the said Lake of Love, and that he desired only three Signs upon View of his said Body: It is desired, if he has not made away with himself accordingly, that he would forthwith shew himself to the Coroner of the City of Westminster; or Clarinda, being an old Offender, will be found guilty of wilful Murder.

Alter rixatus de lana sepe caprina Propugnat nugis armatus. —

Hor.

Nº 171. Saturday, May 13. 1710.

Grecian Coffee-House, May 12.

IT has happened to be for some Days the Deliberation at the Learned'st Board in this House whence Honour and Title had its first Original. Timolean, who is very particular in his Opinions, but is thought particular for no other Cause but that he acts against depraved Custom, by the Rules of Nature and Reason, in a very handsome Discourse gave the Company to understand, that in those Ages which first degenerated from Simplicity of Life, and natural Justice, the Wise among them thought it necessary to inspire Men with the Love of Virtue, by giving them who adhered to the Interests of Innocence and Truth, some distinguishing Name to raise them above the common Level of Mankind. This Way of fixing Appellations of Credit upon eminent Merit, was what gave Being to Titles and Terms of Honour. Such a Name, continued he, without the Qualities which should give a Man Pretence to be exalted above others, does but turn him to Jeſt and Ridicule. Should one ſee another cudgelled, or ſcurvily treated, Do you think a Man ſo used would take it kindly to be called Hector or Alexander? Every Thing must bear a Proportion with the outward Value that is ſet upon it; or instead of being long had in Veneration, that very Term of Esteem will become a Word of Reproach. When Timoleon had done ſpeaking, Urbanus pursued the ſame Purpose, by giving an Account of the Manner in which the Indian Kings, who were lately in Great Britain, did Honour to the Person where they lodged. They were placed, said he, in an handsome Apartment, at an Upholster's in King-Street, Covent-Garden. The Man of the House, it seems, had been very observant of them, and ready in their Service. These just and generous Princes, who act according to the Dictates of natural Justice, thought it proper to confer some Dignity upon their Landlord before they left his House. One of them had been sick during his Residence there, and having never before been in a Bed, had a very great Veneration for him who made that Engine of Repose, so useful and so necessary in his Distress. It was consulted among the four Princes by what Name to dignify his great Merit and Services. The Emperor of the Mobocks, and the other Three Kings, stood up, and in that Posture recounted the Civilities they had received, and particularly repeated the Care which was taken of their sick Brother. This, in their Imagination, who are used to know the Injuries of Weather, and the Vicissitudes of Cold and Heat, gave them very great Impressions of a skilful Upholster, whose Furniture was so well contrived for their Protection on such Occasions. It is with these less instructed (I will not say less knowing) People, the Manner of doing Honour, to impose some Name significant of the Qualities of the Person they distinguish, and the good Offices received from him. It was therefore resolved to call their Landlord Cadoreque, which is the Name of the strongest Fort in their Part of the World. When they had agreed upon the Name, they sent for their Landlord, and as he entered into their Presence, the Emperor of the Mobocks taking him by the Hand, called him Cadoreque. After which the other three Princes repeated the same Word and Ceremony.

TIMO LEON appeared much satisfied with this Account, and having a Philosophick Turn, began to argue against the Modes and Manners of those Nations which we esteem polite, and express himself with Disdain at our usual Method of calling such as are Strangers to our Innovations, barbarous. I have, says he, so great a Deference for the Distinction given by these Princes, that Cadoreque shall be my Upholster — He was going on, but the intended Discourse was interrupted by Minucio who sate near him, a small Philosopher, who is also somewhat of a Politician ; one of those who sets up for Knowledge by Doubting, and has no other Way of making himself considerable, but by contradicting all he hears said. He has, besides much Doubt and Spirit of Contradiction, a constant Suspicion as to State-Affairs. This accomplished Gentleman, with a very awful Brow, and a Countenance full of Weight, told Timoleon, That it was a great Misfortune Men of Letters seldom looked into the Bottom of Things. Wilkany Man, continued he, perswade me, that this was not from the Beginning to the End a concerted Affair ? Who can convince the World, that Four Kings shall come over here, and lie at the Two Crowns and Cushion, and one of them fall sick, and the Place be called King-street, and all this by meer Accident ? No, no : To a Man of very small Penetration, it appears, that Tee Yee Neen Ho Ga Row, Emperor of the Mobocks, was prepared for this Adventure beforehand. I do not care to contradict any Gentleman in his Discourse ; but I must say, however, Sa Ga Yeath Rua Geth Ton and E Tow Oh Koam, might be surprised in this Matter ; nevertheless, Ho Nec Yeth Taw No Row knew it before he set Foot on the English Shore.

TIMO LEON looked stedfastly at him for some Time, then shaked his Head, paid for his Tea, and marched off. Several others who sate round him, were in their Turns attacked by this ready Disputant. A Gentleman who was at some Distance, happened in Discourse to say it was Four Miles to HammerSmith. I must beg your Pardon, says Minucio, when we say a Place is so far off, we do not mean exactly from the very Spot of Earth we are in, but from the Town where we are; so that you must begin your Account from the End of Piccadilly: And if you do so, I'll lay any Man ten to one, it is not above three good Miles off. Another, about Minucio's Level of Understanding, began to take him up in this Important Argument, and maintained, that considering the Way from Pimlico at the End of St. James's Park, and the crossing from Chelsea by Earl's Court, he would stand to it, that it was full four Miles. But Minucio replied with great Vehemence, and seemed so much to have the better of the Dispute, that this Adversary quitted the Field, as well as the other. I sat till I saw the Table almost all vanished, where, for want of Discourse, Minucio asked me, How I did? To which I answered, very well. That's very much, said he; I assure you, you look paler than ordinary. Nay, thought I, if he won't allow me to know whether I am well or not, there's no staying for me neither. Upon which I took my Leave, pondering as I went Home at this strange Poverty of Imagination, which makes Men run into the Fault of giving Contradiction. They want in their Minds Entertainment for themselves or their Company, and therefore build all they speak upon what is started by others; and since they cannot improve that Foundation, they strive to destroy it. The only Way of dealing with these People is to answer in Monosyllables, or by Way of Question. When one of them tells you a Thing that he thinks extraordinary, I go no farther than, Say you so, Sir? Indeed! Heyday! Or, Is it come to that! These little Rules, which appear but silly silly in the Repetition, have brought me with great Tranquility to this Age. And I have made it an Observation, that as Assent is more agreeable than Flattery, so Contradiction is more odious than Calumny.

ADVERTISEMENT.

Mr. Bickerstaff's Aereal Messenger has brought him a Report of what passed at the Auction of Pictures which was in Somerset-House Yard on Monday last, and finds there were no Screens present, but all transfected with great Justice.

N. B. All false Buyers at Auctions being employed only to hide others, are from this Day forward to be known in Mr. Bickerstaff's Writings by the Word Screens.

Quod quisque vitet, nunquam bomini fatis Cautum est in horas. — Hor.

Nº 172. Tuesday, May 17. 1710.

From my own Apartment, May 15.

WHEN a Man is in a serious Mood, and ponders upon his own Make, with a Retrospect to the Actions of his Life, and the many fatal Miscarriages in it, which he owes to ungoverned Passions, he is then apt to say to himself, that Experience has guarded him against such Errors for the Future: But Nature often recurs in spite of his best Resolutions, and it is to the very End of our Days a Struggle between our Reason and our Temper, which shall have the Empire over us. However, this is very much to be helped by Circumspection, and a constant Alarm against the first Onsets of Passion.

As this is in general a necessary Care to make a Man's Life easy and agreeable to himself, so it is more particularly the Duty of such as are engaged in Friendship, and more near Commerce with others. Those who have their Joys, have also their Griefs in Proportion, and none can extremely exalt or depress Friends but Friends. The harsh Things which come from the rest of the World, are received and repulsed with that Spirit which every honest Man bears for his own Vindication; but Unkindness in Words or Actions among Friends, affects us at the first Instant in the inmost Recesses of our Souls. Indifferent People, if I may so say, can wound us only in heterogeneous Parts, maim us in our Legs or Arms; but the Friend can make no Pafs but at the Heart it self. On the other Side, the most impotent Assistance, the meer Well-wishes of a Friend, gives a Man Constancy and Courage against the most prevailing Force of his Enemies. It is here only a Man enjoys and suffers to the Quick! For this Reason, the most gentle Behaviour is absolutely necessary to maintain Friendship in any Degree above the common Level of Acquaintance. But there is a Relation of Life much more near than the most strict and sacred Friendship, that is to say, Marriage. This Union is of too close and delicate a Nature to be easily conceived by those who do not know that Condition by Experience. Here a Man should, if possible, soften his Passions; if not for his own Ease, in Compliance to a Creature formed with a Mind of a quite different Make from his own. I am sure, I do not mean it an Injury to Women, when I say there is a Sort of Sex in Souls. I am tender of offending them, and know it is hard not to do it on this Subject; but I must go on to say, That the Soul of a Man, and that of a Woman, are made very unlike, according to the Employments for which they are designed. The Ladies will please to ob-observe, I say, our Minds have different, not superior Qualities to theirs. The Virtues have respectively a Masculine and a Feminine Cast. What we call in Men Wisdom, is in Women Prudence. It is a Partiality to call one greater than the other. A Prudent Woman is in the same Class of Honour as a wise Man, and the Scandals in the Way of both are equally dangerous. But to make this State any Thing but a Burthen, and not hang a Weight upon our very Beings, it is very proper each of the Couple should frequently remember, that there are many Things which grow out of their very Natures that are pardonable, nay becoming, when considered as such, but without that Reflection must give the quickest Pain and Vexation. To manage well a great Family, is as worthy an Instance of Capacity, as to execute a great Employment; and for the Generality, as Women perform the considerable Part of their Duties, as well as Men do theirs; so in their common Behaviour, those of ordinary Genius are not more trivial than the common Rate of Men; and in my Opinion, the Playing of a Fan is every Whit as good an Entertainment as the Beating of a Snuff-Box.

BUT however I have rambled in this libertine Manner of Writing by way of Essay, I now sat down with an Intention to represent to my Readers, how pernicious, how sudden, and how fatal Surprizes of Passion are to the Mind of Man; and that in the most intimate Commerces of Life they are most liable to arise, even in our most sedate and indolent Hours. Occurrences of this Kind have had very terrible Effects; and when one reflects upon them, we cannot but tremble to consider what we are capable of being wrought up to against all the Ties of Nature, Love, Honour, Reason, and Religion, though the Man who breaks through them all, had, an Hour before he did so, a lively and vir-tuons Sense of their Dictates. When unhappy Catastrophe's make up Part of the History of Princes and Persons who act in high Spheres, or are represented in the moving Language, and well wrought Scenes of Tragedians, they do not fail of striking us with Terror; but then they affect us only in a transient Manner, and pass through our Imaginations, as Incidents in which our Fortunes are too humble to be concerned, or which Writers form for the Ostentation of their own Force; or, at most, as Things fit rather to exercise the Powers of our Minds, than to create new Habits in them. Instead of such Passages, I was thinking it would be of great Use (if any Body could hit it) to lay before the World such Adventures as befal Persons not exalted above the common Level. This, methought, would better prevail upon the ordinary Race of Men, who are so prepossessed with outward Appearances, that they mistake Fortune for Nature, and believe nothing can relate to them that does not happen to such as live and look like themselves.

THE unhappy End of a Gentleman, whose Story an Acquaintance of mine was just now telling me, would be very proper for this End, if it could be related with all the Circumstances as I heard it this Evening; for it touched me so much, that I cannot forbear entring upon it.

MR. Eustace, a young Gentleman of a good Estate near Dublin in Ireland, married a Lady of Youth, Beauty, and Modesty, and lived with her in general with much Ease and Tranquillity; but was in his secret Temper impatient of Rebuke: She is apt to fall into little Sallies of Passion, yet as suddenly recalled by her own Reflection on her Fault, and the Consideration of her Husband's Temper. It happened, as he, his Wife, and her Sister, were at Supper together about Two Months ago, that in the Midst of a careless and familiar Conversation, the Sister fel fell into a little Warmth and Contradiction. He, who was one of that Sort of Men who are never unconcerned at what passes before them, fell into an outrageous Passion on the Side of the Sister. The Person about whom they disputed was so near, that they were under no Restraint from running into vain Repetitions of past Heats: On which Occasion all the Aggravations of Anger and Distast boiled up, and were repeated with the Bitterness of exasperated Lovers. The Wife observing her Husband extremely moved, began to turn it off, and rally him for interposing between two People, who from their Infancy had been angry and pleased with each other every half Hour. But it descended deeper into his Thoughts, and they broke up with a sullen Silence. The Wife immediately retired to her Chamber, whither her Husband soon after followed. When they were in Bed, he soon dissembled a Sleep, and she, pleased that his Thoughts were compos'd, fell into a real one. Their Apartment was very distant from the rest of their Family, in a lonely Country-House. He now saw his Opportunity, and with a Dagger he had brought to Bed with him, stabbed his Wife in the Side. She awaked in the highest Terror; but immediately imagined it was a Blow designed for her Husband by Ruffians, began to grasp him, and strive to awake and rouse him to defend himself. He still pretended himself sleeping, and gave her a second Wound.

SHE now drew open the Curtains, and by the Help of Moon-light saw his Hand lifted up to stab her. The Horror disarmed her from further Struggling; and he enraged anew at being discovered, fixed his Poniard in her Bosom. As soon as he believed he had dispatched her, he attempted to escape out of the Window: But she, still alive, called to him not to hurt himself; for she might live. He was so stung with the insupportable Reflection upon her Goodness, and and his own Villany, that he jumped to the Bed, and wounded her all over with as much Rage as if every Blow was provoked by new Aggravations. In this Fury of Mind he fled away. His Wife had still Strength to go to her Sister's Apartment, and give her an Account of this wonderful Tragedy; but died the next Day. Some Weeks after, an Officer of Justice, in attempting to seize the Criminal, fired upon him, as did the Criminal upon the Officer. Both their Balls took Place, and both immediately expired.

— Sapientia prima est
Stultitia caruisse. — Hor.

N° 173. Thursday, May 18. 1710.

Sheer-Lane, May 17.

WHEN I first began to learn to push this last Winter, my Master had a great deal of Work upon his Hands to make me unlearn the Postures and Motions which I had got by having in my younger Years practised Back-Sword, with a little Eye to the single Falchion. Knock down, was the Word in the Civil Wars, and we generally added to this Skill the Knowledge of the Cornish Hug, as well as the Grapple, to play with Hand and Foot. By this Means I was for defending my Head when the French Gentleman was making a full Pass at my Bosom, insomuch, that he told me I was fairly killed Seven Times in one Morning, without having done my Master any other Mischief than one Knock on the Pate. This was a great Misfortune to me; and I believe I may say, without Vanity, I am the first who ever pushed so erroneously; and yet conquered the Prejudice of

Educati-

Education so well, as to make my Passes so clear, and recover Hand and Foot with that Agility, as I do at this Day. The Truth of it is, the first Rudiments of Education are given very indiscreetly by most Parents, as much with Relation to the more important Concern of the Mind, as in the Gestures of the Body. Whatever Children are designed for, and whatever Prospects the Fortune or Interest of their Parents may give them in their Future Lives, they are all promiscuously instructed the same Way; and Horace and Virgil must be thrummed by a Boy as well before he goes to an Apprenticeship, as to the University. This ridiculous Way of treating the Under-aged of this Island has very often raised both my Spleen and Mirrh, but I think never both at once so much as to Day. A good Mother of our Neighbourhood made me a Visit with her Son and Heir, a Lad somewhat above five Foot, and wants but little of the Height and Strength of a good Musqueteer in any Regiment in the Service. Her Business was to desire I would examine him, for he was far gone in a Book, the first Letters of which she often saw in my Papers. The Youth produced it, and I found it was my Friend Horace. It was very easy to turn to the Place the Boy was learning in, which was the Fifth Ode of the first Book, to Pyrrha. I read it over aloud, as well because I am always delighted when I turn to the beautiful Parts of that Author, as also to gain Time for considering a little how to keep up the Mother's Pleasure in her Child, which I thought Barbarity to interrupt. In the first Place I asked him, Who this same Pyrrha was? He answered very readily, She was the Wife of Pyrrhus, one of Alexander's Captains. I lifted up my Hands. The Mother courtesies——Nay, says she,——I knew you would stand in Admirations.——I assure you, continued she, for all he looks so tall, he is but very young. Pray ask him some more, never spare him him. With that I took the Liberty to ask him, What was the Character of this Gentlewoman ? He read the Three first Verses:

Quis multa gracilis te puer in rosa

Perfusus liquidis urget oleribus

Grato, Pyrrha, sub Antro ?

And very gravely told me, she lived at the Sign of the Rose in a Cellar. I took Care to be very much astonished at the Lad's Improvements; but withal advised her, as soon as possible, to take him from School, for he could learn no more there. This very silly Dialogue was a lively Image of the impertinent Method used in breeding Boys without Genius or Spirit, to the reading Things for which their Heads were never framed. But this is the natural Effect of a certain Vanity in the Minds of Parents, who are wonderfully delighted with the Thought of breeding their Children to Accomplishments, which they believe nothing but the Want of the same Care in their own Fathers prevented them from being Masters of. Thus it is, that the Part of Life most fit for Improvement, is generally employed in a Method against the Bent of Nature; and a Lad of such Parts as are fit for an Occupation, where there can be no Calls out of the beaten Paths, is two or Three Years of his Time wholly taken up in knowing how well Ovid's Mistress became such a Dress; how such a Nymph for her Cruelty was changed into such an Animal; and how it is made generous in Aeneas to put Turnus to Death. Gallantries that can no more come within the Occurrences of the Lives of ordinary Men, than they can be relished by their Imaginations. However, still the Humour goes on from one Generation to another; and the Pastry-Cook here in the Lane the other Night told me, He would not yet take away his Son from his Learning, but has resolved, as soon as he had a little Smattering

173. him, man; Sign very but take more evenly need-ding, nized. unity fully their ieve their fters for thod such here two in ch a was ade Gal- Oc- han- ow- ne- e in not but ter- ing

ing in the Greek, to put him Apprentice to a Soap-boiler. These wrong Beginnings determine our Success in the World; and when our Thoughts are originally falsely biased, their Agility and Force do but carry us the further out of our Way in Proportion to our Speed. But we are half Way our Journey when we have got into the right Road. If all our Days were usefully employed, and we did not set out impertinently, we should not have so many grotesque Professors in all the Arts of Life, but every Man would be in a proper and becoming Method of distinguishing or entertaining himself suitably to what Nature designed him. As they go on now, our Parents do not only force us upon what is against our Talents, but our Teachers are also as injudicious in what they put us to learn. I have hardly ever since suffered so much by the Charms of any Beauty, as I did before I had a Sense of Passion, for not apprehending that the Smile of Lalage was what pleased Horace; and I verily believe, the Stripes I suffered about Digito male pertinaci, has given me that irreconcileable Aversion, which I shall carry to my Grave, against Coquets.

AS for the elegant Writer of whom I am talking, his Excellencies are to be observed as they relate to the different Concerns of his Life; and he is always to be looked upon as a Lover, a Courtier, or a Man of Wit. His admirable Odes have numberless Instances of his Merit in each of these Characters. His Epistles and Satires are full of proper Notices for the Conduct of Life in a Court; and what we call good Breeding, most agreeably intermixed with his Morality. His Addresses to the Persons who favoured him are so imimitably engaging, that Augustus complained of him for so seldom writing to him, and asked him, Whether he was afraid Posterity should read their Names together? Now for the Generality of Men to spend much Time

Time in such Writings, is as pleasant a Folly as any he ridicules. Whatever the Crowd of Scholars may pretend, if their Way of Life, or their own Imaginations, do not lead them to a Taste of him, they may read, nay write, Fifty Volumes upon him, and be just as they were when they began. I remember to have heard a great Painter say, There are certain Faces for certain Painters, as well as certain Subjects for certain Poets. This is as true in the Choice of Studies; and no one will ever relish an Author thoroughly well, who would not have been fit Company for that Author had they lived at the same Time. All others are Mechanicks in Learning, and take the Sentiments of Writers like Waiting-Servants, who report what passed at their Master's Table; but do base every Thought and Expression, for want of the Air with which they were uttered.

*Quem mala stultitia, aut quacunq; inficitia veri,
Cæcum agit, insanum Chrysippi porticus, & grec Autumat. — Hor.*

N^o 174. Saturday, May 20. 1710.

From my own Apartment, May 19.

THE learned Scotus, to distinguish the Race of Mankind, gives every Individual of that Species what he calls a Seity, something peculiar to himself, which makes him different from all other Persons in the World. This Particularity renders him either venerable or ridiculous, according as he uses his Talents, which always grow out into Faults, or improve into Virtues. In the Office I have undertaken, you are to observe, That I have hitherto presented only

only the more insignificant and lazy Part of Mankind under the Denomination of dead Men, together with the Degrees towards Non-existence, in which others can neither be said to live or be defunct, but are only Animals meerly dressed up like Men, and differ from each other but as Flies do by a little Colouring or Fluttering of their Wings. Now as our Discourses heretofore have chieffly regarded the Indolent Part of the Species, it remains that we do Justice also upon the impertinently Active and Enterprizing. Such as these I shall take particular Care to place in safe Custody, and have used all possible Diligence to run up my Edifice in Moorfields for that Service.

WE who are adept in Astrology, can impute it to several Causes in the Planets, That this Quarter of our great City is the Region of such Persons as either never had, or have lost, the Use of Reason. It has indeed been Time out of Mind the Reception of Fools as well as Madmen. The Care and Information of the former I assign to other learned Men, who have for that End taken up their Habitation in those Parts; as, among others, to the famous Dr. Trotter, and my ingenious Friend Dr. Langham. These oraculous Proficients are Day and Night employed in deep Searches, for the Direction of such as run astray after their lost Goods. But at present they are more particularly serviceable to their Country, in foretelling the Fate of such as have Chances in the Publick Lottery. Dr. Langham shows a peculiar Generosity on this Occasion, taking only one Half-Crown for a Prediction, Eighteen-Pence of which to be paid out of the Prizes; which Method the Doctor is willing to comply with in Favour of every Adventurer in the whole Lottery. Leaving therefore the whole Generation of such Enquirers to such Literati as I have now mentioned, we are to proceed towards Peopling our House, which we have have erected with the greatest Cost and Care imaginable.

IT is necessary in this Place to premise, That the Superiority and Force of Mind which is born with Men of great Genius; and which, when it falls in with a noble Imagination, is call'd Poetical Fury, does not come under my Consideration; but the Pretence to such an Impulse without natural Warmth, shall be allowed a fit Object of this Charity; and all the Volumes written by such Hands, shall be from Time to Time placed in proper Order upon the Rails of the un-housed Booksellers within the District of the College, (who have long inhabited this Quarter in the same Manner as they are already disposed) soon after their Publication. I promise my self from these Writings my best Opiates for those Patients, whose high Imaginations, and hot Spirits, have waked them into Distraction. Their boiling Tempers are not to be wrought upon by my Gruels and Julips, but must ever be employed, or appear to be so, or their Recovery will be impracticable. I shall therefore make use of such Poets as preserve so constant a Mediocrity, as never to elevate the Mind into Joy, or depress it into Sadness, yet at the same Time keep the Faculties of the Readers in Suspence, tho' they introduce no Idea's of their own. By this Means a disordered Mind, like a broken Limb, will recover its Strength by the sole Benefit of being out of Use, and lying without Motion. But as Reading is not an Entertainment that can take up the full Time of my Patients, I have now in Pension a proportionable Number of Story-Tellers, who are by Turns to walk about the Galleries of the House, and by their Narrations second the Labours of my pretty good Poets. There are among these Story-tellers some that have so earnest Countenances, and weighty Brows, that they will draw a Madman, even when his Fit is just coming on, into a Whisper, and by the Force of Shrugs, Nods, and busy Gestures, make him and amazed so long as that we may have Time to give him his Broth without Danger.

BUT as Fortune has the Possession of Mens Minds, a Physician may cure all the sick People of ordinary Degree in the whole Town, and never come into Reputation. I shall therefore begin with Persons of Condition ; and the first I shall undertake, shall be the Lady Fidget, the general Visitant, and Will Voluble, the fine Talker. These Persons shall be first locked up, for the Peace of all whom the one Visits, and all whom the other talks to.

THE Passion which first touched the Brain of both these Persons, was Envy ; and has had such wondrous Effects, that to this, Lady Fidget owes that she is so courteous ; to this, Will Voluble that she is eloquent. Fidget has a restless Torment in earing of any one's Prosperity, and cannot know any Quiet till she visits her, and is Eye-Witness of something that lessens it. Thus her Life is a continual Search after what does not concern her, and her Companions speak kindly even of the absent and the Unfortunate, to tease her. She is the first that visited Flavia after the Small-ox, and has never seen her since because she is not altered. Call a young Woman handsome in her Company, and she tells you, It is Pity she has no Fortune: Say she is rich, and she is as sorry that she is silly. With all this ill Nature, Fidget herself young, rich, and handsome ; but loses the Pleasure of all those Qualities, because she has them in common with others.

TO make up her Misery, she is well-bred, she earns Commendations till she is ready to faint for Want of venting her self in Contradictions. This Hardness is not expressed by the Voice ; but is uttered in the Eyes and Features : It's first Symp-athum is upon beholding an agreeable Object, a udden Approbation immediately checked with a like.

THIS

THIS Lady I shall take the Liberty to conduct into a Bed of Straw and Darkness, and have some Hopes, that after long Absence from the Light, the Pleasure of seeing at all may reconcile her to what she shall see, tho' it proves to be never so agreeable.

MY physical Remarks on the Distraction of Envy in other Persons, and particularly in Wolvile, is interrupted by a Visit from Mr. Kidney with Advices which will bring Matter of new Disturbance to many possessed with this Sort of Disorder, which I shall publish to bring out the Symptoms more kindly, and lay the Distemper more open to my View.

St. James's Coffee-House, May 19.

THIS Evening a Mail from Holland brought the following Advices.

FROM the Camp before Douay, May 26. N.S. On the 23d the French assembled their Army and encamped with their Right near Bouchain and their Left near Crevecoeur. Upon this Motion of the Enemy, the Duke of Marlborough and Prince Eugene made a Movement with their Army on the 24th, and encamped from Arleux to Vitry and Isez Esquerchien, where they are so advantagiously posted, that they not only cover the Siege, secure our Convoys of Provisions Forage, and Ammunition, from Lille and Tournoy, and the Canals and Dikes we have made to turn the Water of the Scarp and La Cense to Bouchain; but are in a Readiness, by marching from the Right, to possess themselves of the Field of Battel marked out betwixt Vitry and Montigny, or from the Left to gain the Lines of Circumvallation betwixt Fierin and Decby: So that whatever Way the Enemy shall approach to attack us, Whether by the Plains of Lens, or by Bouchain and Valenciennes, we have but a very small Movement to make, to possess ourselves of the

the Ground on which it will be most advantageous to receive them. The Enemy marched this Morning from their Left, and are encamped with their Right at Oisy, and their Left towards Arras, and, according to our Advices, will pass the Scarp to Morrow, and enter on the Plains of Lens, the several Regiments of Horse, the German and Liege Troops, which are destined to compose Part of their Army, have not yet joined them. If they pass the Scarp, we shall do the like at the same Time, to possess our selves with all possible Advantage of the Field of Battel: But if they continue where they are, we shall not remove, because in our present Station we sufficiently cover from all Insults both our Siege and Convoys.

MONSIEUR Villars cannot yet go without Crutches, and 'tis believed will have much Difficulty to ride. He and the Duke of Berwick are to command the French Army, the rest of the Marshals being only to assist in Council.

LAST Night we entirely perfected four Bridges over the Avant Fosse at both Attacks; and our Saps are so far advanced, that in three or four Days Batteries will be raised on the Glacis, to batter in Breach both the Outworks and Ramparts of the Town.

LETTERS from the Hague of the 27th,
N. S. say, That the Deputies of the States of Holland, who set out for Gertruydenberg on the 23d, to renew the Conferences with the French Ministers, returned on the 26th, and had communicated to the States-General the new Overtures that were made on the Part of France, which it is believed, if they are in Earnest, may produce a general Treaty.

N° 175. Tuesday, May 23. 1910.

From my own Apartment, May 22.

IN the Distribution of the Apartments in the New Bedlam, proper Regard is had to the different Sexes, and the Lodgings accommodated accordingly. Among other Necessaries, as I have thought fit to appoint Story-Tellers to sooth the Men, so I have allowed Tale-Bearers to indulge the Intervals of my Female Patients. But before I enter upon disposing of the Main of the great Body that wants my Assistance, it is necessary to consider the humane Race abstracted from all other Distinctions and Considerations except that of Sex. This will lead us to a nearer View of their Excellencies and Imperfections, which are to be accounted the one or the other, as they are suitable to the Design for which the Persons so defective or accomplished came into the World.

TO make his Enquiry aright, we must speak of the Life of People of Condition, and the proportionable Applications to those below them will be easily made, so as to value the whole Species by the same Rule. We will begin with the Woman, and behold her as a Virgin in her Father's House. This State of her Life is infinitely more delightful than that of her Brother at the same Age. While she is entertained with learning melodious Airs at her Spinet, is led round a Room in the most complaisant Manner to a Fiddle, or is entertained with Applauses of her Beauty and Perfection in the ordinary Conversation she meets with; the young Man is under the Dictates of a rigid Schoolmaster or Instructor, contradicted in every Word he speaks, and curbed in all the Inclinations he discovers. Mrs. Elizabeth is the Object of Desire and Admiration, looked upon with Delight, courted with all the Powers of Eloquence and Address, approached with a certain Worship, and defended with a certain Loyalty. This is her Case as to the World: In her Domestick Character, she is the Companion, the Friend, and Confident of her Mother, and the Object of a Pleasure, something like the Love between Angels, to her Father. Her Youth, her Beauty, her Air, are by him looked upon with an ineffable Transport beyond any other Joy in this Life, with as much Purity as can be met with in the next.

HER Brother William, at the same Year, is but in the Rudiments of those Acquisitions which must gain him Esteem in the World. His Heart beats for Applause among Men, yet he is fearful of every Step towards it. If he proposes to himself to make a Figure in the World, his Youth is damped with a Prospect of Difficulties, Dangers, and Dishonours; and an Opposition in all generous Attempts, whether they regard his Love or his Ambition.

IN the next Stage of Life she has little else to do, but (what she is accomplished for by the mere Gifts of Nature) to appear lovely and agreeable to her Husband, tender to her Children, and affable to her Servants: But a Man, when he enters into this Way, is but in the first Scene, far from the Accomplishment of his Designs. He is now in all Things to act for others as well as himself. He is to have Industry and Frugality in his private Affairs, and Integrity and Address in Publick: To these Qualities he must add a Courage and Resolution to support his other Abilities, lest he be interrupted in the Prosecution of his just Endeavours, in which the Honour and Interest of his Posterity are as much concerned as his own personal Welfare.

THIS little Sketch may in some Measure give an Idea of the different Parts which the Sexes have to act, and the advantagous as well as inconvenient Terms on which they are to enter upon their several Parts of Life. This may also be some Rule to us in the Examination of their Conduct. In short, I shall take it for a Maxim, That a Woman who resigns the Purpose of being pleasing, and the Man who gives up the Thought of being wise, do equally quit their Claim to the true Causes of Living; and are to be allowed the Dier and Discipline of my charitable Structure to reduce them to Reason.

ON the other Side, the Woman who hopes to please by Methods which should make her odious, and the Man who would be thought wise by a Behaviour that renders him ridiculous, are to be taken into Custody for their false Industry, as justly as they ought for their Negligence.

N. B. Mr. Bickerstaff is taken extremely ill with the Tooth-Ach, and cannot proceed in this Discourse.

Nullum numen abest si sit prudentia. Juy.

No 176. Thursday May 25. 1710.

From my own Apartment, May 24.

THIS Evening, after a little Ease from the raging Pain caused by so small an Organ as an aking Tooth, under which I have behaved my self so ill as to have broke two Pipes and my Spectacles, I began to reflect with Admiration on those heroick Spirits, which in the Conduct of their Lives seem to live so much above the Condition of our Mankind, as not only under the Agonies of Pain to forbear any intemperate Word or Gesture, but also in their general and ordinary Behaviour, to resist the Impulses of their very Blood and Constitution. This Watch over a Man's self, and the Command of his Temper, I take to be the greatest of humane Perfections, and is the Effect of a strong and resolute Mind. It is not only the most expedient Practice for carrying on our own Designs, but is also very deservedly the most amiable Quality in the Sight of others. It is a winning Deference to Mankind, which creates an immediate Imitation of it self where-ever it appears, and prevails upon all (who have to do with a Person endued with it) either thro' Shame or Emulation. I do not know how to express this Habit of Mind, except you will let me call it Equanimity. It is a Virtue which is necessary at every Hour, in every Place, and in all Conversations, and is the Effect of a regular and exact Prudence. He that will look back upon all the Acquaintances he has had in his whole Life, will find, he has seen more Men capable of the greatest Employments and Performances, than such as could in the general Bent of their Carriage act otherwise than according to their own Complexion and Humour. But the Indulgence of our selves in wholly giving Way to our natural Propensity, is so unjust and improper a Licence, that when People take it up, there is very little Difference, with Relation to their Friends and Families, whether they are good or ill-natured Men: For he that errs by being wrought upon by what we call the Sweetness of his Temper, is as guilty as he that offends through the Perverseness of it.

IT is not therefore to be regarded what Men are in Themselves, but what they are in their Actions. Eucrates is the best-natured of all Men; but that natural Softness has Effects quite contrary to it self, and for Want of due Bounds to his Benevolence, while he has a Will to be a Friend to all, he has the Power of being such to none. His constant Inclination to please, makes him never fail of doing so; though (without being capable of Falshood) he is a Friend only to those who are present; for the same Humour which makes him the best Companion, renders him the worst Correspondent. It is a melancholy Thing to consider, that the most engaging Sort of Men in Conversation are frequently the most tyrannical in Power, and the least to be depended upon in Friendship. It is certain this is not to be imputed to their own Disposition; but he that is to be led by others, has only good Luck if he is not the worst, though in himself the best Man living. For this Reason, we are no more wholly to indulge our good, than our ill Dispositions. I remember a crafty old Cit, one Day speaking of a well-natured young Fellow who set up with a good Stock in Lombard street, I will, says he, lay no more Money in his Hands, for he never denied me any Thing. This was a very base, but with him a prudential Reason for breaking off Commerce: And this Acquaintance of mine carried this Way of judging so far, that he has often told me, he never cared to deal with a Man he liked, for that our Affections must never enter into our Business.

WHEN we look round us in this populous City, and consider how Credit and Esteem are lodged, you find Men have a great Share of the former, without the least Portion of the latter. He who knows himself for a Beast of Prey, looks upon others in the same Light, and we are so apt to judge of others by our selves, that the Man who has no Mercy, is as careful as possible never to want it. Hence it is, that in many Instances Men gain Credit by the very contrary Methods by which they do Esteem; for wary Traders Traders think every Affection of the Mind a Key to their Cash.

BUT what led me into this Discourse, was my Impatience of Pain; and I have, to my great Disgrace, seen an Instance of the contrary Carriages in so high a Degree, that I am out of Countenance that I ever read Seneca. When I look upon the Conduct of others in such Occurrences, as well as behold their Equanimit in the general Tenour of their Life; it very much abates the Self-love, which is seldom well-governed by any Sort of Men, and least of all by us Authors.

THE Fortitude of a Man who brings his Will to the Obedience of his Reason, is conspicuous, and carries with it a Dignity in the lowest State imaginable. Poor Martius, who now lies languishing in the most violent Fever, discovers in the faintest Moments of his Distemper such a Greatness of Mind, that a perfect Stranger who should now behold him, would indeed see an Obj^t of Pity, but at the same Time that it was lately an Obj^t of Veneration. His gallant Spirit resigns, but resigns with an Air that speaks a Resolution which could yield to nothing but Fate it self. This is Conquest in the Philosophick Sense; but the Empire over our selves is, methinks, no less laudable in common Life, where the whole Tenour of a Man's Carriage is in Subservie^{nce} to his own Reason, and Conformity both to the good Sense and Inclination of other Men.

ARISTÆUS is in my Opinion a perfect Master of himself in all Circumstances. He has all the Spirit that Man can haye, and yet is as regular in his Behaviour as a meer Machine. He is sensible of every Passion, but ruffled by none. In Conversation, he frequently seems to be less knowing, to be more obliging, and chuses to be on a Level with others, rather than oppres with the Superiority of his Genius. In Friendship, he is kind without Profession. In Business, expeditious tious without Ostentation. With the greatest Softness and Benevolence imaginable, he is impartial in Spight of all Importunity, even that of his own Good Nature. He is ever clear in his Judgment; but in Complaisance to his Company speaks with Doubt, and never shows Confidence in Argument, but to support the Sense of another. Were such an Equality of Mind the general Endeavour of all Men, how sweet would be the Pleasures of Conversation? He that is loud would then understand, that we ought to call a Constable, and know, that spoiling Good Company, is the most heinous Way of breaking the Peace. We should then be relieved from those Zealots in Society, who take upon them to be angry for all the Company, and quarrel with the Waiters to shew they have no Respect for any Body else in the Room. To be in a Rage before you, is in a Kind being angry with you. You may as well stand naked before Company, as to use such Familiarities; and to be careless of what you say, is the most clownish Way of being undressed.

Sheer-Lane, May 24.

WHEN I came Home this Evening, I found the following Letters; and because I think one a very good Answer to the other, as well as that it is the Affair of a young Lady, it must be immediately dismissed.

S I R,

I HAVE a good Fortune, partly paternal, and partly acquired. My younger Years I spent in Business but Age coming on, and having no more Children than one Daughter, I resolved to be a Slave no longer: And accordingly I have disposed of my Effects, placed my Money in the Funds, bought a pretty Seat in a pleasant Country, am making a Garden, and have set up

Pack of little Beagles. I live in the Midst of a good many well-bred Neighbours, and several well tempered Clergymen. Against a rainy Day I have a little Library; and against the Gout in my Stomach, a little good Claret. With all this I am the miserablest Man in the World; not that I've lost the Relish of any of these Pleasures, but am distracted with such a Multiplicity of entertaining Objects, that I am lost in the Variety. I am in such a Hurry of Idleness, that I do not know with what Diversion to begin. Therefore, Sir, I must beg the Favour of you, when your more weighty Affairs will permit, to put me in some Method of doing Nothing; for I find Pliny makes a great Difference betwixt nihil agere and agere nihil; and I fancy, if you would explain him, you would do a very great Kindness to many in Great Britain, as well as to

Your humble Servant,

J. B.

SIR,

THE Enclosed is written by my Father in one of his pleasant Humours. He bids me seal it up, and send you a Word or two from my self, which he won't desire to see till he bears of it from you. Desire him before he begins his Method of doing Nothing, to have Nothing to do; that is to say, let him marry off his Daughter.

I am,

Your gentle Reader,

S. B.

—Male si palpere, recalcitrat undique tutus. Hor.

N° 177.

Saturday, May 27, 1710.

Sheer-Lane, May 26.

THE ingenious Mr. Pinkethman, the Comedian, has lately left here a Paper or Ticket, to which is affixed a small Silver Medal, which is to entitle the Bearer to see one and twenty Plays at his Theatre for a Guinea. Greenwich is the Place where, it seems, he has erected his House; and his Time of Action is to be so contrived, that it is to fall in with going and returning with the Tide. Besides that, the Bearer of this Ticket may carry down with him a particular Set of Company to the Play, striking off for each Person so introduced one of his twenty-one Times of Admittance. In this Warrant of his, he has made me an high Compliment in a facetious Distich, by Way of Dedication of his Endeavours, and desires I would recommend them to the World. I must needs say, I have not for some Time seen a properer Choice than he has made of a Patron: Who more fit to publish his Work than a Novelist? Who to recommend it than a Censor? This Honour done me, has made me turn my Thoughts upon the Nature of Dedications in general, and the Abuse of that Custom, as well by a long Practice of my Predecessors, as the continued Folly of my contempory Authors.

IN ancient Times, it was the Custom to address their Works to some eminent for their Merit to Mankind, or particular Patronage of the Writers themselves, or Knowledge in the Matter of which they treated. Under these Regards, it was a memorable Honour to both Parties, and a very agreeable Record of their Commerce with each other. These Applications were never stuffed with impertinent Praises, but were the native Product of their Esteem, which was implicitly received, or generally known to be due to the Patron of the Work: But vain Flourishes came into the World, with other barbarous Embellishments; and the Enumeration of Titles, and great Actions, in the Patrons themselves, or their Sires, are as foreign to the Matter in Hand as the Ornaments are in a Gotbik Building. This is Clapping together Persons which have no Manner of Alliance, and can for that Reason have no other Effect than making both Parties justly ridiculous. What Pretence is there in Nature for me to write to a great Man, and tell him, My Lord, because your Grace is a Duke, your Grace's Father before you was an Earl, his Lordship's Father was a Baron, and his Lordship's Father both a wise and a rich Man; I Isaac Bickerstaff am obliged, and could not possibly forbear addressing to you the following Treatise. Tho' this is the plain Exposition of all I could possibly say to him with a good Conscience, yet the silly Custom has so universally prevailed, that my Lord Duke and I must necessarily be particular Friends from this Time forward, or else I have just Rome for being disengaged, and may turn my Panegyrick into a Libel. But to carry this Affair still more Home; were it granted that Praises in Dedications were proper Topicks, What is it that gives a Man Authority to commend, or what makes it a Favour to me that he does commend me? It is certain, that there is no Praise valuable but from the Praise-Worthy. Were it otherwise, Blame might be as much in the same Hands. Were the Good and Evil of Fame laid upon a Level among Mankind, the Judge on the Bench, and the Criminal at the Bar, would differ only in their Stations;

tions; and if one's Word is to pass as much as the other's, their Reputation would be much alike to the Jury. Pliny speaking of the Death of Martial, expresses himself with great Gratitude to him for the Honours done him in the Writings of that Author; but he begins it with an Account of his Character, which only made the Applause valuable. He indeed in the same Epistle says, It is a Sign we have left off doing Things which deserve Praise, when we think Commendation impertinent. This is asserted with a just Regard to the Persons whose good Opinion we wish for; otherwise Reputation would be valued according to the Number of Voices a Man has for it, which are not always to be insured on the more virtuous Side. But however we pretend to model these nice Affairs, true Glory will never attend any Thing but Truth; and there is something so peculiar in it, that the very self-same Action done by different Men cannot merit the same Degree of Applause. The Roman, who was surprized in the Enemy's Camp before he had accomplished his Design, and thrust his bare Arm into a flaming Pile, telling the General, There were many as determined as himself, who (against Sense of Danger) had conspired his Death, wrought in the very Enemy an Admiration of his Fortitude, and a Dismission with Applause. But the condemned Slave who represented him in the Theatre, and consumed his Arm in the same Manner, with the same Resolution, did not raise in the Spectators a great Idea of his Virtue, but of him whom he imitated in an Action no Way differing from that of the real Scævola, but in the Motive to it.

THUS true Glory is inseparable from true Merit, and whatever you call Men, they are no more than what they are in themselves; but a Romantick Sense has crept into the Minds of the Generality, who will ever mistake Words and Appearances for Persons and Things.

THE

THE Simplicity of the Ancients was as conspicuous in the Address of their Writings, as in any other Monuments they have left behind them. Cæsar and Augustus were much more high Words of Respect, when added to Occasions fit for their Characters to appear in, than any Appellations which have ever been since thought of. The latter of these great Men had a very pleasant Way of dealing with Applications of this Kind. When he received Pieces of Poetry which he thought had Worth in them, he rewarded the Writer; but where he thought them empty, he generally returned the Compliment made him with some Verses of his own.

THIS latter Method I have at present Occasion to imitate. A Female Author has dedicated a Piece to me, wherein she would make my Name (as she has others) the Introduction of whatever is to follow in her Book; and has spoke some panegyrical Things, which I know not how to return, for Want of better Acquaintance with the Lady, and consequently being out of a Capacity of giving her Praise or Blame. All therefore that is left for me, according to the foregoing Rules, is to lay the Picture of a good and evil Woman before her Eyes, which are but meer Words if they do not concern her. Now you are to observe, the Way in a Dedication is to make all the rest of the World as little like the Person we address to as possible, according to the following Epistle:

MADAM,

But, M—

—Memorabile nullum, Faminea in poena est.—

N^o 178. Tuesday, May 30. 1710.

Sheer-Lane, May 29.

WHEN we look into the delightful History of the most ingenious Don Quixot of the Mancha, and consider the Exercises and Manner of Life of that renowned Gentleman, we cannot but admire the exquisite Genius and discerning Spirit of Michael Cervantes, who has not only painted his Adventurer with great Mastery in the conspicuous Parts of his Story, which relate to Love and Honour, but also intimated in his ordinary Life, Oeconomy and Furniture, the infallible Symptons he gave of his growing Phrensy, before he declared himself a Knight-Errant. His Hall was furnished with old Launces, Halbards, and Morrions; his Food, Lentils; his Dreis, amorous. He slept moderately, rose early, and spent his Time in Hunting. When by Watchfulness and Exercise he was thus qualified for the Hardships of his intended Peregrinations, he had nothing more to do but to fall hard to Study; and before he should apply himself to the practical Part, get into the Method of making Love and War by reading Books of Knighthood. As for raising tender Passion in him, Cervantes reports, that he was wonderfully delighted with a smooth intricate Sentence; and when they listned at his Study-Door, they could frequently hear him read aloud, The Reason of the Unreasonableness, which against my Reason is wrought, doth so weaken my Reason, as with all Reason I do justly complain on your Beauty. Again, he would pause till he came to another charming Sentence, and with the most pleasing Accent imaginable be loud at a new Paragraph: The high Heavens, which, with your Divinity, do fortify you divinely with the Stars,

Stars,

Stars, make you Deservers of the Deserts that your Greatness deserves. With these and other such Passages (says my Author) the poor Gentleman grew distracted, and was breaking his Brains Day and Night to understand and unravel their Sense.

AS much as the Case of this distempered Knight is received by all the Readers of his History as the most incurable and ridiculous of all Phrenics, it is very certain we have Crowds among us far gone in as visible a Madness as his, though they are not observed to be in that Condition. As great and useful Discoveries are sometimes made by accidental and small Beginnings, I came to the Knowledge of the most Epidemick Ill of this Sort, by falling into a Coffee-house where I saw my Friend the Upholster, whose Crack towards Politicks I have heretofore mentioned. This Touch in the Brain of the British Subject, is as certainly owing to the reading News-Papers, as that of the Spanish Worthy above-mentioned to the reading Works of Chivalry. My Contemporaries the Novelists have, for the better spinning out Paragraphs, and working down to the End of their Columns, a most happy Art in saying and unsaying, giving Hints of Intelligence, and Interpretations of indifferent Actions, to the great Disturbance of the Brains of ordinary Readers. This Way of going on in the Words, and making no Progress in the Sense, is more particularly the Excellency of my most ingenious and renowned Fellow-Labourer, the Post-Man; and it is to this Talent in him that I impute the Loss of my Upholster's Intellects. That unfortunate Trademan has for Years past been the chief Orator in ragged Assemblies, and the Reader in Alley Coffee-houses. He was Yesterday surrounded by an Audience of that Sort, among whom I sat unobserved through the Favour of a Cloud of Tobacco, and saw him with the Post-Man in his Hand, Hand, and all the other Papers safe under his Elbow. He was intermixing Remarks, and reading the Paris Article of May 30. which says, That it is given out that an Express arrived this Day with Advice, that the Armies were so near in the Plain of Lens, that they cannonaded each other. (Ay, ay, here we shall have Sport) And that it was bigbly probable the next Express would bring us an Account of an Engagement. (They are welcome as soon as they please.) Though some others say, that the same will be put off till the 2d or 3d of June, because the Marshal Villars expects some further Reinforcements from Germany, and other Parts before that Time. What-a-Pox does he put it off for? Dbes he think our Horse is not marching up at the same Time? But let us see what he lays further. They hope that Monsieur Albergotti, being encouraged by the Presence of so great an Army, will make an extraordinary Defence. Why then I find, Albergotti is one of those that love to have a great many on their Side. Nay, I'll say that for this Paper, he makes the most natural Inferences of any of them all. The Elector of Bavaria being uneasy to be without any Command, has desired Leave to come to Court to communicate a certain Project to his Majesty. — Whatever it be, it is said, that Prince is suddenly expotted, and then we shall have a more certain Account of his Project, if this Report has any Foundation. Nay, this Paper never imposes upon us, he goes upon sure Grounds; for he won't be positive the Elector has a Project, or that he will come, or if he does come at all; for he doubts, you see, whether the Report has any Foundation.

WHAT makes this the more lamentable, is, that this Way of Writing falls in with the Imagination of the cooler and duller Part of her Majesty's Subjects. The being kept up with one Line contradicting another, and the whole, after many Sentences of Conjecture, vanishing in a Doubt whether there is any Thing at all in what the Person has been reading, puts an ordinary rary Head into a Vertigo, which his natural Dulness would have secured him from. Next to the Labours of the Post-Man, the Upholster took from under his Elbow honest Icabod Dawks's Letter, and there, among other Speculations, the Historian takes upon him to say, That it is discoursed that there will be a Battle in Flanders before the Armies separate, and many will have it to be to Morrow, the great Battel of Ramelies being fought on a Whitsunday. A Gentleman who was a Wag in this Company laughed at the Expression, and said, by Mr. Dawks's Fatour, I warrant ye, if we meet them on Whitsunday or Monday we shall not stand upon the Day with them, whether it be before or after the Holidays. An Admirer of this Gentleman stood up, and told a Neighbour at a distant Table the Conceit, at which indeed we were all very merry. These Reflections in the Writers of the Transactions of the Times, seize the Noddles of such as were not born to have Thoughts of their own, and consequently lay a Weight upon every Thing which they read in Print. But Mr. Dawks concluded his Paper with a courteous Sentence, which was very well taken and applauded by the whole Company. We wish, says he, all our Customers a merry Whitsontide, and many of them. Honest Icabod is as extraordinary a Man as any of our Fraternity, and as particular. His Style is a Dialect between the Familiarity of Talking and Writing, and his Letter such as you cannot distinguish whether Print or Manuscript, which gives us a Refreshment of the Idea from what has been told us from the Press by others. This wishing a good Tide had its Effect upon us, and he was commended for his Salutation, as shewing as well the Capacity of a Bell-man as an Historian. My distempered old Acquaintance read in the next Place the Account of the Affairs abroad in the Courant; but the Master was told so distinctly, that these Wanderers ers thought there was no News in it; this Paper differing from the rest as an History from a Romance. The Tautology, the Contradictions, the Doubts, and Wants of Confirmations, are what keep up imaginary Entertainments in empty Heads, and produce Neglect of their own Affairs, Poverty and Bankruptcy, in many of the Shop-Statesman; but turn the Imaginations of those of a little higher Orb into Deliriums of Dissatisfaction, which is seen in a continual Fret upon all that touches their Brains, but more particularly upon any Advantage obtained by their Country, where they are considered as Lunatics, and therefore tolerated in their Raving.

WHAT I am now warning the People of, is, That the News-Papers of this Island are as pernicious to weak Heads in England, as ever Books of Chivalry to Spain; and therefore shall do all that in me lies, with the utmost Care and Vigilance imaginable, to prevent these growing Evils. A flaming Instance of this Malady appeared in my old Acquaintance at this Time, who after he had done reading all his Papers, ended with a thoughtful Air, If we should have a Peace, we should then know for certain whether it was the King of Sweden that lately came to Dunkirk. I whispered him, and desired him to step aside a little with me. When I had Opportunity, I decoyed him into a Coach, in order for his more easy Conveyance to Moorfields. The Man went very quietly with me; and by that Time he had brought the Swede from the Defeat by the Czar to the Borysthenes, we were passing by Will's Coffee-house, where the Man of the House beckon'd to us. We made a full Stop, and could hear from above a very loud Voice swearing, with some Expressions towards Treason; 'That the Subject in France was as free as in England. His Distemper would not let him reflect, that his own Discourse was an Argument of the contrary, trary. They told him, One would speak with him below. He came immediately to our Coach-Side. I whispered him, that I had an Order to carry him to the Bastile. He immediately obey'd with great Resignation: For to this Sort of Lunatick, whose Brain is touched for the French, the Name of a Gaol in that Kingdom has a more agreeable Sound than that of a Paternal Seat in this their own Country. It happened a little unluckily bringing these Lunaticks together, for they immediately fell into a Debate concerning the Greatness of their respective Monarchs; one for the King of Sweden, the other for the Grand Monarch of France. This Gentleman from Wills is now next door to the Upholster, safe in his Apartment in my Bedlam, with proper Medicaments, and the Mercure Gallant to sooth his Imagination that he is actually in France. If therefore he should escape to Covent-Garden again, all Persons are desired to lay hold of him, and deliver him to Mr. Morphew, my Overseer. At the same Time, I desire all true Subjects to forbear Discourse with him, any otherwise than when he begins to fight a Battel for France, to say, Sir, I hope to see you in England.

— Ob! quis me gelidus sub montibus Hemi-Sifas, & ingenti temorum protegat umbra?

From my own Apartment, May 31.

In this parched Season, next to the Pleasure of going into the Country, is that of hearing from it, and partaking the Joys of it in Description, as in the following Letter:

SIR,

SIR,

I BELIEVE you will forgive me, though I write to you a very long Epistle, since it relates to the Satisfaction of a Country-Life, which I know you would lead, if you could. In the first Place I must confess to you, That I am one of the most luxurious Men living; and as I am such, I take Care to make my Pleasures lasting, by following none but such as are innocent and refined, as well as in some Measure, improving. You have in your Labours been so much concerned to represent the Actions and Passions of Mankind, that the whole vegetable World has almost escaped your Observation: But sure there are Gratifications to be drawn from thence, which deserve to be recommended. For your better Information, I wish you could visit your old Friend in Cornwall. You would be pleased to see the many Alterations I have made about my House, and how much I have improved my Estate without raising the Rents of it.

AS the Winter ingrosses with us near a double Portion of the Year, (the three delightful Vicissitudes being crowded almost within the Space of six Months) there is nothing upon which I have bestowed so much Study and Expence, as in contriving Means to soften the Severity of it, and, if possible, to establish twelve cheerful Months about my Habitation. In order to this, the Charges I have been at in building and furnishing a Green-house, will, perhaps, be thought somewhat extravagant by a great many Gentlemen whose Revenues exceed mine. But when I consider, that all Men of any Life and Spirit have their Inclinations to gratify, and when I compute the Sums laid out by the Generality of the Men of Pleasure (in the Number of which I always rank my self) in riotous Eating and Drinking, in Equipage and Apparel, upon Wenching, Gaming, Racing and Hunting; I find upon the Balance, that the indulging of my Humour comes at a reasonable Rate.

SINCE I communicate to you all Incidents serious and trifling, even to the Death of a Butterfly, that fall out within the Compass of my little Empire, you will not, I hope, be ill pleased with the Draught I now send you of my little Winter Paradise, and with an Account of my Way of amusing my self and others in it.

THE younger Pliny, you know, writes a long Letter to his Friend Gallus, in which he gives him a very particular Plan of the Situation, the Conveniences, and the Agreeableness of his Villa. In my last, you may remember, I promised you something of this Kind. Had Pliny lived in a Northern Climate, I doubt not but we should have found a very compleat Orangery amongst his Epistles; and I, probably, should have copied his Model, instead of Building after my own Fancy, and you had been referred to him for the History of my late Exploits in Architecture: By which Means my Performances would have made a better Figure, at least in Writing, than they are like to make at present.

THE Area of my Green-house is a hundred Paces long, fifty broad, and the Roof thirty Foot high. The Wall toward the North is of solid Stone. On the South Side, and at both the Ends, the Stone-work rises but three Foot from the Ground, excepting the Pilasters, placed at convenient Distances to strengthen and beautify the Building. The intermediate Spaces are filled up with large Sashes of the strongest and most transparent Glass. The middle Sash, which is wider than any of the other, serves for the Entrance, to which you mount by six easy Steps, and descend on the Inside by as many. This opens and shuts with greater Ease, keeps the Wind out better, and is at the same Time more uniform than Folding-Doors.

IN the Middle of the Roof there runs a Cieling thirty Foot broad from one End to the other. This is enlivened by a masterly Pencil, with all the Variety of Rural Scenes and Prospects, which he has peopled, with the whole Tribe of Silvan Deities. Their Characters and their Stories are so well expressed, that the Whole seems a Collection of all the most beautiful Fables of the ancient Poets translated into Colours. The remaining Spaces of the Roof, ten Foot on each Side of the Cieling, are of the clearest Glass, to let in the Sky and Clouds Clouds from above. The Building points full East and West, so that I enjoy the Sun while he is above the Horizon. His Rays are improved through the Glass, and I receive through it what is to desirable in a Winter-Sky, without the coarse Allay of the Season, which is a kind of sifting or straining the Weather. My Greens and Flowers are as sensible as I am of this Benefit: They flourish and look cheerful as in the Spring; while their Fellow-Creatures abroad are starved to Death. I must add, that a moderate Expence of Fire, over and above the Contributions I receive from the Sun, serves to keep this large Room in a due Temperature; it being sheltered from the cold Winds by a Hill on the North, and a Wood on the East.

THE Shell, you see, is both agreeable and convenient; and now you shall judge, whether I have laid out the Floor to Advantage. There goes thro' the whole Length of it a spacious Walk of the finest Gravel, made to bind and unite so firmly, that it seems one continued Stone; with this Advantage, that it is easier to the Foot, and better for walking, than if it were what it seems to be. At each End of the Walk, on the one and on the other Side of it lies a square Plot of Grass of the finest Turf, and brightest Verdure. What Ground remains on both Sides, between these little smooth Fields of Green, is flagged with large Quarries of white Marble, where the blue Veins trace out such a Variety of irregular Windings through the clear Surface, that these bright Plains seem full of Rivulets and streaming Meanders. This to my Eye, that delights in Simplicity, is inexpressibly more beautiful, than the chequered Floors which are so generally admired by others. Upon the Right and upon the Left, along the Gravel Walk, I have ranged interchangeably the Bay, the Myrtle, the Orange, and the Lemon-Trees, intermixed with painted Hollies, Silver Firs, and Pyramids of Yew; all so disposed, that every Tree receives an additional Beauty from its Situation; besides the Harmony that rises from the Disposition of the Whole, no shade cuts too strongly, or breaks in harshly upon the other;

ther; but the Eye is cheared with a mild rather than gorgeous Diversity of Greens.

THE Borders of the four Grass-Plots are garnished with Pots of Flowers: These Delicacies of Nature re-create two Senses at once, and leave such delightful and gentle Impressions upon the Brain, that I cannot help thinking them of equal Force with the softest Airs of Musick, toward the smoothing of our Tempers. In the Center of every Plot is a Statue. The Figures I have made Choice of are a Venus, an Adonis, a Diana, and an Apollo; such excellent Copies, as to raise the same Delight as we should draw from the Sight of the ancient Originals.

THE North Wall would have been but a tiresome Waste to the Eye, if I had not diversified it with the most lively Ornaments, suitable to the Place. To this Intent, I have been at the Expence to lead over Arches from a neighbouring Hill a plentiful Store of Spring-Water, which a beautiful Naiad, placed as high as is possible in the Center of the Wall, pours out from an Urn. This, by a Fall of above twenty Foot, makes a most delightful Cascade into a Basin, that opens wide within the Marble Floor on that Side. At a reasonable Distance, on either Hand of the Cascade, the Wall is hollowed into two spreading Scallops, each of which receives a Couch of green Velvet, and forms at the same Time a Canopy over them. Next to them come two large Aviaries, which are likewise let into the Stone. These are succeeded by two Grotto's, set off with all the pleasing Rudeness of Shells and Moss, and cragged Stones, imitating in Miniature Rocks and Precipices, the most dreadful and gigantick Works of Nature. After the Grotto's, you have two Niches; the one inhabited by Ceres, with her Sickle and Sheaf of Wheat; and the other by Pomona, who, with a Countenance full of good Cheer, pours a bounteous Autumn of Fruits out of her Horn. Last of all come two Colonies of Bees, whose Stations lying East and West, the one is saluted by the rising, the other by the setting Sun. These, all of them being placed at proportioned Intervals, furnish out the whole Length of the Wall; and the Spaces that lie between are painted in Fresco, by the same Hand that has enriched my Cieling.

and

NOW, Sir, you see my whole Contrivance to elude the Rigour of the Year, to bring a Northern Climate nearer the Sun, and to exempt my self from the common Fate of my Countrymen. I must detain you a little longer, to tell you, That I never enter this delicious Retirement, but my Spirits are revived, and a sweet Complacency diffuses it self over my whole Mind. And how can it be otherwise, with a Conscience void of Offence, were the Musick of falling Waters, the Symphony of Birds, the gentle Humming of Bees, the Breath of Flowers, the fine Imagery of Painting and Sculpture; in a Word, the Beauties and the Charms of Nature and of Art, court all my Faculties, refresh the Fibres of the Brain, and smooth every Avenue of Thought? What pleasing Meditations, what agreeable Wanderings of the Mind, and what delicious Slumbers, have I enjoyed here? And when I turn up some masterly Writer to my Imagination, methinks here his Beauties appear in the most advantagious Light, and the Rays of his Genius shoot upon me with greater Force and Brightness than ordinary. This Place likewise keeps the whole Family in good Humour, in a Season wherein Gloominess of Temper prevails universally in this Island. My Wife does often touch her Lute in one of the Grotto's, and my Daughter sings to it, while the Ladies with you, amidst all the Diversions of the Town, and in the most affluent Fortunes, are fretting and repining beneath a louring Sky for they know not what. In this Green-house we often dine, we drink Tea, we dance Country-Dances; and, what is the chief Pleasure of all, we entertain our Neighbours in it, and by this Means contribute very much to mend the Climate five or six Miles about us. I am,

Your most humble Servant,

T. S.

Stultitian

Stultitiam patiuntur opes.—Hor.

Nº 180. Saturday, June 3. 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 2.

I HAVE received a Letter which accuses me of Partiality in the Administration of the Censorship, and says, That I have been very free with the lower Part of Mankind, but extreamly cautious in Representations of Matters which concern Men of Condition. This Correspondent takes upon him also to say, the Upholster was not undone by turning Politician, but became Bankrupt by trusting his Goods to Persons of Quality; and demands of me, that I should do Justice upon such as brought Poverty and Distress upon the World below them, while they themselves were sunk in Pleasures and Luxury, supported at the Expence of those very Persons whom they treated with a Negligence, as if they did not know whether they dealt with them or not. This is a very heavy Accusation, both of me, and such as the Man aggrieved accuses me of tolerating. For this Reason, I resolved to take this Matter into Consideration, and upon very litttle Meditation could call to my Memory many Instances which made this Complaint far from being groundless. The Root of this Evil does not always proceed from Injustice in the Men of Figure, but often from a false Grandeur which they take upon them in being unacquainted with their own Business, not considering how mean a Part they act when their Names and Characters are subjected to the little Arts of their Servants and Dependants. The Overseers of the Poor are a People who have no great Reputation.

putation for the Discharge of their Trust, but are much less scandalous than the Overseers of the Rich. Ask a young Fellow of a great Estate, who was that odd Fellow spoke to him in a publick Place? He answers, one that does my Business. - It is with many, a natural Consequence of being a Man of Fortune, that they are not to understand the Disposal of it; and they long to come to their Estates, only to put themselves under new Guardianship. Nay, I have known a young Fellow who was regularly bred an Attorney, and was a very expert one till he had an Estate fallen to him. The Moment that happened, he who could before prove the next Land he cast his Eye upon his own; and was so sharp, that a Man at first Sight would give him a small Sum for a general Receipt, whether he owed him any Thing or not: Such a one, I say, have I seen, upon coming to an Estate, forget all his Diffidence of Mankind, and become the most manageable Thing breathing. He immediately wanted a stirring Man to take upon him his Affairs, to receive and pay, and do every Thing which he himself was now too fine a Gentleman to understand. It is pleasant to consider, That he who would have got an Estate had he not come to one, will certainly starve because one fell to him: But such Contradictions are we to our selves, and any Change of Life is insupportable to some Natures.

IT is a mistaken Sense of Superiority, to believe a Figure or Equipage gives Men Precedence to their Neighbours. Nothing can create Respect from Mankind, but laying Obligations upon them; and it may very reasonably be concluded, that if it were put into a due Balance, according to the true State of the Account, many who believe themselves in Possession of a large Share of Dignity in the World, must give Place to their Inferiors. The greatest of all Distinctions in Civil Life is that of Debtor and Credi-

Creditor, and there needs no great Progess in Logick to know which, in that Case, is the advantageous Side. He who can say to another, Pray Master, or, Pray my Lord, give me my own, can as justly tell him, it is a phantaftical Distinction you take upon you, to pretend to pass upon the World for my Master or Lord, when at the same Time that I wear your Livery, you owe me Wages; or, While I wait at your Door, you are ashamed to see me till you have paid my Bill.

THE good old Way among the Gentry of England to maintain their Pre-eminence over the lower Rank, was by their Bounty, Munificence, and Hospitality; and it is a very unhappy Change, if at present, by themselves or their Agents, the Luxury of the Gentry is supported by the Credit of the Trader. This is what my Correspondent pretends to prove out of his own Books, and those of his whole Neighbourhood. He has the Confidence to say, That there is a Mug-house near Long Acre, where you may every Evening hear an exact Account of Distresses of this Kind. One complains, That such a Lady's Finery is the Occasion that his own Wife and Daughter appear so long in the same Gown: Another, that all the Furniture of her visiting Apartment are no more her's, than the Scenery of a Play are the proper Goods of the Adress. Nay, at the lower End of the same Table, you may hear a Butcher and Poulterer say, that at their proper Charge, all that Family has been maintained since they last came to Town.

THE free Manner in which People of Fashion are discoursed on at such Meetings, is but a just Reproach of their Failures in this Kind; but the melancholy Relations of the great Necessities Tradesmen are driven to, who support their Credit in Spight of the faithless Promises which are made them, and the Abatement which they suffer when paid, by the Extortion of upper Servants, is what what would stop the most thoughtless Man in the Career of his Pleasures, if rightly represented to him. IF this Matter be not very speedily amended, I shall think fit to print exact Lists of all Persons who are not at their own Disposal, though above the Age of twenty-one; and as the Trader is made Bankrupt for Absence from his Abode, so shall the Gentleman for being at Home, if, when Mr. Morpheus calls, he cannot give him an exact Account of what passes in his own Family. After this fair Warning, no one ought to think himself hardly dealt with, if I take upon me to pronounce him no longer Master of his Estate, Wife, or Family, than he continues to improve, cherish, and maintain them upon the Basis of his own Property, without Incursions upon his Neighbour in any of these Particulars.

ACCORDING to that excellent Philosopher Epicetus, we are all but acting Parts in a Play; and it is not a Distinction in it self to be high or low, but to become the Parts we are to perform. I am by my Office Prompter on this Occasion, and shall give those who are a little out in their Parts such soft Hints as may help them to proceed, without letting it be known to the Audience they were out: But if they run quite out of Character, they must be called off the Stage, and receive Parts more suitable to their Genius. Servile Complaisance shall degrade a Man from his Honour and Quality, and Haughtiness be yet more debased. Fortune shall no longer appropriate Distinctions, but Nature direct us in the Disposition both of Respect and Discountenance. As there are Tempers made for Command, and others for Obedience; so there are Men born for acquiring Possessions, and others incapable of being other than mere Lodgers in the Houses of their Ancestors, and have it not in their very Composition to be Proprietors of any Thing. These Men are moved only by the mere Effects of Impulse: Their

Good

A Coffe turns N Heig Foot
V

Good-will and Disesteem are to be regarded equally, for neither is the Effect of their Judgment. This loose Temper is that which makes a Man, what Sallust so well remarks to happen frequently in the same Person, to be covetous of what is another's, and profuse of what is his own. This Sort of Men is usually amiable to ordinary Eyes; but in the Sight of Reason, nothing is laudable but what is guided by Reason. The covetous Prodigal is of all others the worst Man in Society: If he would but take Time to look into himself, he would find his Soul all over gashed with broken Vows and Promises; and his Retrospect on his Actions would not consist of Reflections upon those good Resolutions after mature Thought, which are the true Life of a reasonable Creature, but the nauseous Memory of imperfect Pleasures, idle Dreams, and occasional Amusements. To follow such dissatisfying Pursuits, is it possible to suffer the Ignominy of being unjust? I remember in Tully's Epistle, in the Recommendation of a Man to an Affair which had no Manner of Relation to Money, it is said, You may trust him, for he is a frugal Man. It is certain, he who has not a Regard to strict Justice in the Commerce of Life, can be capable of no good Action in any other Kind; but he who lives below his Income, lays up every Moment of Life Armour against a base World, that will cover all his Frailities while he is so fortifi'd; and exaggerate them when he is naked and defenceless.

ADVERTISMENT.

A Stage-Coach sets out exactly at Six from Nando's Coffe-house to Mr. Tiptoe's Dancing-School, and returns at Eleven every Evening, for 16 d.

N. B. Dancing-Shoes not exceeding four Inches Height in the Heel, and Periwigs not exceeding three Foot in Length, are carried in the Coach-Box gratis.

— Dies, ni fallor, adest, quem semper acerbum, talis Semper bonorum, sic Dicit voluntis, habeo. Virg.

N° 181. Tuesday, June 6. 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 5.

THESE are those among Mankind, who can enjoy no Relish of their Being, except the World is made acquainted with all that relates to them, and think every Thing lost that passes unobserved; but others find a solid Delight in stealing by the Crowd, and modelling their Life after such a Manner, as is as much above the Approbation as the Practice of the Vulgar. Life being too short to give Instances great enough of true Friendship or Good-will, some Sages have thought it pious to preserve a certain Reverence for the Manes of their deceased Friends, and have withdrawn themselves from the rest of the World at certain Seasons, to com memorate in their own Thoughts such of their Acquaintance who have gone before them out of this Life: And indeed, when we are advanced in Years, there is not a more pleasing Entertainment, than to recollect in a gloomy Moment the many we have parted with that have been dear and agreeable to us, and to cast a melancholy Thought or two after those, with whom, perhaps, we have indulged our selves in whole Nights of Mirth and Jollity. With such Inclinations in my Heart I went to my Closet Yesterday in the Evening, and resolved to be sorrowful; upon which Occasion I could not but look with Disdain upon my self, that though all the Reasons which I had to lament the Loss of many of my Friends are now as forcible as at the Moment of their Departure; yet did not my Heart swell with the same Sorrow which I felt at that Time; but I could, without Tears, reflect upon many pleasing Adventures I have had with some who have long been blended with common Earth. Tho' it is by the Benefit of Nature that Length of Time thus blots out the Violence of Afflictions; yet with Tempers too much given to Pleasure, it is almost necessary to revive the old Places of Grief in our Memory, and ponder Step by Step on past Life, to lead the Mind into that Sobriety of Thought, which poised the Heart, and makes it beat with due Time, without being quickened with Desire, or retarded with Despair, from its proper and equal Motion. When we wind up a Clock that is out of Order, to make it go well for the future, we do not immediately set the Hand to the present Instant, but we make it strike the Round of all its Hours, before it can recover the Regularity of its Time. Such, thought I, shall be my Method this Evening; and since it is that Day of the Year which I dedicate to the Memory of such in another Life as I much delighted in when living, an Hour or two shall be sacred to Sorrow and their Memory, while I run over all the melancholy Circumstances of this Kind which have occurred to me in my whole Life.

THE first Sense of Sorrow I ever knew was upon the Death of my Father, at which Time I was not quite five Years of Age; but was rather amazed at what all the House meant, than possessed with a real Understanding why no Body was willing to play with me. I remember I went into the Room where his Body lay, and my Mother sate weeping alone by it. I had my Battledore in my Hand, and fell a beating the Coffin, and calling Papa; for I know not how I had some slight Idea that he was locked up there. My Mother catched me in her Arms, and transported beyond all Patience of the silent Grief she was before in, she almost smothered me in her Embrace, and told me in a Flood of Tears, Papa could not hear me, and would play with me no more, for they were going to put him under Ground, whence he could never come to us again. She was a very beautiful Woman, of a noble Spirit, and there was a Dignity in her Grief amidst all the Wildness of her Transport, which, methought, struck me with an Instinct of Sorrow, which, before I was sensible of what it was to grieve, seized my very Soul, and has made Pity the Weakness of my Heart ever since. The Mind in Infancy is, methinks, like the Body in Embryo, and receives Impressions so forcible, that they are as hard to be removed by Reason, as any Mark with which a Child is born, is to be taken away by any future Application. Hence it is, that Good Nature in me is no Merit; but having been so frequently overwhelmed with her Tears before I knew the Cause of any Affliction, or could draw Defences from my own Judgment, I imbibed Commiseration, Remorse, and unmanly Gentleness of Mind, which has since snared me into ten Thousand Calamities, and from whence I can reap no Advantage, except it be, that in such an Humour as I am now in, I can the better indulge my self in the Softnesses of Humanity, and enjoy that sweet Anxiety which arises from the Memory of past Afflictions.

WE that are very old, are better able to remember Things which befel us in our distant Youth, than the Passages of later Days. For this Reason it is, that the Companions of my strong and vigorous Years present themselves more immediately to me in this Office of Sorrow. Untimely or unhappy Deaths are what we are most apt to lament; so little are we able to make it indifferent when a Thing happens, tho' we know it must happen. Thus we groan under Life, and bewail bewail those who are relieved from it. Every Object that returns to our Imagination raises different Passions, according to the Circumstance of their Departure. Who can have lived in any Army, and in a serious Hour reflect upon the many gay and agreeable Men that might long have flourished in the Arts of Peace, and not join with the Imprecations of the Fatherless and Widow on the Tyrant to whose Ambition they fell Sacrifices? But gallant Men, who are cut off by the Sword, move rather our Veneration than our Pity; and we gather Relief enough from their own Contempt of Death, to make it no Evil, which was approached with so much Cheerfulness, and attended with so much Honour. But when we turn our Thoughts from the great Parts of Life on such Occasions, and instead of lamenting those who stood ready to give Death to those from whom they had the Fortune to receive it; I say, when we let our Thoughts wander from such noble Objects, and consider the Havock which is made among the Tender and the Innocent, Pity enters with an unmixed Softness, and possesses all our Souls at once.

HERE (were there Words to express such Sentiments with proper Tenderness) I should record the Beauty, Innocence and untimely Death of the first Object my Eyes ever beheld with Love. The beauteous Virgin! How ignorantly did she charm, how carelessly excel? Oh Death! Thou hast Right to the Bold, to the Ambitious, to the High, and to the Haughty; but why this Cruelty to the Humble, to the Meek, to the Undiscerning, to the Thoughtless? Nor Age, nor Business, nor Distress, can erase the dear Image from my Imagination. In the same Week, I saw her dressed for a Ball, and in a Shroud. How ill did the Habit of Death become the pretty Triplet! I still behold the smiling Earth — A larger Train of Disasters were coming on to my Memory, mory, when my Servant knocked at my Closet-Door, and interrupted me with a Letter, attended with a Hamper of Wine, of the same Sort with that which is to be put to Sale on Thursday next at Garnaway's Coffee-house. Upon the Receipt of it, I sent for three of my Friends. We are so intimate, that we can be Company in whatever State of Mind we meet, and can entertain each other without expecting always to rejoice. The Wine we found to be generous and warming, but with such an Heat as moved us rather to be cheerful than frolicksome. It revived the Spirits without firing the Blood. We commended it till two of the Clock this Morning, and having to Day met a little before Dinner, we found, that though we drank two Bottles a Man, we had much more Reason to recollect than forget what had passed the Night before.

କେବୁବୁ? କେବୁବୁକେବୁବୁ? କେବୁବୁକେବୁବୁ? କେବୁବୁ

Spectaret populum Iudis attentius ipsis. Hor.

Nº 182. Thursday, June 8. 1710.

Sbeer-Lane, June 7.

THE Town grows so very empty, that the greater Number of my gay Characters are fled out of my Sight into the Country. My Beans are now Shepherds, and my Belles Wood-Nymphs. They are lolling over Rigulets, and covered with Shades, while we who remain in Town hurry through the Dust about Impertinencies, without knowing the Happiness of Leisure and Retirement. To add to this Calamity, even the Actors are going to desert us for a Season, and we shall not shortly have so much as a Landskip or a Forest-Scene to refresh our selves.

with in the Midst of our Fatigues. This may not perhaps be so sensible a Loss to any other as to me; for I confess it is one of my greatest Delights to sit unobserved and unknown in the Gallery, and entertain my self either with what is personated on the Stage, or observe what Appearances present themselves in the Audience. If there were no other good Consequences in a Play-house, than that so many Persons of different Ranks and Conditions are placed there in their most pleasing Aspects, that Prospect only would be very far from being below the Pleasures of a wise Man. There is not one Person you can see, in whom, if you look with an Inclination to be pleased, you may not behold something worthy or agreeable. Our Thoughts are in our Features; and the Visage of those in whom Love, Rage, Anger, Jealousy or Envy, have their frequent Mansions, carries the Traces of those Passions where-ever the Amorous, the Cholerick, the Jealous, or the Envious, are pleased to make their Appearance. However, the Assembly at a Play is usually made up of such as have a Sense of some Elegance in Pleasure, by which Means the Audience is generally composed of those who have gentle Affections, or at least of such as at that Time are in the best Humour you can ever find them. This has insensibly a good Effect upon our Spirits; and the musical Airs which are play'd to us, put the whole Company into a Participation of the same Pleasure, and by Consequence for that Time equal in Humour, in Fortune, and in Quality. Thus far we gain only by coming into an Audience; but if we find added to this, the Beauties of proper Action, the Force of Eloquence, and the Gaiety of well-placed Lights and Scenes, it is being happy, and seeing others happy, for two Hours; a Duration of Bliss not at all to be illighted by so short-lived a Creature as Man. Why then should not the Duty of the Player be had in much more Esteem than it is at present? If the Merit of a Performance be to be valued according to the Talents which are necessary to it, the Qualifications of a Player should raise him much above the Arts and Ways of Life which we call Mercenary or Mechanick. When we look round a full House, and behold so few that can (though they set themselves out to Show as much as the Persons on the Stage do) come up to what they would appear even in dumb Show, how much does the Actor deserve our Approbation, who adds to the Advantage of Looks and Motions, the Tone of Voice, the Dignity, the Humility, the Sorrow and the Triumph, suitable to the Character he personates?

IT may possibly be imagined by severe Men, that I am too frequent in the Mention of the Theatrical Representations; but who is not excessive in the Discourse of what he extremely likes? Eugenio can lead you to a Gallery of fine Pictures, which Collection he is always enlarging: Crassus through Woods and Forests, to which he designs to add the neighbouring Countries. These are great and noble Instances of their Magnificence. The Players are my Pictures, and their Scenes my Territories. By communicating the Pleasure I take in them, it may in some Measure add to Mens Gratifications this Way, as viewing the Choice and Wealth of Eugenio and Crassus augments the Enjoyments of those whom they entertain, with a Prospect of such Possessions as would not otherwise fall within the Reach of their Fortunes.

IT is a very good Office one Man does another, when he tells him the Manner of his being pleased; and I have often thought, that a Comment upon the Capacities of the Players would very much improve the Delight that Way, and impart it to those who otherwise have no Sense of it.

THE

THE first of the present Stage are Wilks and Cibber, perfect Actors in their different Kinds. Wilks has a singular Talent in representing the Graces of Nature, Cibber the Deformity in the Affectation of them. Were I a Writer of Plays, I should never employ either of them in Parts which had not their Bent this Way. This is seen in the inimitable Strain and Run of good Humour which is kept up in the Character of Wild-air, and in the nice and delicate Abuse of Understanding in that of Sir Novelty. Cibber, in another Light, hits exquisitely the flat Civility of an affected Gentleman-Usher, and Wilks the easy-Frankness of a Gentleman.

IF you would observe the Force of the same Capacities in higher Life, can any Thing be more ingenuous, than the Behaviour of Prince-Harry when his Father checks him? Any Thing more exasperating, than that of Richard, when he insults his Superiors? To beseech gracefully, to approach respectfully, to pity, to mourn, to love, are the Places wherein Wilks may be made to shine with the utmost Beauty; To rally pleasantly, to scorn artfully, to flatter, to ridicule, and to neglect, are what Cibber would perform with no less Excellence.

WHEN Actors are confidered with a View to their Talents, it is not only the Pleasure of that Hour of Action which the Spectators gain from their Performance, but the Opposition of Right and Wrong on the Stage, would have its Force in the Assistance of our Judgments on other Occasions. I have at present under my Tutelage a young Poet, who, I design, shall entertain the Town the ensuing Winter. And as he does me the Honour to let me see his Comedy as he writes it, I shall endeavour to make the Parts fit the Genius of the several Actors, as exactly as their Habits can their Bodies: And because the two I have mentioned are to perform the principal Parts, I have prevailed with the House to let the Careless Husband be acted on Tuesday next, that my young Author may have a View of a Play which is acted to Perfection, both by them, and all concerned in it, as being born within the Walls of the Theatro, and written with an exact Knowledge of the Abilities of the Performers. Mr. Wilks will do his Best in this Play, because it is for his own Benefit; and Mr. Cibber, because he writ it. Besides which, all the great Beauties we have left in Town, or within Call of it, will be present, because it is the last Play this Season. This Opportunity will, I hope, inflame my Pupil with such generous Notions from seeing this fair Assembly as will be then present, that his Play may be composed of Sentiments and Characters proper to be presented to such an Audience. His Drama at present has only the Out-Lines drawn. There are, I find, to be in it all the reverend Offices of Life, such as Regard to Parents, Husbands, and honourable Lovers, preserved with the utmost Care; and at the same Time that Agreeableness of Behaviour, with the Intermixture of pleasing Passions as arise from Innocence and Virtue, interspersed in such a Manner, as that to be charming and agreeable, shall appear the natural Consequence of being virtuous. This great End is one of those I propose to do in my Censorship; but if I find a thin House, on an Occasion when such a Work is to be promoted, my Pupil shall return to his Commons at Oxford, and Sheer-Lane and the Theatres be no longer Correspondents.

82.
ext,
f a em,
the raft ers.
e it he we be-son.
Pu-his his hadi-ut-all to reme
the om
a le, ng ro-min be ons
no

— Fuit bac sapientia quondam
Publica privatis secessere. — Hor.

N^o 183. Saturday, June 10. 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 9.

WHEN Men look into their own Bosoms, and consider the generous Seeds which are there planted, that might, if rightly cultivated, enoble their Lives, and make their Virtue venerable to Futurity; how can they, without Tears, reflect on the universal Degeneracy from that publick Spirit, which ought to be the first and principal Motive of all their Actions? In the Grecian and Roman Nations, they were wise enough to keep up this great Incentive, and it was impossible to be in the Fashion without being a Patriot. All Gallantry had its first Source from hence; and to want a Warmth for the Publick Welfare, was a Defect so scandalous, that he who was guilty of it had no Pretence to Honour or Manhood. What makes the Depravity among us in this Behalf the more vexatious and irksome to reflect upon, is, That the Contempt of Life is carried as far amongst us, as it could be in those memorable People; and we want only a proper Application of the Qualities which are frequent among us to be as worthy as they. There is hardly a Man to be found who will not fight upon any Occasion which he thinks may maintain his own Honour. Were this Motive as strong in every Thing that regards the Publick, as it is in this our private Cafè, no Man would pass his Life away without having distinguished himself by some gallant Instance of his Zeal towards it in the respective Incidents of his Life and Profession.

fection. But it is so far otherwise, that there cannot at present be a more ridiculous Animal than one who seems to regard the Good of others. He in Civil Life whose Thoughts turn upon Schemes which may be of general Benefit, without further Reflection, is called a Projector; and the Man whose Mind seems intent upon glorious Achievements, a Knight-Errant. The Ridicule among us runs strong against laudable Actions; nay, in the ordinary Course of Things, and the common Regards of Life, Negligence of the Publick is an Epidemick Vice. The Brewer in the Excise, the Merchant in his Customs, and, for ought we know, the Soldier in his Muster-Rolls, think never the worse of themselves for being guilty of their respective Frauds towards the Publick. This Evil is come to such a phantaſtical Height, that he is a Man of a publick Spirit, and heroically affected to his Country, who can go so far as even to turn Usurer with all he has in her Funds. There is not a Citizen in whose Imagination such a one does not appear in the same Light of Glory, as Codrus, Scavola, or any other great Name in Old Rome. Were it not for the Heroes of so much per Cent. as have Regard enough for themselves and their Nation to trade with her with their Wealth, the very Notion of publick Love would long ere now have vanished from among us. But however general Custom may hurry us away in the Stream of a common Error, there is no Evil, no Crime, so great as that of being cold in Matters which relate to the common Good. This is in nothing more conspicuous than in a certain Willingness to receive any Thing that tends to the Diminution of such as have been conspicuous Instruments in our Service. Such Inclinations proceed from the most low and vile Corruption of which the Soul of Man is capable. This effaces not only the Practice, but the very Approbation of Honour and Virtue; and has had such an Effect, that, to speak freely, the very Sense

Sense of publick Good has no longer a Part even in our Conversations. Can then the most generous Motive of Life, the Good of others, be so easily banish'd the Breast of Man? Is it possible to draw all our Passions inward? Shall the Boiling of Heat of Youth be sunk in Pleasures, the Ambition of Manhood in selfish Intrigues? Shall all that is glorious, all that is worth the Pursuit of great Minds, be so easily rooted out? When the universal Bent of a People seems diverted from the Sense of their common Good, and common Glory, it looks like a Fatality, and Crisis of impending Misfortune.

THE generous Nations we just now mentioned understood this so very well, that there was hardly an Oration ever made which did not turn upon this general Sense, That the Love of their Country was the first and most essential Quality in an honest Mind. Demosthenes, in a Cause wherein his Fame, Reputation and Fortune, were embarked, puts his All upon this Issue; Let the Athenians, says he, be benevolent to me, as they think I have been zealous for them. This great and discerning Orator knew there was nothing else in Nature could bear him up against his Adversaries, but this one Quality of having shewn himself willing or able to serve his Country. This certainly is the Test of Merit; and the first Foundation for deserving Good-will, is having it your self. The Adversary of this Orator, at that Time, was Aeschines, a Man of wily Arts and Skill in the World, who could, as Occasion served, fall in with a national Start of Passion, or Sullenness of Humour, (which a whole Nation is sometimes taken with as well as a private Man) and by that Means divert them from their common Sense, into an Aversion for receiving any Thing in its true Light. But when Demosthenes had awaked his Audience with that one Hint of judging by the general Tenor of his Life towards them, them, his Services bore down his Opponent before him, who fled to the Cover of his mean Arts till some more favourable Occasion should offer, against the superior Merit of Demosthenes.

IT were to be wished, That Love of their Country were the first Principle of Action in Men of Busness, even for their own Sakes; for when the World begins to examine into their Conduct, the Generality, who have no Share in, or Hopes of any Part in Power or Riches, but what is the Effect of their own Labour or Property, will judge of them by no other Method, than that of how profitable their Administration has been to the Whole. They who are out of the Influence of Mens Fortune or Favour, will let them stand or fall by this one only Rule; and Men who can bear being tried by it, are always popular in their Fall: Those who cannot suffer such a Scrutiny, are contemptible in their Advancement.

BUT I am here running into Shreds of Maxims from reading Tacitus this Morning, which has driven me from my Recommendation of publick Spirit, which was the intended Purpose of this Lucubration. There is not a more glorious Instance of it, than in the Character of Regulus. This same Regulus was taken Prisoner by the Carthaginians, and was sent by them to Rome, in order to demand some Punick Noblemen, who were Prisoners, in Exchange for himself, and was bound by an Oath, that he would return to Carthage, if he failed in his Commission. He proposes this to the Senate, who were in Suspence upon it; which Regulus observing, (without having the least Notion of putting the Care of his own Life in Competition with the publick Good) desired them to consider that he was old, and almost useles; that those demanded in Exchange were Men of daring Tempers, and great Merit in military Affairs, fairs, and wondred they would make any Doubt of permitting him to go back to the short Tortures prepared for him at Carthage, where he should have the Advantage of ending a long Life both gloriously and usefully. This generous Advice was consented to, and he took his Leave of his Country, and his weeping Friends, to go to certain Death, with that cheerful Composure, as a Man, after the Fatigue of Business in a Court or a City, retires to the next Village for the Air.

Una de multis facie nuptiali.

Digha — — — — — Hor.

N^o. 184. Tuesday, June 13, 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 12.

THESE are certain Occasions of Life which give propitious Omens of the future good Conduct of it, as well as others which explain our present inward State, according to our Behaviour in them. Of the latter Sort are Funerals; of the former, Weddings. The Manner of our Carriage when we lose a Friend, shews very much our Temper, in the Humility of our Words and Actions, and a general Sense of our destitute Condition, which runs through all our Department. This gives a solemn Testimony of the generous Affection we bore our Friends, when we seem to disrelish every Thing now we can no more enjoy them, or see them partake in our Enjoyments. It is very proper and humane to put our selves as it were in their Livery after their Decease, and wear a Habit unsuitable to Prosperity, while those we loved and honoured are mouldring in the Grave. As this is landable on the sorrowful Side, so on the other, Incidents of Success may no less justly be represented and acknowledged in our outward Figure and Carriage. Of all such Occasions, that great Change of a single Life into Marriage is the most important, as it is the Source of all Relations, and from whence all other Friendship and Commerce do principally arise. The general Intent of both Sexes is to dispose of themselves happily and honourably in this State; and as all the good Qualities we have are exerted to make our Way into it, so the best Appearance, with Regard to their Minds, their Persons, and their Fortunes, at the first Entrance into it, is a Due to each other in the married Pair, as well as a Compliment to the rest of the World. It was an Instruction of a wise Law-giver, That unmarried Women should wear such loose Habits, which, in the flowing of their Garb, should incite their Beholders to a Desire of their Persons; and that the ordinary Motion of their Bodies might display the Figure and Shape of their Limbs in such a Manner, as at once to preserve the strictest Decency, and raise the warmest Inclinations.

THIS was the Economy of the Legislator for the Increase of People, and at the same Time for the Preservation of the Genial Bed. She who was the Admiration of all who beheld her while unmarried, was to bid adieu to the Pleasure of shining in the Eyes of many, as soon as she took upon her the wedded Condition. However, there was a Festival of Life allowed the New-married, a Sort of intermediate State between Celibacy and Matrimony, which continued certain Days. During that Time, Entertainments, Equipages, and other Circumstances of Rejoycing, were encouraged, and they were permitted to exceed the common Mode of Living, that the Bride and Bridegroom might learn from such Freedoms of Conversation to run into a general Conduct to each other, made out of their past and future State, so to temper the Cares of the Man and the Wife with the Gaieties of the Lover and the Mistress.

from

IN those wise Ages the Dignity of Life was kept up, and on the Celebration of such Solemnities there were no impudent Whispers, and senseless Interpretations put upon the unaffected Chearfulness, or accidental Seriousness of the Bride; but Men turned their Thoughts upon the general Reflections, upon what Issue might probably be expected from such a Couple in the succeeding Course of their Life, and felicitated them accordingly upon such Prospects.

I must confess, I cannot from any ancient Manuscripts, Sculptures, or Medals, deduce the Rise of our celebrated Custom of throwing the Stocking; but have a faint Memory of an Account a Friend gave me of an original Picture in the Palace of Aldobrandini in Rome. This seems to shew a Sense of this Affair very different from what is usual among us. It is a Grecian Wedding, and the Figures represented are a Person offering Sacrifice, a beautiful Damsel dancing, and another playing on the Harp. The Bride is placed in her Bed, the Bridegroom sits at the Feet of it, with an Aspect which intimates, his Thoughts were not only entertained with the Joys with which he was surrounded, but also with a noble Gratitude, and divine Pleasure in the Offering, which was then made to the Gods to invoke their Influence on his new Condition. There appears in the Face of the Woman a Mixture of Fear, Hope, and Modesty; in the Bridegroom, a well-governed Rapture. As you see in great Spirits, Grief which discovers it self the more by forbearing Tears and Complaints, you may observe also the highest Joy is too big for Utterance, the Tongue being of all the Organs the least capable of expressing such a Circumstance.

stance. The nuptial Torch, the Bower, the Marriage-Song, are all Particulars which we meet with in the Allusions of the ancient Writers; and in every one of them something is to be observed, which denotes their Industry to aggrandize and adorn this Occasion above all others.

WITH us all Order and Decency in this Point is perverted, by the insipid Mirth of certain Animals we usually call Wags. These are a Species of all Men the most insupportable. One cannot without some Reflection say, whether their flat Mirth provokes us more to Pity or to Scorn; but if one considers with how great Affection they utter their frigid Conceits, Com-miseration immediately changes it self into Contempt.

A Wag is the last Order even of Pretenders to Wit and good Humour. He has generally his Mind prepared to receive some Occasion of Merriment, but is of himself too empty to draw any out of his own Set of Thoughts, and therefore laughs at the next Thing he meets, not because it is ridiculous, but because he is under a Necessity of Laughing. A Wag is one that never in its Life saw a beautiful Object, but sees, what it does see, in the most low, and most inconsiderable Light it can be placed. There is a certain Ability necessary to behold what is amiable and worthy of our Approbation, which little Minds want, and attempt to hide by a general Disregard to every Thing they behold above what they are able to relish. Hence it is, that a Wag in an Assembly is ever guessing, how well such a Lady slept last Night, and how much such a young Fellow is pleas'd with himself. The Wag's Gaiety consists in a certain professed ill Breeding, as if it were an Excuse for committing a Fault, that a Man knows he does so. Tho' all publick Places are full of Persons of this Order, yet, because I will not allow Impertinence and Affection to get the Better of native Innocence and Sim-

34. areet nd erize

his er-are one er
to Afmners his er-ny re se er-er at rain nd ds re-at ag a a g's

g, lt, ck
ec-nd
n-

Simplicity of Manners, I have, in Spite of such little Disturbers of publick Entertainments, persuaded my Brother Tranquillus, and his Wife my Sister Jenny, in Favour of Mr. Wilks, to be at the Play to-morrow Evening.

THEY, as they have so much good Sense as to act naturally, without Regard to the Observation of others, will not, I hope, be discomposed if any of the Fry of Wags should take upon them to make themselves merry upon the Occasion of their coming, as they intend, in their Wedding Clothes. My Brother is a plain, worthy, and honest Man, and as it is natural for Men of that Turn to be mightily taken with sprightly and airy Women, my Sister has a Vacuity which may perhaps give Hopes to Impertinents, but will be esteemed the Effect of Innocence among wise Men. They design to sit with me in the Box, which the House have been so complaisant to offer me whenever I think fit to come thither in my publick Character.

I do not in the least doubt but the true Figure of conjugal Affection will appear in their Looks and Gestures. My Sister does not affect to be gorgeons in her Dress, and thinks the Happiness of a Wife is more visible in a cheerful Look than a gay Apparel. It is a hard Task to speak of Persons so nearly related to one with Decency, but I may say, all who shall be at the Play will allow him to have the Mien of a worthy English Gentleman; her, that of a notable and deserving Wife.

Notitiam primosque prandus vicinia fecit;
Tempore crevit amor; sede quoque forte coissent;
Sed vetuere patres, quod non potuerit vetare.
Ex aequo captis ardebat mentibus ambo.

Ovid. de Pyr. & This.

N^o 185. Thursday, June 15. 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 14.

AS soon as I was up this Morning, my Man gave me the following Letter, which, since it leads to a Subject that may prove of common Use to the World, I shall take Notice of with as much Expedition as my Fair Petitioner could desire.

Mr. Bickerstaff,

SINCE you have so often declared your self a Parent of the Distressed, I must acquaint you, that I am Daughter to a Country Gentleman of good Sense, and may expect 3 or 4000l. for my Fortune. I love and am beloved by Philander, a young Gentleman who has an Estate of 500l. per Annum, and is our near Neighbour in the Country every Summer. My Father, though he has been a long Time acquainted with it, constantly refuses to comply with our mutual Inclinations: But what most of all torments me, is, that if ever I speak in Commendation of my Lover, he is much louder in his Praises than my self; and professes, that 'tis out of pure Love and Esteem for Philander, as well as his Daughter, that he can never consent we should marry each other; when (as he terms it) we may both do so much better. It must indeed be confessed, that two Gentlemen of considerable Fortunes, made their Addresses to me last Winter, and Philander (as I have since learn'd) was offered a young Heiress with 15000l. but it seems we could could neither of us think, that excepting those Matches would be doing better than remaining constant to our first Passion. Your Thoughts upon the Whole may perhaps have some Weight with my Father, who is one of your Admirers, as is

Your humble Servant,

SILVIA

P. S. You are desired to be speedy, since my Father daily presses me to accept of what he calls an advantageous Offer.

THERE is no Calamity in Life that falls heavier upon humane Nature than a Disappointment in Love, especially when it happens between two Persons whose Hearts are mutually engaged to each other. It is this Distress which has given Occasion to some of the finest Tragedies that were ever written, and daily fills the World with Melancholy, Discontent, Phrensy, Sickness, Despair, and Death. I have often admired at the Barbarity of Parents, who so frequently interpose their Authority in this grand Article of Life. I would fain ask Silvia's Father, Whether he thinks he can bestow a greater Favour on his Daughter, than to put her in a Way to live happily? Whether a Man of Philander's Character, with 500*l.* per Annum, is not more likely to contribute to that End, than many a young Fellow whom he may have in his Thoughts with so many Thousands? Whether he can make Amends to his Daughter by any Increase of Riches, for the Loss of that Happiness she proposes to herself in her Philander? Or, whether a Father should compound with his Daughter to be miserable, though she were to get 20000*l.* by the Bargain: I suppose he would have her reflect, with Esteem, on his Memory after his Death: And does he think this a proper Method to make her do so, when, as often as she thinks on the Loss of her Philander, she must at the same Time remember him as the cruel Cause of it? Any transient ill Humour is soon forgotten; but the Reflection of such a Cruelty must continue to raise Resentments as long as Life it self; and by this one Piece of Barbarity, an indulgent Father loses the Merit of all this past Kindnesses. It is not impossible but she may deceive herself in the Happiness which she proposes from Philander; but as in such a Case she can have no one to blame but her self, she will bear the Disappointment with greater Patience; but if she never makes the Experiment, however happy she may be with another, she will still think she might have been happier with Philander. There is a kind of Sympathy in Souls that fits them for each other; and we may be assured, when we see two Persons engaged in the Warmths of a mutual Affection, that there are certain Qualities in both their Minds which bear a Resemblance to one another. A generous and constant Passion in an agreeable Lover, where there is not too great a Disparity in other Circumstances, is the greatest Blessing that can befall the Person beloved; and if overlooked in one, may perhaps never be found in another. I shall conclude this with a celebrated Instance of a Father's Indulgence in this Particular, which, tho' carried to an Extravagance, has something in it so tender and amiable, as may justly reproach the Harshness of Temper that is to be met with in many a British Father.

ANTIOCHUS, a Prince of great Hopes, fell passionately in Love with the young Queen Stratonice, who was his Mother-in-Law, and had bore a Son to the old King Seleucus his Father. The Prince finding it impossible to extinguish his Passion, fell sick, and refused all Manner of Nourishment, being determined to put an End to that Life which was become insupportable.

ERASISTRATUS, the Physician, soon found that Love was his Distemper; and observing 35. ame

it?
but nue
and Fa-
It
inler;
to nt-ver ay ght
a ch wo lf-th ne an a st ad are, is r n d
s f o
i
-
3

ring the Alteration in his Pulse and Countenance whenever Stratonice made him a Visit, was soon satisfied that he was dying for his young Mother-in-Law. Knowing the old King's Tenderness for his Son, when he one Morning enquired of his Health, he told him, That the Prince's Distemper was Love; but that it was incurable; because, it was impossible for him to possess the Person whom he loved. The King, surprised at this Account, desired to know how his Son's Passion could be incurable? Why, Sir, replied Erastatus, because he is in Love with the Person I am married to.

THE old King immediately conjured him by all his past Favours to save the Life of his Son and Successor. Sir said Erastatus, would your Majesty but fancy your self in my Place, you would see the unreasonableness of what you desire? Heaven is my Witness, said Selucus, I could resign even my Stratonice to save my Antichus. At this the Tears ran down his Cheeks, which when the Physician saw, taking him by the Hand, Sir says he, if these are your real Sentiments, the Prince's Life is out of Danger: it is Stratonice for whom he dies. Selucus immediately gave Orders for solemnizing the Marriage; and the young Queen, to shew her Obedience, very generously exchanged the Father for the Son.

Emitur sola virtute potestas. Claud.

Sheer-Lane, June 16.

AS it has been the Endeavour of these our Labours to extirpate from among the polite or busy Part of Mankind, all such as are either prejudiprejudicial or insignificant to Society; so it ought to be no less our Study to supply the Havock we have made by an exact Care of the growing Generation. But when we begin to inculcate proper Precepts to the Children of this Island, except we could take them out of their Nurses Arms, we see an Amendment is almost impracticable; for we find the whole Species of our Youth, and grown Men, is incorrigibly prepossessed with Vanity, Pride, or Ambition, according to the respective Pursuits to which they turn themselves: by which Means the World is infatuated with the Love of Appearances instead of Things. Thus the vain Man takes Praise for Honour, the proud Man Ceremony for Respect, the ambitious Man Power for Glory. These three Characters are indeed of very near Resemblance, but differently received by Mankind. Vanity makes Men ridiculous; Pride, odious; and Ambition, terrible. The Foundation of all which is, That they are grounded upon Falshood: For if Men, instead of studying to appear considerable, were in their own Hearts Possessors of the Requisites for Esteem, the Acceptance they otherwise unfortunately aim at would be as inseparable from them, as Approbation is from Truth it self. By this Means they would have some Rule to walk by; and they may ever be assured, that a good Cause of Action will certainly receive a suitable Effect. It may be an useful Hint in such Cases for a Man to ask of himself, Whether he really is what he has a Mind to be thought? If he is, he need not give himself much further Anxiety. What will the World say? is the common Question in Matters of Difficulty; as if the Terror lay wholly in the Sense which others, and not we our selves, shall have of our Actions. From this one Source arise all the Impostors in every Art and Profession, in all Places, among all Persons in Conversation, as well as in Business. Hence it is, that a vain Fellow takes twice as 86. ught

we Ge-pro-exurces pracour pos-ord-turn instead e for pect, three nce, inity Am-which For lera-
the y o-inseruth ome red, ro-
Hint
Whe-
ght?
ther
com-
the
and ions.
rs in nong Busi-wico
as

as much Pains to be ridiculous, as would make him sincerely agreeable.

CAN any one be better fashioned, better bred, or has any one more good Nature, than Damasippus? But the whole Scope of his Looks and Actions tends so immediately to gain the good Opinion of all he converses with, that he loses it for that only Reason. As it is the Nature of Vanity to impose false Shews for Truths, so does it also turn real Possessions into imaginary Ones. Damasippus, by assuming to himself what he has not, robs himself of what he has.

THE RE is nothing more necessary to establish Reputation, than to suspend the Enjoyment of it. He that cannot bear the Sense of Merit with Silence, must of Necessity destroy it: For Fame being the general Mistress of Mankind, whoever gives it to himself, insults all to whom he relates any Circumstances to his own Advantage. He is considered as an open Ravisher of that Beauty, for whom all others pine in Silence. But some Minds are so incapable of any Temperance in this Particular, that on every Second in their Discourse, you may observe an Earnestness in their Eyes, which shews they wait for your Approbation, and perhaps the next Instant cast an Eye on a Glass to see how they like themselves. Walking the other Day in a neighbouring Inn of Court, I saw a more happy and more graceful Orator than I ever before had heard, or read of. A Youth, of about Nineteen Years of Age, was in an Indian Night-Gown, and Laced-Cap, pleading a Cause before a Glass: The young Fellow had a very good Air, and seemed to hold his Brief in his Hand rather to help his Action, than that he wanted Notes for his further Information. When I first began to observe him, I feared he would soon be alarmed, but he was so zealous for his Client, and so favourably received by the Court, that he went on with great Fluency to inform the Bench, That he humbly VOL III. Q hoped hoped they would not let the Merit of the Cause suffer by the Youth and Inexperience of the Pleader: that in all Things he submitted to their Candour; and modestly desired they would not conclude, but that Strength of Argument and Force of Reason, may be consistent with Grace of Action and Comeliness of Person.

TO me, who see People every Day in the midst of Crowds (whomsoever they seem to address to) talk only to themselves, and of themselves, this Orator was not so extravagant a Man as perhaps another would have thought him; but I took Part in his Success, and was very glad to find he had in his Favour Judgment and Costs, without any Manner of Opposition.

THE Effects of Pride and Vanity are of Consequence only to the Proud and the Vain, and tend to no further Ill than what is personal to themselves, in preventing their Progress in any Thing that is worthy and laudable, and creating Envy instead of Emulation of superior Virtue. These ill Qualities are to be found only in such as have so little Minds, as to circumscribe their Thoughts and Designs within what properly relates to the Value which they think due to their dear and amiable selves: But Ambition, which is the Third great Impediment to Honour and Virtue, is a Fault of such as think themselves born for moving in an higher Orb, and preferring Powerful and Mischivous to being Virtuous and Obscure. The Parent of this Mischief in Life, so far as to regulate it into Schemes, and make it possess a Man's whole Heart, without his believing himself a Daemon, was Machiavel. He first taught, That a Man must necessarily appear weak to be honest. Hence it gains upon the Imagination, that a great is not so despicable as a little Villain; and Men are insensibly led to a Belief, that the Aggravation of Crimes is the Diminution of them. Hence the Impiety of thinking one Thing, and speaking

86.
the not and race

the ad-em-Man but glad Costs,

Con-
and al to any ating rtue.

such their y re-their which
- and elves refer

Vir-chief emes, with-
and

Mat ne-ce is n are vation ce the aking
an

N^o 186. The TATLER. 339.

another. In Pursuance of this empty and unsatisfying Dream, to betray, to undermine, to kill in themselves all natural Sentiments of Love to Friends or Country, is the willing Practice of such as are thirsty of Power, for any other Reason than that of being useful and acceptable to Mankind.

ADVERTISEMENT.

WHEREAS Mr. Bickerstaff has lately received a Letter out of Ireland, dated June 9. importing, That he is grown very dull, for the Postage of which Mr. Morphew charges one Shilling, and another without Date or Place or Time, for which he the said Morphew charges Two-pence; it is desired, That for the Future his courteous and uncurteous Readers will go a little further in expressing their good and ill Will, and pay for the Carriage of their Letters, otherwise the intended Pleasure or Pain which is designed for Mr. Bickerstaff, will be wholly disappointed.

N^o 187. Tuesday, June 20. 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 19.

Pasquin of Rome, to Isaac Bickerstaff of London.

His Holiness is gone to Castel Gandolfo, much discomposed at some late Accounts from the Missionaries in your Island: For a Committee of Cardinals, which lately sate for the reviving the Force of some obsolete Doctrines, and drawing up Amendments to certain Points of Faith, have represented the Church of Rome to be in great Danger, from a Treatise written by a learned Englishman, which carries Spiritual Power much higher than we could have dared to have attempted even here. His Book is called, An Epistolary Discourse, proving from the Scriptures and the first Fathers, That the Soul is a Principle naturally Mortal: Wherin is proved, That none have the Power of giving thls Divine immortalizing Spirit since the Apostles, but Bishops. By Henry Dedwell, A. M. The Assertion appeared to our Literati so short and effectual a Method of subjeeting the Laity, that it is feared auricular Confession and Absolution will not be capable of keeping the Clergy of Rome in any Degree of Greatness, in Competition with such Teachers, whose Flocks shall receive this Opinion. What gives the greater Jealousy here is, That in the Catalogue of Treatises which have been lately burnt within the British Territories, there is no Mention made of this learned Work; which Circumstance is a Sort of Implication, that the Tenet is not held erroneous, but that the Doctrine is receiv'd amongst you as Orthodox. The Youth of this Place are very much divided in Opinion, Whether a very memorable Quotation which the Author repeats out of Tertullian, be not rather of the Style and Manner of Menr-sius? In illo ipso voluptatis ultime astu quo genitale virus expellitur, nonne aliquid de anima quoque sentimus exire, atque ideo marcessimus & devigescimus cum lucis detrimento? This Piece of Latin goes no further than to tell us how our Fathers got us, so that we are still at a Loss how we afterwards commence Eternal; for creando infunditur, & infundendo creatur, which is mentioned soon after, may allude only to Flesh and Blood as well as the former. Your Readers in this City, some of whom have very much approved the Writings with which you have attacked

Free-

Free-Thinkers, Atheists, and other Enemies to Religion and Virtue, are very much disturbed that you have given them no Account of this remarkable Dissertation: And I am employed by them to desire you would, with all possible Expedition send me over the Ceremony of the Creation of Souls, as well as a List of all the mortal and immortal Men within the Dominions of Great Britain. When you have done me this Favour, I must trouble you for other Tokens of your Kindness, and particularly I desire you would let me have the religious Handkerchief, which is of late so much worn in England, for I have promised to make a Present of it to a Courtesan of a French Minister.

LETTERS from the Frontiers of France inform us, That a young Gentleman who was to have been created a Cardinal on the next Promotion, has put off his Design of coming to Rome so soon as was intended, having, as it is said, received Letters from Great Britain, wherein several Vertuosi of that Island have desired him to suspend his Resolutions towards a monastick Life, till the British Grammarians shall publish their Explication of the Words Indefeazzable and Revolution. According as these two hard Terms are made to fit the Mouths of the People, this Gentleman takes his Measures for his Journey hither.

YOU R New Bedlam has been read and considered by some of your Countrymen among us; and one Gentleman, who is now here as a Traveller, says, your Design is impracticable, for that there can be no Place large enough to contain the Number of your Lunaticks. He advises you therefore to name the Ambient Sea for the Boundary of your Hospital. If what he says be true, I do not see how you can think of any other Enclosure; for according to his Discourse, the whole People are taken with a Vertigo; great and popular Actions are received with Coldness and Discontent; ill News hoped for with Impatience; Heroes in your Service are treated with Calumny, while Criminals pass through your Towns with Acclamations.

THIS Englishman went on to say, you seemed at present to flag under a Satire of Success, as if you wanted Misfortune as a necessary Vice-situde. Yet, alas! though Men have but a cold Relish of Prosperity, quick is the Anguish of the contrary Fortune. He proceeded to make Comparisons of Times, Seasons, and great Incidents. After which he grew too learned for my Understanding, and talked of Hanno the Carthaginian, and his irreconcileable Hatred to the glorious Commander Hannibal. Hannibal, said he, was able to march to Rome it self, and brought that ambitious People, which designed no less than the Empire of the World, to sue for Peace in the most abject and servile Manner; when Faction at Hanno detracted from the Glory of his Actions, and after many Artifices at last prevailed with the Senate to recal him from the midst of his Victories, and in the very Instant when he was to reap the Benefit of all his Toils, by reducing the then common Enemy of all Nations, which had Liberty, to Reason. When Hannibal heard the Message of the Carthaginian Senators who were sent to recal him, he was moved with a generous and disdainful Sorrow, and is reported to have said, Hannibal then must be conquered, not by the Arms of the Romans, whom he has often put to Flight, but by the Envy and Detraction of his Countrymen. *Nr shall Scipio triumph so much in his Fall as Hanno, who will smile to have pursued the Ruin of Hannibal, tho' attended with the Fall of Carthage.*

I am, SIR, &c.

PASQUIN.

Will's

Will's Coffee-House, June 19.

THE RE is a sensible Satisfaction in observing the Countenance and Action of the People on some Occasions. To gratify my self in this Pleasure, I came hither with all Speed this Evening with an Account of the Surrender of Doway. As soon as the Battel-Criticks heard it, they immediately drew some Comfort, in that it must have cost us a great deal of Men. Others are so negligent of the Glory of their Country, that they went on in their Discourse on the full House which is to be at Othello on Thursday; and the Curiosity they should go with to see Wilks play a Part so very different from what he had ever before appeared in, together with the Expectation that was raised in the gay Part of the Town on that Occasion.

THIS universal Indolence and Inattention among us to Things that concern the Publick, made me look back, with the highest Reverence on the glorious Instances in Antiquity, of a contrary Behaviour in the like Circumstances. Henry English, upon observing the Room so little roused on the News fell into the same Way of Thinking. How unlike, said he, Mr. Bickerstaff, are we to the old Romans? There was not a Subject of their State but thought himself as much concerned in the Honour of his Country, as the first Officer of the Commonwealth. How do I admire the Messenger, who ran with a Thor in his Foot to tell the News of a Victory to the Senate! He had not Leisure for his private Pain, till he had expressed his publick Joy; nor could he suffer as a Man, till he had triumphed as a Roman.

Q. 6. What is the best way to get rid of a bad cold?

Answer. If you have a cold, you should drink a glass of warm water, and a small quantity of tea, and a small quantity of sugar, and a small quantity of honey.

Qua regio in terris nostri non plena laboris? Virg.

Qua regio in terris nostri non plena laboris? Virg.

No 188. Thursday, June 22. 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 21.

I WAS this Morning looking over my Letters that I have lately received from my several Correspondents; some of which referring to my late Papers, I have laid aside, with an Intent to give my Reader a Sight of them. The first criticises upon my Green-house, and is as follows:

Mr. Bickerstaff, South-Wales, June 7.

THIS Letter comes to you from my Orangery, which I intend to reform as much as I can, according to your ingenious Model, and shall only beg of you to communicate to me your Secret of preserving Grass-plots in a cover'd Room; for in the Climate where my Country-Seat lies, they require Rain and Dews as well as Sun and fresh Air, and cannot live upon sub fine Food as your Sifted Weather. I must likewise desire you to write over your Green-house the following Motto;

Hic ver perpetuum, atq; alienis mensibus æstas.

Instead of your

O! Quis me gelidis sub montibus Hæmi Sistat, & ingenti ramorum protegat umbra?

Which, under Favour, is the Panting of one in Summer after cool Shades, and not of one in Winter after a Summer-house. The rest of your Plan is very beautiful; and

and that your Friend who has so well described it, may enjoy it many Winters, is the hearty Wish of,
His and your unknown, &c.

THIS Oversight of a Grass-plot in my Friend's Green-house, puts me in Mind of a like Inconsistency in a celebrated Picture, where Moses is represented as striking a Rock, and the Children of Israel quenching their Thirst at the Waters that flow from it, and run through a beautiful Landskip of Groves and Meadows, which could not flourish in a Place where Water was to have been found only by a Miracle.

THE next Letter comes to me from a Kentish Yeoman, who is very angry with me for my Advice to Parents, occasioned by the Amours of Sylvia and Philander, as related in my Paper, N^o 185.

"Squire Bickerstaff,
I DON'T know by what Chance one of your Tatlers is got into my Family, and has almost turned the Brain of my eldest Daughter Winifred, who has been so undutiful as to fall in Love of her own Head, and tells me a foolish Heathen Story that she has read in your Paper to perswade me to give my Consent. I am too wise to let Children have their own Wills in a Business like Marriage. It is a Matter in which neither I my self, nor any of my Kindred, were ever bounoured. My Wife and I never pretended to love one another like your Sylvia's and Philanders; and yet if you saw our Fire-side, you would be satisfied we are not always a squabbling. For my Part, I think that where Man and Woman come together by their own good Liking, there is so much Fondling and Fooling, that it binders young People from minding their Business. I must therefore desire you to change your Note, and instead of advising us old Folks, who perhaps have more Wit than your self, to let Sylvia know, that she ought to act like a dutiful Daughter, and marry the Man that she does not care for. Our great Grandmothers were all bid to marry first, and Love would come afterwards; and I don't see why their Daughters should follow their own Inventions. I am resolved Winifred shan't.

Yours &c.

THIS Letter is a natural Picture of ordinary Contracts, and of the Sentiments of those Minds that lie under a Kind of intellectual Rusticity. This trifling Occasion made me run over in my Imagination the many Scenes I have observed of the married Condition, wherein the Quintessence of Pleasure and Pain are represented as they accompany that State, and no other. It is certain, there are a Thousand Thousand like the above-mentioned Yemmar, and his Wife, who are never highly pleased or distast'd in their whole Lives: But when we consider the more informed Part of Mankind, and look upon their Behaviour, it then appears that very little of their Time is indifferent, but generally spent in the most anxious Vexation, or the highest Satisfaction. Shakespear has admirably represented both the Aspects of this State in the most excellent Tragedy of Othello. In the Character of Desdemona, he runs through all the Sentiments of a virtuous Maid, and a tender Wife. She is captivated by his Virtue; and faithful to him, as well from that Motive, as Regard to her own Honour. Othello is a great and noble Spirit, misled by the Villany of a false Friend to suspect her Innocence, and resents it accordingly. When after the many Instances of Passion the Wife is told her Husband is jealous, her Simplicity makes her incapable of believing it, and say, after such Circumstances as would drive another Woman into Distraction,

I think the Sun where he was born
Drew all such Humours from him.

THIS Opinion of him is so just, that his noble and tender Heart beats it self to Pieces before he can affront her with the Mention of his Jealousy; and owns, this Suspicion has blotted out all the Sense of Glory and Happiness which before it was possessed with, when he laments himself in the warm Allusions of a Mind accustomed to the Entertainments so very different from the Pangs of Jealousy and Revenge. How moving is his Sorrow when he cries out as follows !

*I had been happy, if the general Camp,
Pioneers and all, had tasted her sweet Body,
So I had nothing known. Oh now ! for ever Farewel the tranquil Mind ! Farewel Content !
Farewel the plumed Troops, and the big Wars,
That make Ambition Virtue ! Oh Farewel !
Farewel the neighing Steed and the shrill Trump,
The Spirit stirring Drum, th' Ear piercing Fife ;
The Royal Banner, and all Quality, Pride, Pomp and Circumstance of glorious War !
And oh ye Mortal Engines ! whose rude Terrors
Th' Immortal Jove's dread Clam'urs counterfeit, Farewel ! Othello's Occupation's gone.*

I believe I may venture to say, There is not in any other Part of Shakespear's Works more strong and lively Pictures of Nature than in this. I shall therefore steal incognito to see it, out of Curiosity to observe how Wilks and Cibber touch those Places where Betterton and Sandford so very highly excelled. But now I am got into a Discourse of Acting, with which I am so professedly pleased, I shall conclude this Paper with a Note I have just received from the two ingenious Friends, Mr. Penketbman and Mr. Bullock.

FINDING by your Paper, N^o 182. that you are drawing Parallels between the greatest Actors of the Age ; as you have already begun with Mr. Wilks, and and Mr. Cibber, we desire you would do the same Justice to your bumble Servants, William Bullock, and William Penkethman.

FOR the Information of Posterity, I shall comply with this Letter, and set these two great Men into such a Light as Sallust has placed his Cato and Cesar.

Mr. William Bullock and Mr. William Penkethman are of the same Age, Profession and Sex. They both distinguish themselves in a very particular Manner under the Discipline of the Crab-tree, with this only Difference, That Mr. Bullock has the most agreeable Squawl, and Mr. Penkethman the more graceful Shrug. Penkethman devours a cold Chick with great Applause; Bullock's Talent lies chiefly in Sparagras. Penkethman is very dextrous at conveying himself under a Table; Bullock is no less active at jumping over a Stick. Mr. Penkethman has a great deal of Money, but Mr. Bullock is the taller Man.

Eft in juvenis, eft in equis patrum, vix illa I Virtus; nec imbellem fruores. Et radio vix ni sidi Progenerant aquile columbam. Hor.

N^o 189. Saturday, June 24, 1710.

From my own Apartment, June 23.

HAVING lately turned my Thoughts upon the Consideration of the Behaviour of Parents to Children in the great Affair of Marriage, I took much Delight in turning over a Bundle of Letters which a Gentleman's Steward in the Country had sent me some Time ago. This Parcel is a Collection of Letters written by the Children

dren of the Family (to which he belongs) to their Father, and contain all the little Passages of their Lives, and the new Idea's they received as their Years advanced. There is in them an Account of their Diversions as well as their Exercises; and what I thought very remarkable, is, That two Sons of the Family, who now make considerable Figures in the World, gave Omens of that Sort of Character which they now bear, in the first Rudiments of Thought which they shew in their Letters. Were one to point out a Method of Education, one could not, methinks, frame one more pleasing or improving than this; where the Children get an Habit of communicating their Thoughts and Inclinations to their best Friend with so much Freedom, that he can form Schemes for their future Life and Conduct from an Observation of their Tempers, and by that Means be early enough in chusing their Way of Life, to make them forward in some Art or Science at an Age when others have not determined what Profession to follow. As to the Persons concerned in this Packet I am speaking of, they have given great Proofs of the Force of this Conduct of their Father, in the Effect it has had upon their Lives and Manners. The Elder, who is a Scholar, shewed from his Infancy a Propensity to polite Studies, and has made a suitable Progress in Literature; but his Learning is so well woven into his Mind, that from the Impressions of it, he seems rather to have contracted an Habit of Life, than Manner of Discourse. To his Books he seems to owe a good Oeconomy in his Affairs, and a Complacency in his Manners, though in others that Way of Education has commonly a quite different Effect. The Epistles of the other Son are full of Accounts of what he thought most remarkable in his Reading. He sends his Father for News the last noble Story he had read. I observe, he is particularly touched with the Conduct of Cœratus, who plotted his own Death,

Death, because the Oracle had said, If he were not killed, the Enemy should prevail over his Country. Many other Incidents in his little Letters give Omens of a Soul capable of generous Undertakings; and what makes it the more particular, is, That this Gentleman had, in the present War, the Honour and Happiness of doing an Action for which only it was worth coming into the World. Their Father is the most intimate Friend they have, and they always consult him rather than any other, when any Error has happened in their Conduct through Youth and Inadvertency. The Behaviour of this Gentleman to his Sons, has made his Life pass away with the Pleasures of a second Youth; for as the Vexations which Men receive from their Children hasten the Approach of Age, and double the Force of Years; so the Comforts which they reap from them, are Balm to all other Sorrows, and disappoint the Injuries of Time. Parents of Children repeat their Lives in their Offspring, and their Concern for them is so near, that they feel all their Sufferings and Enjoyments as much as if they regarded their own proper Persons. But it is generally so far otherwise, that the common Rage of Squires in this Kingdom use their Sons as Persons that are waiting only for their Funerals, and Spies upon their Health and Happiness; as indeed they are by their own making them such. In Cases where a Man takes the Liberty after this Manner to reprehend others, it is commonly said, Let him look at Home. I am sorry to own it; but there is one Branch of the House of the Bickerstaffs, who have been as erroneous in their Conduct this Way as any other Family whatsoever. The Head of this Branch is now in Town, and has brought up with him his Son and Daughter (who are all the Children he has) in order to be put some Way into the World, and see Fashions. They are both very ill bred Cubs; and having lived together from their Infancy without without Knowledge of the Distinctions and Decencies that are proper to be paid to each other's Sex, they squabble like two Brothers. The Father is one of those who knows no better, than that all Pleasure is Debauchery, and imagines, when he sees a Man become his Estate, that he will certainly spend it. This Branch are a People who never had among them one Man eminent either for Good or Ill; however, have all along kept their Heads just above Water, nor by a prudent and regular Oeconomy, but by Expedients in the Matches they have made into their House. When one of the Family has, in the Pursuit of Foxes, and in the Entertainment of Clowns, run out the third Part of the Value of his Estate, such a Spendthrift has dressed up his eldest Son, and married what they call a good Fortune, who has supported the Father as a Tyrant over them, during his Life, in the same House or Neighbourhood. The Son in Succession has just taken the same Method to keep up his Dignity, till the Mortgages he has eat and drank himself into, have reduced him to the Necessity of sacrificing his Son also, in Imitation of his Progenitor. This had been for many Generations the whole that had happened in the Family of Sam. Bickerstaff till the Time of my present Cousin Samuel, the Father of the young People we have just now spoken of.

Samuel Bickerstaff, Esq; is so happy, as that by several Legacies from distant Relations, Deaths of Maiden-Sisters, and other Instances of good Fortune, he has, besides his real Estate, a great Sum of ready Money. His Son at the same Time knows he has a good Fortune, which the Father cannot alienate, though he strives to make him believe he depends only on his Will for Maintenance. Tom is now in his Nineteenth Year, Mrs. Mary in her Fifteenth. Cousin Samuel, who understands no one Point of good Behaviour as it regards all the rest of the World, is an exact

Criticick

Critick in the Dress, the Motion, the Looks and Gestures of his Children. What adds to their Misery, is, That he is excessively fond of them, and the greatest Part of their Time is spent in the Presence of this nice Observer. Their Life is one continued Constraint. The Girl never turns her Head, but she is warned not to follow the proud Minxes of the Town. The Boy is not to turn Fop, or be quarrelsome; at the same Time not to take an Affront. I had the good Fortune to dine with him to Day, and heard his fatherly Table Talk as we sat at Dinner, which, if my Memory does not fail me, for the Benefit of the World, I shall set down as he spoke it, which was much as follows, and may be of great Use to those Parents who seem to make it a Rule, That their Children's Turn to enjoy the World is not to commence, till they themselves have left it.

NOW Tom, I have bought you Chambers in the Inns of Courts. I allow you to take a Walk once or twice a Day round the Garden. If you mind your Business, you need not study to be as great a Lawyer as Coke upon Littleton. I have that that will keep you; but be sure you keep an exact Account of your Linen. Write down what you give out to your Laundress, and what she brings home again. Go as little as possible to the other End of the Town; but if you do, come Home early. I believe I was as sharp as you for your Ears, and I had my Hat snatched off my Head coming Home late at a Stop by St. Clement's Church, and I don't know from that Day to this who took it. I do not care if you learn to fence a little, for I would not have you to be made a Fool of. Let me have an Account of every Thing every Post; I am willing to be at that Charge, and I think you need not spare your Pains. As for you, Daughter Molly, don't mind one Word that is said to you in London, for it is only for your Money.

The END of the Third Volume.

89.
and their em, t in life
ver low t to ime
e to ble
no-ld, ch
Peir to el

the or Bu-as u;
en-nd
so ne rs, me
it re ou see, u, id

THE TATLER.

AN

INDEX

TO THE TATLERS.

VOL. III.

A.

A BSURDITY, its Importunity and Folly. Page	254
— It resembles Impudence.	ibid.
Advertisement, of a Play, called Love for Love, to be acted for Mr. Dogget's Benefit.	31
— Of Pasquin and Morforio.	79
— Of the Silent Woman, for the Benefit of Mr. Eastcourt.	80
— To the Lady who chose Mr. Bickerstaff for her Valatine.	113
	44

The INDEX.

Advertisement concerning the Wheters near the Royal Exchange.	Page 116
— About New Bedlam.	117
— To all such as delight in soft Lines.	137
— To some Mignight Rakes.	138
— About Ladies wrought Shoes and Slippers.	ibid.
— To his Correspondent in Scotland.	143
— From a well behaved young Gentleman in Cornhill.	147
— Of the Sale of a Bass-Viol, by Way of Lottery.	148
— Of walking Pictures, sold by Auction.	252, 271
— To Philander, upon his Letter to Clarinda.	266
— Of a Stage-Coach and Dancing Shoes.	313
— Concerning two Letters sent to Mr. Bickerstaff.	339
Aeneas, his Descent into the Empire of Death.	186
— His Adventures there.	287, &c.
Aesop, a Fable of his, applied upon the Receipt of a Letter sent to Mr. Bickerstaff.	6
Afflictions imaginary often prove the most insupportable.	148, &c.
Agamemnon, his Invective against the Female Sex.	178
Age, the Glory of the present Age, in Relation to England.	75
Album Græcum prescribed to a sick Dog.	34, 35
Allegories profitable to the Mind, in the same Manner as Hunting to the Body.	153
The Application of an Allegorical Fable out of Homer.	154
Ambition, what Age of Man most addicted to it.	26
— In the Good it becomes true Honour.	ibid.
— The Effects of Ambition.	336
— The Foundation of it.	ibid.
Anticyra, an Island, assigned by the Romans as an Habitation for Madmen.	54
— The Product of it.	55
— Compared to Montpellier.	ibid.
Antiochus, in Love with his Mother-in-Law.	334

THE DUN DEX.

Apology for great Men in the conferring of their Favours.
Page 255.

Aristeus, his great Mastery over himself. 291

Arthur (King) the first that ever sat down to a whole Roasted Ox. 157

Athenians, an Instance of the publick Spirit, and Virtue of that People. 39

Atavite, what Age of Man most deserved to live. 26

— Its Region described. 44

— Its Temple, Attendants and Officers. 45

— An Effect of the Author's Discourse upon it. 52

Audience, what ought to be the Behaviour of an Audience at the Representation of a Play. 38

Autumn (Lady) her Behaviour as Church. 125

— will not be esteemed (B. Marshall) negligent

Bagpipe, to what Persons applied in Conversation. 183

— A Club of Bagpipes. 185

Bacon (Sir Francis) his Legacy. 92

Ballance, a Merchant, his Treatment of a young Lawyer that endeavoured to debauch his Wife. 105

Barbary, an Attendant on Tyranny. 836

Barnes (Joshua) his new Edition of Homer. 138

Bassoon, the Part it bears in Conversation. 182

— where most likely to be found. 184

— With what other Instrument to be matched. 207

— Exposed to Sale by Way of Lottery. 248

Bawbles, by whom brought first to Perfection. 133

Bedlam (New) to be erected by Mr. Bickerstaff in Moorfields. 59, 281

— For whom designed. 64, 281

— The Distribution of its Apartments. 286

Beef-Eaters (the Order of.) 158

Belvidera, her Characters. 58

Betterton (Mr.) his Funeral. 249

Bickerstaff (Isaac) his Reception at the Playhouse. 38

— His Advice to an Audience. — ibid.

— His Speech to Poverty. — ibid. — 47

— He purchaseth a Ticket in the State Lottery. 48

— His Proposal for a New-Bedlam. 53

Bick-

The INDEX.

Bickerstaff (Isaac) his Description of a Prude and Coquet. Page 58
— His Reflections upon a Visit to Bedlam. 64
— His Entertainment at a Friend's House, who eats well. 159
— His Maxim. 161
— Censor of Great Britain. 227, &c.
Bickerstaff (Margery) the Methods used to divert her Thoughts from Marriage. 173
Bickerstaff (Samuel) his Advice to his Son and Daughter. 352
Black-Horse Ordinary in Holborn, an Adventure there. 103
Bladder and String, a modern Musick; how applied. 184
Bourignon (Madam de) Foundress of the Pietists. 59
— Her extraordinary Gift or Talent. ibid.
Bribery, a Solicitor in the Temple of Avarice. 45

C.

Cadaroque, the Meaning of the Word, and to whom applied by the Indian Kings. 288
Cambray (Archbishop of) Author of Telemachus. 297
Canes, different in their Kind and Value. 134
Castabella, an eminent Prude. 58
Cebes, his Table. 222
Censor, a Comparison between the Roman and British Censor. 228
Censurers, why punished more severely after Death. 199
Cervantes (Michael) his discerning Spirit. 298
Cestus of Venus described. 154
Chanticleer (Job) his Petition to Mr. Bickerstaff. 95
Charles, the Toyman, his great Genius. 133
— A nice Judge of Canes. 134
— His new Edition of Gold Snuff-Boxes. 135
Chicken, a modern Diet. 158
Cibber, the Comedian, his Talent in Acting. 321

The INDEX.

Cicero, his Letters to his Wife.	Page 213
City Politicians reproved by Mr. Bickerstaff.	196
Coaches to be taxed.	140
What Coaches to be called in by Mr. Bickerstaff.	142
Cobler upon Ludgate-Hill, his Contrivance to gratify his Pride.	62
Colchester (the Corporation of) their Offer to Mr. Bickerstaff.	21
Comma (Mrs.) a subtle Casuist.	245
Command of our Temper, its Excellence.	289
Commerce, a Goddess in the Region of Liberty.	225
Commonwealth (Genius of) seated on the Left Hand of the Goddess of Liberty.	224
— Described.	ibid.
Competency, a Guide in the Temple of Avarice.	45
Complacency, a Guard to one of the Gates belonging to Hymen's Temple.	29
Complainers, their Importunity.	148
Contention, her Garb and Station.	30
Contradiction, an Occasion of it.	270
Coquets (Labyrinth of.)	28
— A mischievous Sett among Women.	58
— A Coquet compared to a Prude.	59
— A Story of a Coquet Widow.	60
— A Coquet compared to a Kit.	204
Corruption, an Officer in the Temple of Avarice.	45
Country, the modern Entertainments and Diversions in it.	258
— The true Pleasures of a Country Life.	261
— The Character of a true Country Gentleman.	260
Courant, in what Manner it differs from the other News-Papers.	301
Credit in the City, how obtained.	290
Critic described.	241
Cupid, a Lap-Dog, dangerously ill.	33

D.

Daniel, the Historian, the Provisions taxed in his Time.	158
--	-----

The INDEX.

St. David's Day, why observed by Mr. Bickerstaff. 222

Dawks (Icabod) his double Capacity of Bellman and Historian. 301

Dead Men dressed in Lace, &c. contrary to the Act. 16, 17

— A Letter from one to Mr. Bickerstaff. 17

— Another resuscitated. 18

— What Part of Mankind called dead by Mr. Bickerstaff. 281

Dedications; the Difference betwixt ancient and modern Dedications. 294

Degeneracy of the present Age. 323

Delicates (false) their contradictory Rules. 159

Demosthenes, his Speech to the Athenians. 325

Destinies, their present to Jupiter. 151

— The Speech of one of them to that God. 152

Diet, the Difference between our modern Diet, and that of our Ancestors. 157

Dimple (Lady) her good Breeding. 245

Discourse, different Talents in it. 181

— How shadowed out. Ibid. &c.

Discretion, a Guard to one of Hymen's Gates. 29

Dodwell, some Account of his Epistolatory Discourse, from Pasquin. 340

Doggett the Comedian, his Letters to Mr. Bickerstaff. 31

— His great Civilities to him. 138

Dover-Cliff, described by Shakespear. 15, 16

Dream, of the Band of Lovers. 26, 27, &c.

— Of the Temple of Virtue. 42, 43

— Of Honour. 43

— Of Vanity. Ibid. 43

— Of Virtue. Ibid. 44

— Of Avarice. 45, &c.

— Of Jupiter and the Destinies. 150, &c.

— Of the Alpes, &c. 222, &c.

Drum, who may be called Drums in Conversation. 181

— With what other Instrument matched. 207

Dulci-

The INDEX.

Dulcimer, a Romantick Instrument, of melancholy Sweetness. Page 206

Dutch, their Manner of expressing their Wit. 71

E.

Education, the wrong Method of it. 349

Elpenor, his untimely Death a Warning to Drunkards. 174

Elysium, the Joys of it, as described by the Author of Telemachus. 200

England, the Figure it makes at present. 76

Equipage, its Expences and Affectation censured. 139, &c.

Esquires, for what Reasons professed Enemies to Mr. Bickerstaff. 3

Esteem, how distinguished from Credit. 290

Eucrates, his Character. 289

— The Effects of the natural Softness of his Temper. ibid.

Eupratelus, his mischievous Present. 173

Extortion (the Office of) in the Temple of Avarice. 46

F.

Female Consort, its Musick described. 203, &c.

Fidget (Lady) a general Visitant. 283

— The Occasion of her Madness. ibid.

Flageolet, an Instrument in the Female Consort. 204

— How esteemed by that Sex. ibid.

Flattery of Women, its ill Consequences. 118

— Instanced in Flavia. 120

Flavia, a Coquet, her Interview with Mirtillo, the Ogler, at the Play. 145

Flea, (a Skeleton of.) 24

Flute, its extraordinary Effects in a Female Consort. 207

— With what other Instrument mat bed. 207

Folio (Tom) a Becker in Learning; some Account of him. 208

— His Visit to Mr. Bickerstaff. 209

— His Criticisms upon Virgil. ibid.

Folio

The I N D E X.

Folio (Tom) his Letter to Mr. Bickerstaff.	Page 221
Fortitude, when most conspicuous.	291
Fortune, the Way to be above her.	263
— An Emblem of that Goddess.	265
— Addressed to by Mr. Bickerstaff.	266
Fraud, an Officer in the Temple of Avarice.	46
Free-Thinkers, a Distinction between the ancient and modern Free-Thinkers.	99, 100
Friendship, the Tenderness of it.	272
Funerals, our Behaviour in them discovers the inward State of our Minds.	317
Future State described by Homer.	174, &c.
— By Virgil.	186, &c.
— From whence the Happiness and Torments of it arise, according to the Platonists.	191
— Described by the Author of Telemachus.	197, &c.
— The Benefits arising from the Prospects of Futurity.	201

G.

Gascon, an Adventure of a Gascon.	60
Ghost of Anticlea, Ulysses's Mother.	175
Ghosts, of Beauties.	177
— Of Heroes.	178, &c. 188
— Of the Damned.	180
— Of Lovers.	190
— Of Tyrants.	198, 199
— Of good Princes.	200
Glare (Will) his Passion for Admiration.	194
Glory (true) inseparable from Merit.	296
Good-nature often unseasonable.	289
Grandeur, wherein it truly consists.	263
Grief, the Benefit of it.	313, 314
Gyges, his Ring.	114
— Allegorically applied.	115

H.

Handkerchief (Religious) in England.	341
Hannibal the Carthaginian, his Sec's upon his being recalled out of Italy.	342
Harp

The INDEX.

Harpsicord, the Excellency of its Musick. Page 184
— With what Instrument match'd. 207

Hart, the Actor, his Observation. 113

Hautboy, a proper Instrument in a Female Consort. 203
— Match'd with the Harpsicord. 207

History, the Usefulness of it. 12

— Its Variety. 75

Homer, his Description of a future State. 175, &c.

Horace, his Excellencies considered under different Views. 279

Hornpipe, its Part in a Female Consort. 205
— With what other Instruments matched. 207

Husbands, ill ones private Tyrants. 161

An ill Husband the greatest Affliction that can happen to a Woman. 163
— What makes a Man so. ibid.

Hymen, the God of Marriage, placed as a Guard at the Gate of the Temple of virtuous Love. 29
— His Habit. ibid.

Hymn to the suprem Being, what. 22

I.

Jambee, the best Sort of Canes. 134

Idolatry inverted, in what Manner. 62

Jealousy, her Garments, Complexion, and Office. 30

Jenny, Mr. Bickerstaff's Sister, her Visit and Behaviour. 135
— Her Character. 331

Jesuits, their Discipline. 256

Imperceptibles (a natural History of). 23, 24

Incumbent, the Difference between a Landlord and Incumbent. 259

Indian Kings, their Return to the Civilities of their Landlord. 268, 269

Infrigidation (the Gift of). 59

Infipids (the Order of). 246

Juno, her Method to regain Jupiter's Affection. 152, 154

K.

Kettle-Drum and Kit, Instruments in a Female Consort. 305, 306

The INDEX.

Kettle-Drum, matched. Page 307
Kings (wicked) their Punishment in a future State.

199

L.

Lamb, a modern Diet. 158
Landlord, the Difference between a Landlord and an Incumbent. 259
Lawgiver, the Instruction of a Lawgiver, in Relation to unmarried Women. 328 Letter to Isaac Bickerstaff from a Well-wisher. 6
— From one who designs to be an Adventurer in the Lottery. 51
— From John Hammond upon the Recovery of his Watch. 52
— From a Fortune-Hunter. 66
— To Mopsa in Sheer-Lane. 67
— From Statira. 69
— From Strephon. 124
— From Dorothy Drumstick. ibid.
— From Lidia. 125
— From Chloe. 126
— About Whetters. 128
— From his Valentine. 130
— From his Kinsman in Behalf of Charles Bubble-boy. 132
— From a young Gentleman in Cornhil. 147
— From one upon Wedlock. 166
— From Nich Humdrum. 185
— From the Upholster. 219
— From Isabella Kit. 220, 257
— From Tom Folio. 221
— From his Cousin Frank Bickerstaff. 261
— From I. B. 292
— From T. S. out of Cornwall. 304
— From Silvia. 332
— About a Green-house. 344
— From a Yeoman of Kent. 345
— From Mr. Bickerstaff to Chloe. 126
— To his Brother. 136

Letter

The INDEX.

Letter from Pliny to Calphurnia. — Page 164, 165
— From Cicero to Terentia. 213, &c.
— From a Corporal to his Wife. 240
Levity, her Post. 30
Liberty, its Region described. 223, &c.
Lightning in Opera's, of what it must be made. 118
— The true perfumed, where sold. ibid.
Love, the Effects of Disappointments in it. 333
Lovemore, a happy Husband. 169
Lovers (the Band of.) 26
Lucretia, her Story. 14
Lust, in whom virtuous Love. 26
Lute, the Part it bears in a Consort or Conversation. 181
— Where to be found. 184
— With what other Instrument matched. 207
Lydia, a Coquet, her Character. 57, 58

M.

Machiavel, his Office. 24
— Author of a mischievous Sect. 338
Madmen, who. 53
— Whither sent by the Romans. 54
— Mr. Bickerstaff's intended Edifice for their Reception and Cure. 55, 56
— The first Sympton of Madness. 283
Maids of Honour, their Allowance of Beef for their Breakfast in Queen Elizabeth's Time. 158 Marriage, an Account of it in a Letter to Mr. Bickerstaff. 166
— A Table of Marriage. 207
— By whom ridicul'd. 212
— Some Reasons for the Misfortunes accompanying it. 345, 346
Marrow-bone and Clever, a modern musical Instrument. 184
Matchlock, a Member of the Club at the Trumpet in Sheer-Lane. 86
Mechanicks in Learning, 280
Microscopes, their Use. 21
Misnucio, his Character. 269
Minucio

The INDEX.

Minucio, his Spirit of Contradiction.	Page 269
Minute Philosopher, who.	200, &c.
Mirtillo, the Ogler, his Interview with Flavia at an Opera.	145, &c.
Mites, a Dissection of one.	24
Modely (Tom), his Knowledge of the Fashion.	245
— Head of the Order of the Insipids.	246
Monarchy, the Genius of it described in the Region of Liberty.	224
Mopsa, her good Fortune in the Lottery prognosticated by Mr. Bickerstaff.	50, 51
— A Letter to her.	67
— In great Danger of her Life, and for what.	149
Mourning, a proper Dress for a beautiful Lady.	170

N.

Nature, its Prevalency.	271
Nicolini, his Excellencies on the Stage.	1, 2
Northern Parts fruitful in Bagpipes.	183
Notch (Sir Jeoffrey), a Member of Mr. Bickerstaff's Club.	86
Novelists, the Effect of their Writings.	299

O.

Oglers complained of by the Ladies.	144
— The Danger of them.	ibid. &c.
Opera, a Ground in the Female Consort.	202
Oppression, an Attendant on Tyranny.	226
Orator, in a Night-Gown and laced Cap.	337

P.

Parsimony, a Favourite in the Temple of Avarice.	45
Partridge, (John) his Letter to Mr. Bickerstaff.	17
— His Symptoms of Resuscitation.	18
Pasquin, his Letters to Mr. Bickerstaff.	12, 339
— An Account of him to prevent Mistakes.	79
Passing Bells, why so called.	184
Passion the Surprise of it fatal,	273
— A tragical Instance of it.	274
Peasants,

The INDEX.

Peasants, who properly so.	Page 259
Pedants, their several Classes.	310
Pedantry compared to Hypocrisy.	241
Persecution, an Attendant on Tyranny.	216
Petitions, to Mr. Bickerstaff from Job Chanticleer.
— From Deborah Hark, and others.	95
— From the Parish of Goatham.	107
— From Sarah Lately.	130
— And Isabella Kit.	256
Petticowat, its Cause tried.	257
— How long to be worn.	6 to 11
Philosophy, the Excellence of it.	264
Platonists, their Opinion.	291
Plenty, a Goddess in the Region of Liberty.	225
Pliny, his Compliment, and Advice to Trajan.	75
Pluto, his Palace and Throne.	298
Politicians uncapable of Reproof.	117
Pope sick of the Tooth-Ach.	73
— His Modesty overcome.	73, 74
Post-Man, his extraordinary Talent.	299
Poverty, a terrible Spectre in the Temple of Avarice.	46
Powell, (Mr.) his Disingenuity.	2
Present of Wine to Mr. Bickerstaff.	155
Pretenders to Poetry a kind of Madmen.	282
Pride, an Instance of it in a Cobler on Ludgate-Hill.	62
— Its Cause, and Consequence.	63, 65
— Makes Men odious	336
— Creates Envy.	338
— Found only in narrow Souls	ibid.
Prim, (Penelope) her Petition.	19
Prude distinguished from a Coquet.	59
— Bears the Part of a Virginal in a Female Consort.	204
Prudence in Women the same with Wisdom in a Man.
Punch Rival to Nicolini.	273
— His ill Manners to Mr. Bickerstaff.	2
— His Original.	3
Puppets in Mr. Powell's Show, from whence taken.	Ibid.
	Puzzle-

The INDEX.

Puzzlepost, (Ned) how he came to be improved in Writing. Page 133

Q.

Quality, its Weaknesses. 309, 310

Quixot, (Don) the first Symptoms of his Madness. 298

R.

Rayonſt, prejudicial to the Stomack. 159

Rapin, his Observations upon the English Theatre. 97

Rapine, an Attendant on Licentiousness. 226

Read, (Sir William) an eminent Oculif. 146

Reading, the Exercise of the Mind. 153

Regulus, a great Instance of a publick Spirit. 326

Religious War. 195

Reptile (Dick), a Member of a Club in Sheer-Lane. 86

— His Character. Ibid.

— And Reflection upon the Abuse of Speech. 108

Reputation, how established. 337

Romans, an Instance of their generous Virtue. 39

Ruffs, wherein necessary. 20

— Recommended to be worn with the Eardinal. 21

Rural-Wise, Hunting-Horns in a Male Consort. 183

S.

Scævola, his great Fortitude. 296

Scandal, the universal Thirst after it. 237

Scotus, his Way of distinguishing Mankind. 279

Seneca, his Moderation in his Fortune. 264

Sex in Souls. 272

Sallow (Sir Timothy), Customer to Charles Bubble-boy. 134

Sheep-Biters, why a Term of Reproach. 168

Silence, significant on many Occasions. 89

— Instances of it. 90, 91

Sippet (Harry), an expert Wine-Brewer. 83

Snuff-Foxes, a new Edition of them. 135

Socrates

The INDEX.

Socrates, his Behaviour in the Athenian Theatre. Page 41.

— The Doctrines he laboured to inculcate into the Mind of the Ancients. 99.

Softly (Ned), a very pretty Poet. 292.

— His Sonnet. Ibid.

Speech, the Abuse of it. 198.

Stage or Theatre, the Conveniences of it. 308, &c.

Statira, her Letter to Mr. Bickerstaff. 69.

Stocking, the Custom of throwing it at a Wedding. 329.

Story-Tellers, the Bagpipes in Conversation. 183.

— Their Employment in Mr. Bickerstaff's Bedlam. 282.

Swearing, a Folly without any Temptation. 111.

Tale-Bearers, the Use of them in Mr. Bickerstaff's Bedlam. 286.

Tea, not used in Queen Elizabeth's Days. 157, 158.

Temple of Hymen.

— Of Lust. 30.

— Of Virtue. 43.

— Of Honour. Ibid.

— Of Vanity. 43.

— Of Avarice. 45.

Timoleon, his Discourse at the Grecian. 267.

Tintoret (Tom), a great Master in the Art of Colouring. 82.

Instances of it. Ibid.

Tiresias, his Advice to Ulysses. 176.

Title (Sir Timothy), a profound Critick. 242.

— His Indignation, and Discourse with his Mistress. Ibid.

Toasts, a new religious Order in England. 73.

Tories, a new religious Order in England. Ibid.

Toys by whom brought first into Fashion. 115.

Trumpet, what Sort of Men are the Trumpets in Conversation. 182.

— Where to be found. 184.

Tyranny commands an Army against the Region of Liberty. 226.

Tweezer-Cases, the best, where to be bought. 334.

V.

Varnish (Tom.) his Adventures.	Page 105
Veal, a modern Diet.	158
Vicissitude of humane Life.	262
Violins, who in Conversation.	182
— Where to be found.	184
— With what other Instrument match'd.	207
Violon, an Instrument in a Female Consort.	204
Ulysses, his Voyage to the Regions of the Dead.	175
— His Adventures there.	Ibid. & seq.
Upholders (Company of) their Civility to Mr. Bickerstaff.	38
Upholster, Mr. Bickerstaff's Neighbour, a great News-monger.	192
— Broke	193
— His Conversation with Mr. Bickerstaff in the Park.	Ibid. & seq.
— His early Visit to Mr. Bickerstaff.	10 217
— The Reason of it.	Ibid. &c.
— Much esteemed in Ally Coffee-houses.	10 299
— Carried to Bedlam.	10 303
Wags (the despicable Order of.)	330
Welch-Harp, an Instrument in a Female Consort.	205
— Matched with a Trumpet.	207
Whatters reproved.	16, 228
Whigs and Tories, religious Orders in England.	73
Wilks, the Comedian, his Excellencies.	321
Wine (a Present of to Mr. Bickerstaff.)	155, 318
Wine-Brewers, a Fraternity	79
— Try'd before Mr. Bickerstaff.	80
— J. B.'s Request to them.	84
Women, their ill Fancies in their Dress.	291

FINIS.

